HOUSE WRECKING DOWN TO A SCIENCE

We contract with builders, owners and architects for the wrecking of buildings—small or great—from top to curb.

Large forces of skilled workmen, under competent foremen, together with modern appliances and ample hauling facilities, permit quick work.

System in all branches reduces the bluster of wrecking to a minimum. Our methods provide safety to abutting property and but slight street encroachment.

We have handled as many as a dozen big contracts simultaneously during a single month.

We guarantee satisfaction and satisfy the architect, builder and owners as to terms.

Write us or call us up and we will have a representative with you promptly on appointment.

OUR DRYING PROCESS

METHOD

Fresh, cold, therefore dry air, enters from the outside through the Air Supply Pipe, into a receiving chamber, from there into the tubes surrounding the fire, ascends in a dry, heated state into the room, passes along the ceilings and walls, absorbs dampness from them, sinks down moisture laden, enters the apparatus, ascends after mixing with the coke gases into the outlet pipe for the smoke, and finally goes through the chimney or windows into the open air.

We have solved the problem of Drying-Out Buildings under Construction, in a Quick, Effective, Hygienic and Economical Manner.

Are Fire-Escapes Fire Traps?

Outside fire-escapes for crowded factory buildings (except where there could be a separate stairway from each floor which would not pass any windows) were properly condemned as worse than useless by experts testifying before the Factory Investigating Commission. The Fire Chief of this and every other city in this State where hearings were held united in this expression. They deprecated the recognition in building codes of these so-called "fire-escapes." They averred that they are really fire traps, not fire-escapes at all, having caused accidents and injuries, instead of preventing them. For example, in the Asch Building disaster, those who used the fire-escape were tumbled up on it.

For years experts have recognized that it is a misnomer to speak of these things as fire-escapes, and have advocated their abolition. Those who are engaged in planning cities beautiful have in mind buildings with no such unsightly excrescences.

Yet the new Fire Prevention Bureau of the Fire Department is literally plastering the fronts of buildings throughout the city with these fire traps! We had looked for modern instead of obsolete methods from this new Bureau.—H. F. J. Porter in "The Searchlight."

FUTURE SKYSCRAPERS.

Will Have but Few Features Entirely New—Theodore Starrett's Prophecy.

There is no reason why the giant building of future years may not be beautiful, even though it does its work well. It will be like a great ocean-going steamer, which is beautiful in an abstract way, although efficient, and to the understanding eye is far more picturesque than any old sailing vessel that ever sailed the seas. Ornamentation there will be, but it will be of a nature not to interfere with the form. The unfortunate notion that a building must be covered over with meaningless bumps and excrescences, a notion borrowed from foreigners, will be tabooed. Color will be used to produce the contrasts which the eye delights in.

I don't believe that the sort of building I am speaking about will have any overhanging cornice. One reason of this is that as the building becomes old the cornices crumble and drop off. This has happened occasionally and is likely to happen more and more, for the best type of skyscrapers are all very new. Hardly any of them are over 25 years old, and the really big ones, in New York at least, are less than a dozen years of age.

Aeronautic Platforms.

The tall building of the future, too, will, in the cities, have a tendency to uniform height, with roofs equipped with aeronautic platforms; for the development of the airship will exercise a tremendous influence upon all architecture in the next fifty years. There will probably be city regulations governing specific heights; so all buildings within certain areas will reach up, by means of these aeroplane landings, to this prescribed plane. The airship will also largely modify the roofs of great office buildings, upon which at present regular little settlements are built.

This aeroplane notion is coming faster than we think. Three years ago I allowed my imagination to run away with me on the subject of aeroplane stations on the tops of skyscrapers. Within a month the newspapers announced that the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, in Philadelphia was to have an aeroplane landing on its top. Whether the idea was ever carried out I don't know. When people get to entering the big buildings from the top there will be entrances there, too, as well as from the street. There will be reception halls at the top. Traffic will come at both ends of the building then.

In these upper reception rooms there will be no necessity for heavy pillars, such as characterize reception halls and rooms at the base of a building. The elaboration of roofs, too, will come into the scheme of things from this increased traffic through the air. Summer gardens will bloom. There will be pergolas and trellises. The tall building of the future will be very pleasant from the top.

Cooling Arrangements.

But viewing the great building in its economic aspect and returning to essentials as opposed to the outward form there is one great improvement in building, one which it has surprised me has not been made long ago. It is such a very obvious thing. It is the cooling of offices by artificial means on the same idea as that by which we now heat them. This will probably be one of the last reforms. You will regulate your "cool" as you now regulate your heat from your radiator.

The tendency of the great building of the future, too, as judged from its evolution in the past, will be to develop a huge machine of cleanliness. It will be a building hygienically as perfect as that of any hospital today, toward whose conditions the whole trend of modern building development is working. It will be a dustless place. All the corners at walls and floors and ceilings will be rounded. Useless, dust-collecting mouldings will be omitted and never will be missed. It is probable that the air issuing into it will be filtered and there will be assuredly some arrangement by which all impurities of air generated within it will be sucked out of it as quickly as such impurities are formed. Even now at the New York Municipal Lodging House there is such a mechanism.

Cities in Themselves.

The most interesting fact, however, in the great buildings that lie before us is that tendencies indicate that they will be cities in themselves. They will, for instance, group themselves about great transportation terminals, or indeed be transportation terminals, as the Hudson Terminal Building has already done, for within them will be all the forces practically that can supply civilized man with all his needs.

There will be a market which is an obvious thing to say, as a market has already arrived in the Hudson Terminal Building. This market will include all the supplies that are deemed necessary to commerce. The presence of banks will become a necessity. They will naturally be arranged on the street level immediately over the market, which may be underground. Then will come the offices for twenty-five or thirty tiers. Above this would naturally be expected the exchange and club concourse and elevator transfer. A couple of stories might be given over to this sort of business. * * *

For the future office building, of course, a roof garden would be essential. A country club in the city, too, is not a surprising thing when you view it in relation to the tall building of the future. There would certainly be tennis, a gymnasium and a swimming pool; though most of these things have been done already.

So the office building of the future is not so wonderful as it seems. For it will only, after all, represent a collection of human facilities which have individually, almost all, been included in one building or another at present in America. And even the aeroplane platform at the top is not such a long way off.—Theodore Starrett in "Building Management."

EXPLANATION OF TERMS USED AND RULES FOLLOWED IN COMPILING RECORDS.

Q. C. is an abbreviation for Quit Claim deed, i. e., a deed wherein all the right, title and interest of the grantor is conveyed omitting all covenants and warranty.

C. a G. means a deed containing Covenant against Grantor only, in which he covenants that he hath not done any act whereby the estate conveyed may be impeached, charged or encumbered.

B. & S. is an abbreviation for Bargain and Sale deed, wherein, although the seller makes no expressed consideration, he really grants or conveys the property for a valuable consideration, and thus impliedly claims to be the owner of it.

The street and avenue numbers given in these lists are, in all cases, taken from the insurance maps when they are not mentioned in the deeds. The numbers, it will occasionally be found, do not correspond with the existing ones, owing to there having been no official designation made of them by the Department of Public Works.

The first date is the date the deed was drawn. The second date is the date of filing same. When both dates are the same, only one is given. When the date of drawing is other than in the current year the stated year is given. When both the dates are in the same year the year follows the second date.

The figures in each conveyance, thus, 2:482—10, denote that the property mentioned is in section 2, block 482, lot 10.

It should also be noted in section and block numbers that the instrument as filed is strictly followed.

A $20,000—$30,000 indicates the assessed value of the property, the first figures being for the lot only and the second figures representing both lot and building. Letter P before second figure indicates that the property is assessed as in course of construction. Valuations are from the assessment roll of 1912.

T. S. preceding the consideration in a conveyance means that the deed or conveyance has been recorded under the Torrens System.

Flats and apartment houses are classified as tenements.

Residences as dwellings.

All Christian names, streets, avenues, states and months are abbreviated when possible, also in some instances names of Banks, Trusts and Insurance Companies.

The number in ( ) preceding the serial number to the right of the date line, at head of this page, is the Index number for the Checking Index.

The Star following names of street or avenue in the Bronx Conveyances, Leases and Mortgages indicates that the property recorded is in the annexed district, for which there is no section or block number.

BACHELOR APARTMENTS FOR WOMEN

Would it Pay to Build Them?—What Experts Say—What is Required—A Kitchenette, Bathroom and Built-in Furniture.

AN appeal has been made to the Record and Guide in behalf of a movement for more convenient and attractive living accommodations for bachelor women in New York City. Reference is made to that large class of young ladies who are in receipt of good salaries but who do not wish to lease, furnish and maintain an apartment of the ordinary type. They do not wish to accumulate furniture or to burden themselves with much housekeeping, but they feel a genuine need for small but artistic homes amid congenial surroundings —homes which can be rented almost entirely furnished for a sum within their means and yet sufficient to warrant the investment on the part of builders.

That teachers, nurses and business women in large numbers would welcome an opportunity to exchange present cheerless and inhospitable furnished rooms and boarding houses for more attractive homes, may be conceded, and the real question turns upon the type of apartment most suitable and whether it would pay as a business proposition.

The suggestion has been made that such an apartment should consist of one large room and a bathroom. There would then be in the living-room a sink, a gas or oil stove for cooking purposes and certain built-in furniture, together with all necessary cooking utensils; and bed-linen, towels and tea towels coming in weekly. This house should be situated in a refined neighborhood and have an artistic quality that would attract congenial tenants. Conceivably the building might also contain suites of two rooms and bath for married couples, without detracting from the qualities which would please well-to-do single women.

How She Would Like to Have It.

A young lady, when asked to describe the sort of apartment she would like best, said it would have a room about twenty-five or thirty feet long, and about fifteen feet wide, with windows on two sides. At one end there would be two doors, one opening into a large clothes closet and the other into a bathroom. In the living-room the bed would be built into the outer wall, with a strong iron frame folding up into the paneled siding. When closed, it would look like a bookcase or cupboard. She had seen this successfully done in other cities, but if it would not go in New York, then a couch would suffice.

All around the room there would be paneled wainscoting, topped with a shelf for books, photographs, bowls of flowers and what not. The wainscoting would contain a continuous set of shelves for books and other things. Near a window she would build a dainty desk, which could be managed by having the paneling drop forward on chains. The bathroom would be commodious, with a dressing table built in at one end, a pier glass above it and drawers beneath, and there would be numerous other drawers for collars, gloves, veils and other articles of apparel. The suite would then be complete with the exception of a table, chairs and rugs.

As a Business Proposition.

The Record and Guide has made some inquiries as to whether a house so planned would be an acceptable business proposition in the real estate field. The best opinion obtainable inclines to the negative, so far as the scheme relates to building a special type of apartments in Manhattan. In other boroughs, as in Brooklyn, with cheaper land values to contend with, and with possibly a more liberal allowance for rent than most women can afford, it seems to have been proven by some experience in that direction that the erection of bachelor apartments for single women having incomes of twelve hundred to two thousand dollars a year would be a fairly profitable business undertaking.

Hardly Possible in Manhattan.

The case was stated this week to an architect, builder and owner who would be most likely to understand its feasibility as a building proposition in Manhattan. This gentleman only a year ago completed the artistic duplex apartment house at No. 1 Lexington avenue, on the former site of the mansion of the late Henry W. Poor, fronting on Gramercy Park, which is in a neighborhood well known as an art center. This gentleman, Mr. Charles Buek, is a member of the Board of Examiners in the Building Department, which is a sort of court of last resort for architects and builders.

Mr. Buek's opinion was that bachelor apartments for single women dependent upon their earnings alone would not be profitable in what would be considered a good location in Manhattan.

"Kitchenettes would at once bring such a house within the purview of the Tenement House law," he said, "with its limitations and restrictions, and it is well known that apartment houses of the better class cannot be built profitably even now except on large plots one hundred feet square or more; and in such buildings, with elevator service, fifteen dollars per month per room is about the lowest profitable rate. And this presupposes a bathroom to every three or four or more rooms, instead of one to each living-room as in the proposed building.

"I do not believe that a bachelor apartment house for women as a new structure under existing laws could be made a financial success in any central location on Manhattan Island, such as women so situated would naturally desire. The many bathrooms, each required to have an outside window, would use up all the rentable space. The same difficulty is encountered in the model tenements, but it would be much more severely felt in the proposed building."

Possibilities in Alterations.

Mr. Buek, however, added that there are many old houses, built before these laws were passed, in the older sections of the city now unprofitable, which could be readily adapted to these purposes were it not for the fact that the requirements of the Tenement House law make any changes impossible without entire rebuilding. If such buildings could be replanned and modernized under the law applicable to hotels, with fireproof halls and stairs, they could undoubtedly be made to furnish cheerful, healthful and acceptable homes of the kind mentioned, which are otherwise impossible except by going to the outskirts of the city.

Against Built-In Furniture.

Walter B. Chambers, architect, 109 Broad street, was found to be of the opinion that a properly planned and managed building for the accommodation of bachelor women could be made a paying investment, and that there are neighborhoods in the Borough of Manhattan, as well as in Brooklyn and The Bronx, where such buildings could be located to advantage.

"They must be fireproof, but I would not advise built-in beds or other built-in furniture," explained Mr. Chambers. "Given the right size and location of site, the planning of the building is simple. The plan must be an elastic one, capable of providing apartments of different sizes, within certain limitations. The 'large living-room, bedroom, small kitchen, bathroom' type should be made to predominate, and the building as a whole, inside and out, should be given an air of distinction, through refinement of taste in decoration and absence of showiness, which would appeal at once to self-supporting women of refinement. As to the cost, good taste costs less than bad taste."

Possibly in Brooklyn.

The question of the feasibility of erecting houses for bachelor women in Brooklyn was put to Mr. David Porter, real estate broker and expert appraiser, of 189 Montague street, and it was found that in Brooklyn the speculative builder would find a different set of circumstances than in Manhattan. Mr. Porter considered the scheme feasible. In fact, something of the kind was already in being. He did not think, however, it would be a good proposition from a business standpoint to furnish such houses. Mr. Porter further said:

"Apartments of this kind should consist of a living-room, a bedroom, a kitchenette and bathroom, with closets, settees, buffets and such things built in, so as to avoid as much portable furniture as possible. Some apartments might have two and even three bedrooms, where congenial women could live together and share the expense.

"Such houses should be erected in a location where transit facilities are good, and above all in a healthy, respectable neighborhood. There are many such in Brooklyn; and if good judgment is used by builders in this regard, I cannot see why this should not be a paying proposition. There should be considerable demand among women who are now living in hotels and boarding houses and who must get tired of such a way of living. I fancy that every woman would like to have a place that she could call her own home."

Not Exclusively for Women.

A Brooklyn man who has taken a lively interest in the movement for finer apartments for bachelor women, expressed the view that a house would be a better-paying proposition if not restricted to bachelor women exclusively, as there are a large number of childless couples who would gladly exchange boarding and rooming-house quarters for accommodations in such a building. "Builders would evidently find it a more lucrative field," he said, "to provide accommodations of this sort for the small salaried woman who could afford a moderate rental equivalent to what is paid for a room in boarding and rooming establishments, as the small salaried workers greatly outnumber their high-salaried sisters, who are not obliged to board or rent furnished rooms unless they choose to live cheaply."

The Apparent Demand.

This gentleman, Louis L. Young, of 161 Emerson place, further remarked:

"That there is a large field for moderate priced accommodations is borne out by the fact that the number of advertisements for unfurnished rooms with privilege of light housekeeping is greater than the number of advertisements of those for rent. One newspaper alone carries daily one, and on Sundays two and three, full pages of advertisements of hundreds of boarding and rooming houses whose rates range from $3.50 to $7 or more per week for a furnished room without board, which is equal to a monthly rental of from $15 to $30. As it has been found a paying proposition in Brooklyn to provide families with modern apartments of four or five rooms and bath having heat and hot water supply from $15 to $30, there seems no reason why it should not be a good business proposition to provide individuals or couples without families with unfurnished apartments containing fewer rooms at such rentals.

A Case in Point.

"An apartment house of this type, designed by Mr. Arthur Ware, 1170 Broadway, New York, and erected at Willoughby avenue and Emerson place, Brooklyn, was considered a sufficiently good business proposition to interest the trustees of Pratt Institute in such a project as an income paying property. The thirty-six apartments the building contains were leased before the building was finished, and renewals for the second year were secured for every apartment, the few vacancies that occurred being filled from a waiting list.

"A building having apartments of one large room, bath and kitchenette only, would not meet the need of the individual desiring a sleeping-room besides a living or sitting room, or the couple who require separate sleeping-rooms. Built-in book shelves, window-seat, inglenook, desk, chest of drawers, cupboard, refrigerator and open fireplace in each apartment would be attractive renting inducements to those who did not care to expend much for furnishings; but cooking utensils, bedding and other such furnishings are not likely to be desired by light housekeepers wishing to furnish and care for their own homes.

"It may not be possible to include a kitchenette in such apartments, unless some modification of the tenement house law is obtained. The Tenement House Department is disposed to construe a kitchenette to be a room and the law requires that each room shall contain at least 70 square feet, or be not smaller than 7 by 10 feet. A kitchenette is designed to do away with having to prepare light meals in a screened-off corner of a sleeping-room having no facilities for preparing them, except the improvised kitchen cabinet the occupant installs, and requires but little more space than a large size closet with a small window for light and ventilation, and opening off the living-room or passage."

Available Sites in Brooklyn.

Mr. Young said that triangular plots facing two or three streets, such as Flatbush avenue forms where it intersects some of the streets on Park Slope and in Flatbush, also parcels of less than the average depth, as the corner plots in the blocks formed by East 15th and East 16th streets, and intersected by the right of way of the depressed tracks of an elevated railroad, plots facing two streets and adjoining the grounds of churches, schools or other permanently open spaces, which would permit a building having all outside rooms are recalled as possible sites where such buildings could be erected in Brooklyn.

Could Remodel Old Dwellings.

The remodelling of three-story and basement private residences would provide conveniently arranged apartments. Mr. Young thought, as the front rooms could be substituted for living-rooms, the adjoining hall or hall rooms for kitchenettes, the back rooms for one or two sleeping-rooms, and adjoining hall or bathrooms, for private baths, the space between front and back rooms being remodeled into private entries and passages between rooms. Such apartments would have an outlook from both front and back of the house, would have all light rooms and good ventilation. Instead of building so many two-family houses in the outlying districts, he thought it would be a good proposition to erect a few remodeled residence type of apartments in the rows."

FIFTY BROAD STREET

GETTING DAYLIGHT INTO A SKYSCRAPER.

Along the line of the new subway on Broad street, in the heart of the financial district, just below the Stock Exchange, a million and a half dollar twenty-story office building will be erected by the Fifty Broad Street Company and be ready for occupancy, the architects declare, on May 1.

This building will be situated in a commanding position near the head of Broad street, looking from Wall street, and with the two 250-foot high towers, forming its principal facade, will have much the appearance of a great cathedral standing at the head of a vista. The building will extend through the block to New street and have two street courts similar to the scheme adopted in the modern apartment house. It will be a neighbor of the Johnston, Blair and Broad Exchange buildings and will, by its plan, contain the equal of three street corners, providing light for all offices throughout, as though Exchange Place passed through the center of the property, with the added advantage that this central portion of the building gets the direct light from Broad and New streets. The street courts are of the same width as Exchange Place.

There are no inside courts, and every office overlooks the street. By means of bay windows on the Broad street court most of the offices in the building have a direct view of Broad street, which is 100 feet wide. As the entire lighting comes from the streets, no office can have its daylight affected by future building operations on the adjacent properties. To intensify and reflect the light, the building will be of white matt glaze terra cotta, the base of stone and marble, side walls of light-colored face brick.

The street floor will provide probably the finest lighted large banking-room space in the downtown district. This will be accomplished by seven large skylights located at the base of the street courts, throwing light into the central portions of the first story directly from the two streets.

A large rentable basement space will have entrance by an 8-foot stairway didectly from the street. Suites of offices will be divided to please tenants. The service entrance to the building will be on the New street side. A broad marble lined arcade will extend from Broad street through to New street, giving direct access to the present subway through 42 Broadway. From the arcade the elevators will carry the occupants to their offices at the rate of 600 feet per minute, thus giving the finest of elevator service. The building will be erected on caisson foundations carried to rock, and be of high class construction and finish throughout. Windows will be grouped in twos and threes without masonry piers between, in essential portions of the building. Three stair-

POPULAR TYPES OF SUBURBAN HOUSES

No. 2. The House With the Inviting Porch

By WILLIAM HERBERT

Radical Improvement in the Treatment of Porches, Which are Now Regarded as Outdoor Living Rooms.

The Architectural Styles Which the Owner Has to Choose From When About to Build His Country Home.

IN the preceding article of this series I described the cheaper class of houses which were being erected in the suburbs by the development companies, and pointed out the merits of the better grade of these so-called bungalows. The majority of the development companies deal, however, in houses somewhat higher in cost and decidedly different in appearance from the bungalow; and as this intermediate type of suburban residence, costing from $7,000 to $30,000, is the most important type, it deserves more careful description.

In one essential respect these intermediate suburban houses resemble their humbler brethren. They are being planned and equipped more and more for the purpose of attracting, not the family which has been accustomed to a city house, but the family which has been accustomed to the economies and conveniences of a city flat. It is extraordinary how well the development companies have succeeded in accomplishing the difficult task of making suburban houses easier upon the housekeeper.

An Intermediate Type.

The tendency is to keep these more expensive houses, like the bungalows, low in height and to spread them out over an increased area; and this tendency is determined by the double need of young people who have lived in apartments, the conveniences to which they are accustomed, while at the same time supplying them with improved living accommodations, which they have been theretofore denied. Ceilings are made lower than they are in apartments or in city houses—thus reducing the number of stairs that have to be climbed, and making the rooms cheaper to heat in winter. Floor areas are, on the other hand, comparatively liberal, because people who have been confined to a city flat welcome the opportunity of living in larger rooms. Practically all the rooms are at least fifteen per cent. larger than are the corresponding rooms in apartments; and in the case of bedrooms, and bathrooms particularly, the attempt is successfully made to give the suburban resident more space. The architectural effect of this tendency is particularly beneficial. Instead of the old three-story house which sits straight and stiff on its site, the tendency now is to build comparatively low and often somewhat rambling houses.

In another respect, also, the development companies try to make their houses as different as possible from apartments. They try to provide a superabundance of light and a pleasant and extended view from the windows of the living-room. The windows are numerous and large. Much ingenuity is expended in the attempt to make them attractive to look through and convenient to handle. Wherever possible the houses are situated so that the more important rooms will look out upon a pretty and spacious stretch of country. An effect of space is also sought in planning the interior of the house, because apartment-house residents always demand in their new suburban homes the feeling of liberation from the dark, cramped flats, in which they have usually been living.

RESIDENCE AT GREAT NECK VILLA, L. I.

The Inviting Porch.

One of the most conspicuous and necessary elements in these suburban houses is the porch, because suburban families naturally want to spend as much time as possible out-of-doors. As we shall see in a later number of this series, there is no respect in which the suburban house has improved more radically than in the treatment of the porch. It has become both a more useful part of the house and a more helpful element in the architectural design. Porches are planned so that they shelter their occupants from disagreeable prevailing winds, and so that they tend to become an outdoor living-room, intimately and essentially related to the plan and design of the house.

Not Forgetting the Children.

Another matter which has received a great deal of attention from the designers of suburban houses is the accommodation of children. More often than not families move from apartments into the suburbs because they believe that their children will be healthier and happier in the country. Special efforts are consequently made to provide convenient and spacious nurseries and out-of-door playgrounds. The houses are set as far as possible back from the street or highway, and the intervening space is usually occupied with a carefully leveled and planted lawn. Owing to the increasing use of shrubbery and the desirability of keeping young children away from motor-traveled roads, there is more of a tendency than there used to be to enclose the grounds of suburban houses.

Mechanical Conveniences.

The development companies equip their houses with as many mechanical contrivances and conveniences as they can afford, because the housewife who has lived in an apartment is very exacting in this respect. She does not want to do any more work herself or employ any more servants than when she was living in a much smaller space in the city. Steam or hot-water heating has become almost indispensable, both because the houses cover a larger area, because hot-air heating brings more dirt and because of the comparative popularity of steam heat. Hardwood floors are demanded, because they are easily kept in order. A great abundance of closet-room is particularly necessary. The construction of the house must be such as to keep out vermin. Chutes for soiled clothes are becoming more and more common, and the laundries which are now always put in the cellar, must be equipped with the latest appliances. It is a serious drawback for any development company not to be able to install electric lights in its houses, and before long this kind of lighting will be universal. Electric power has become useful in a house for so many purposes, such as auxiliary cooking, heating and cleaning, that the demand for it is pressing.

Ingenuity in House Planning.

In these and in many other details the development companies, which build suburban houses, are showing more ingenuity in meeting and anticipating the needs of their customers than are the builders of apartment houses. They are showing more ingenuity because they need to do so. People usually live in an apartment because they cannot help it, or because they are accustomed to it, and they usually have to take what is given to them. But people move to the suburbs often at some pecuniary sacrifice because they want to live more pleasantly and more wholesomely, and such people are naturally harder to please. They want all the advantages of the suburb without losing too many advantages of the town; and it is extraordinary how near this they are coming to satisfying their apparently incompatible wants.

This type of intermediate suburban house, like the bungalow, is usually of frame construction, but there is an increasing tendency to build them of more permanent materials. This tendency has appeared of late years because the difference in cost between frame construction and the cheaper forms of fireproof construction has very much diminished. It is possible under favorable conditions to build a hollow-tile, a concrete or even a brick house, for a figure not so very much bigger than that required for a wooden building. Of course, frame construction is still cheap enough to prevail in the majority of houses erected under commercial conditions, but the difference continues to diminish. In time it will almost disappear. In the meanwhile the American public is gradually being educated up to the level of higher standards of construction. Certain families are coming to prefer less space in a fireproof house to more space in an inflammable one, and their number is bound to increase with the improved technical education of the American public.

Best Architectural Styles.

The design of these intermediate houses is as often as not thoroughly good. They no longer betray the architectural ignorance and stupidity of their designers by an attempt at some grotesque combination of forms derived from different historic styles. They can usually be classed either as Elizabethan, Colonial, Jacobean or Swiss, and if they depart from a strict adherence to specific models, they do so in good company and according to authentic precedents. They indicate, in short, the same kind of intelligence and the same sufficiency of information in their design as they do in their plan and equipment. Of course, they are buildings erected under commercial conditions and they cannot be studied with enough care to produce really distinguished pieces of architectural design. But the average is astonishingly good and decidedly better than it was when more of the houses were built by their owners and fewer by the development companies. These companies are, I believe, the first speculative builders of houses in history who have erected better looking, better planned and better constructed houses than those which were erected for the same price by private owners.

INDUSTRIAL SITES.

Suggesting a Line of Work to Which Real Estate Brokers Could Give More Attention.

The Industrial Committee of The Merchants' Association intends to make a series of tours of personal inspection in various sections of the city which offer industrial opportunities. It is the purpose of the committee to get personally in touch with industrial conditions. It realizes that the problem of industrial development here is different from that in other cities.

The situation in each borough is different from that in every other borough, and to this in large measure is due the lack of appreciation of the tremendous industrial development already attained and the still greater industrial possibilities which await development in many parts of the city. It is a line of work which real estate brokers could profitably cultivate to a greater degree than they have hitherto.

The impression that "New York City" is synonymous with "Manhattan" is so general throughout the country, and even in the city itself, that people fail to realize that there are economical sites for manufacturers in New York, although as a matter of fact in Brooklyn, The Bronx, Queens, and Richmond, there is much land which may be used economically for manufacturing purposes.

The committee recently made a tour of inspection, by automobile, through The Bronx and into Westchester County, as guests of Mr. L. S. Miller, President of the New York, Westchester and Boston Railway. A report of the tour, prepared by the Industrial Bureau and printed in the bulletin of the association states that among the many things which interested the committee were the possibilities for industrial development along the waterfront of The Bronx, which is especially adapted to industrial development because of the many indentations of the long coast line, bringing much of the territory into almost direct connection with the waterfront.

The committee considered the plans of President Cyrus C. Miller, of The Bronx, for a new terminal market to supply not only a large part of The Bronx but also the northern section of Manhattan. The committee was impressed by the rapid development of the New York, Westchester and Boston Railway, which is already carrying a large number of suburban commuters.

OVERCROWDING IN THE TENEMENTS

A Housing Expert Would Hold the Landlord Responsible for the Lodger Evil—The Board of Health's Permission to Keep Lodgers Should be Requisite.*

By LAWRENCE VEILLER,
Former Deputy Commissioner of the New York City Tenement House Department.

IT is rather humiliating, after seventy years' of effort at housing reform in America, to confess, as we have to confess, that one of the most serious housing evils encountered in any country has not been grappled with and that practically no plan for its solution has as yet even been proposed.

Embarrassing as such an admission is, we must, however, in all fairness, frankly confess that, so far as the great problem of room overcrowding goes, there has been no serious attempt made in America to cope with it nor any rational plan for its solution heretofore presented.

Moreover, we are seemingly without accurate information as to the extent of the evil. There exist only vague impressions, based upon individual cases which have come to the attention of imaginative journalists or sympathetic social workers, although it is to be hoped that some light will be thrown on this subject by the investigation made by the Congressional Committee on Immigration some two years ago, the results of whose work are now in process of publication in some forty-six volumes.

Just how great an evil is room overcrowding in America? Is it merely a New York condition, or do we find it manifesting itself in other American cities, and has it become a serious evil in those cities? Further, is it an evil found only in cities? May we not find it even in small towns and villages, and possibly even on the open prairie?

Picturesque Stories.

The most picturesque accounts that we have thus far heard are of two episodes that have become very familiar. They give promise of being repeated with as much persistency as the old familiar fable of the coal in the bathtub.

One is that highly flavored incident of the newspaper reporter finding four families keeping house in one room with chalk lines dividing off the floor into four parts, only the width of the chalk line separating family from family.

The other is the less frequently repeated story, but one with probably a far greater basis of fact, of the "Box and Cox" arrangement, by which rooms in many houses are occupied by double shifts of workmen, one group sleeping in the rooms and beds by day, the other by night. More valid testimony than such sensational instances afford, is obtained from social workers, especially from those living in settlements; from them we learn of numerous individual instances of small apartments occupied by a large number of people. The instances thus reported are generally, however, isolated ones, chanced upon in the course of neighborhood visits. Whatever the scientific accuracies or inaccuracies of the testimony at hand, the range is certainly wide. One case of thirteen people in one room in a small shanty on the prairies of Indiana would seem to mark the extreme limit of the manifestations of this evil.

With regard to one fact, all observers are agreed: That the evil of room overcrowding is manifested chiefly among certain elements of our alien population; the Italians, the Poles, and Russians, and the later immigration of Slavonic races. We do not hear of many accounts of it being encountered with the Irish, the negro or our own poor whites, although individual cases among all these races have come to our attention.

Not Due to Dire Necessity.

We are similarly without accurate facts as to the causes of this evil. One group in the community tells us that it is due entirely to economic conditions; that it is a direct result of poverty; that it is caused by the high rents which the poor have to pay and that they are forced by need to take in lodgers to eke out their scanty income. On the other hand, many observers are of the opinion that in the majority of cases it is not so much need as greed; that it is not due to dire necessity so much as it is to the desire of certain elements of our alien population to add penny to penny, dollar to dollar, with greatest rapidity, and who care little how they live in their feverish race for money.

We are also told that, instead of these conditions being the result of high rents, they are the cause; that the landlord, finding that his tenants are making their rooms a source of income by letting out a portion of them and taking in lodgers, makes up his mind that the rooms will bear an increased rental and accordingly raises the rent; this, in turn, causes the tenant to take in more lodgers to meet this increased rental, and later, the landlord, finding that the rooms are affording a still further increased revenue, proceeds again to raise the rent, and so on, to what might be termed the limit of elasticity, beyond which the tenant's purse cannot be stretched.

The writer believes that there is truth in both of these views; that in many cases room overcrowding is undoubtedly due to need; that the low earning capacity of the family, the uncertainty of employment, the sickness of the wage-earner, in a word, a variety of social and economic causes, do make it necessary for many of our poor people to eke out a scanty income by this means. It is the easiest and surest method at command for increasing the family income.

Racial Solidarity.

On the other hand, so far as the writer can judge from his twenty years' observation of life among the poor, this evil is caused far more by greed than by need; by the desire to rapidly acquire money than by the necessity for increasing the income.

I attribute it also to a third cause; namely, racial solidarity. This is a factor in the situation which heretofore has not been sufficiently considered.

Room overcrowding as we know it in America is almost entirely wrapped up with the lodger evil. It is seldom due to the large size of the family, contrary to the popular impression; the cases of overcrowding due to the large family are so seldom met with as to be negligible. Were there no other manifestations of room overcrowding than the few cases of large families in small quarters that are encountered, housing reformers might well give no further consideration to the problem.

The real evil lies in the practice of taking outsiders into the family life, either as lodgers or boarders; generally single men of their own race, frequently from their own village, men who have come to this country, as many of our foreigners come, only to better their industrial condition and who, while they are here, intend to save every penny that can possibly be saved, denying themselves every comfort in order that they may return in a few years to their native land with a small competence with which they may be able to set themselves up as "landed proprietors."

The taking in of lodgers is frequently an act of help and aid to a fellow countryman. The better established workingman thinks back to the time (not many years ago) when he was in a similar position, a stranger in a strange land, ignorant of the language of the country and unfamiliar with the industrial opportunities before him; a prey to every unscrupulous person who would profit by these handicaps. It is not strange, therefore, that he should be anxious to aid the friend, or the cousin of a friend from his own village, who, starting like himself, a young man, has come to this land of promise to make his fortune.

Consequences of the Evil.

But it is not all friendship. The mutual advantage makes its appeal. The ordinary tenement dweller sees in the opportunity of taking in a lodger an increased income; a relief in meeting the tremendous burden of rent, the one fixed charge that cannot be evaded, which must be met at a regular date. Even a dollar a month looms large. The benefit is immediate and concrete; the ultimate cost is remote and unconsidered. Of course, we should frankly recognize that no matter how sympathetic the ordinary workingman is, he is not going to take a fellow countryman into his family and keep him for nothing for any considerable period of time. It is, therefore, a commercial proposition with him, as well as a sentimental one.

I am led more and more to the conclusion that it is primarily this element of racial solidarity, coupled with the obvious financial advantage and augmented by the lack of proper housing accommodations for the newly arrived single immigrant that we must regard as the basic factor in our problem of room overcrowing.

So much for the causes; now, as to the effects of this evil. Here too we are singularly without accurate information. We have been told for years that the practice of taking outsiders into the family life is fraught with serious evils to the community; evils of a physical, moral, civic, social, industrial and economic nature. That this is so, I, for one, have no doubt.

We should, however be better equipped for the attack if we had a more certain basis of accurate data at our command. All that we can rely upon, however, is the appeal to reason. From the very nature of things the results of room overcrowding must be of this kind and the ordinary person at once grants this without the necessity of arraying a series of incontrovertible facts to prove our case.

There are, of course, in the experience of the social workers of the country innumerable individual instances where the moral effects of room overcrowding are strikingly illustrated, where the introduction of strange men into the family life has led to the breaking up of homes, to the separation of husband and wife, to the going astray of young daughters just emerging into young womanhood.

So far as the physical effects of room overcrowding are concerned, we have at hand considerable information, the results of studies made in Great Britain and other countries, showing the increased death rate, the lesser height and weight, and the less developed physical condition of children reared in one room than of those reared in two rooms, and similarly the less advantageous condition of those reared in two rooms than those reared in three rooms, and so on. I, for one, feel hesitation in basing arguments on these conclusions. To me it simply means that the investigators have found what any intelligent person could have told them in advance they would find. It does not require scientific investigation nor special wisdom to realize that a higher death rate, greater industrial inefficiency and inferior physical condition will be found among the poorest elements of the community, who, because of their poverty, can only afford one room to live in and that often the poorest kind of accommodation to be found in the city; that their children should compare unfavorably with the children of the families whose economic position enables them to live in more commodious quarters is not a matter of surprise.

May it not be that they live in one room because they are poor and weak; not that they are poor and weak because they live in one room?

Civic Effects of Overcrowding.

With regard to the civic effects of room overcrowding, we are on sure ground. The social worker is in a position to observe every day in the year the bad results from this kind of living; the serious effect it has upon good citizenship; how difficult it becomes for the person living under these conditions to have an interest in the welfare of the city.

The bad social effects of this method of living are only too easily observed. It can hardly be called living; it is merely existence and nothing more. In the words of Doctor Russell of Glasgow:

"I ask you to imagine yourself with all your appetites and passions, your bodily necessities and functions, your feelings of modesty, your sense of propriety, your births, your sicknesses, your deaths, your children,—in short, your lives in the whole round of their relationships with the seen and unseen suddenly shriveled and shrunk into such conditions of space. I might ask you, I do ask you, to consider and honestly confess what would be the result to you."

The industrial effects are to be found in the weakened vitality of the worker and the physical inefficiency generated thereby, as well as in lowered industrial standards made possible by these methods of living.

Irrespective of what facts can be measured, there can be no doubt that the evil of room overcrowding, due as we have seen largely to the practice of taking outsiders into the family life, is one that is fraught with serious consequences to the welfare of the community as well as to the individual. Where this evil is entrenched, it must be fought resolutely; where it has just begun to show itself, it should be nipped in the bud. No sentimental plea of the rights of the indivual should be tolerated. Let us not be led astray by the argument that the workingman's home is his castle, that its privacy cannot be invaded by officials for inspectorial purposes any more than the rich man's.

We admitted long ago the right of the community to inspect and control both rich and poor in cases of contagious disease, and it is a slavish devotion to dogma that does not recognize the right of governmental interference where the peril is both moral and physical. Nor should we be influenced either by the plea of poverty and necessity that the workingman is forced to these conditions and that, therefore, the evil must be tolerated.

Breaking Down American Standards.

Just as surely as it is tolerated, we must face the breaking down of American standards of living, of morality, of civic and social responsibility, of even liberty itself.

Like many other social problems, it is much easier to state the conditions as observed than to formulate effective methods for remedying them.

Out of seventy years' experience in America, it might be supposed that we should find some experience in coping with this evil which would aid us. The only two cities that I know of where any serious effort has been made to meet the situation, are New York and Boston, and while neither of these communities can be considered in the slightest degree as having solved this problem, yet, there is that in their experience which is of value to us; we may learn more from mistakes sometimes than from successes. * * *

Hold the Landlord Responsible.

My solution for this evil is that we hold the landlord primarily responsible for the taking in of lodgers into the apartments of families who occupy his building. While it may seem a novel proposition to hold the landlord responsible for something which many people feel he cannot be responsible for, yet it is in reality no new thing. For over ten years now in New York, we have held the landlord responsible for the moral character of his tenants and we have done this most successfully.

In the New York Tenement House Law a landlord is responsible, and with a very serious degree of responsibility, for the presence of prostitutes in his tenement house. If such women are found and are not promptly removed from the house upon notice from the public officials, the house itself becomes liable to a penalty of one thousand dollars ($1,000), a penalty which cannot be escaped. This provision has proved so admirably adapted to its purpose that in all this time, although there have been many cases of this kind brought, there has been no instance where it was necessary to seek the collection of the penalty or the bringing of court proceedings in order to make the landlord comply with the law. A mere notice has been all that was necessary to secure action. He has been quick to dispossess tenants of this character.

What I propose now is that we should apply this same principle to the problem under consideration; that we should prohibit the taking of lodgers and boarders into an apartment without the consent in writing of our Health Officials and that we should then hold the owner of the house responsible through heavy penalty for any violation of this provision. Let us not be deceived by any false claims on the part of the landlord that he cannot know what is going on inside the apartments of the individual families in his building. Such a claim is not true.

It is his business to know whether his tenants are taking in sub-tenants; it is his business to so look after his property that he will know what is going on in his house; it is his business if the house is one of any considerable size to have on the premises a resident janitor or caretaker, to keep an eye on all of the conditions in that building. The janitor always knows when families are taking in lodgers or boarders. It would be impossible to escape such knowledge. Where the house is merely a small one, and no janitor is provided, the owner himself must act as janitor, but in such houses, as a rule, the lodger evil is not often encountered.

Why Not Outright Prohibition?

Some may ask would it not be simpler to prohibit outright the taking of lodgers in a tenement house. Undoubtedly it would be easier, but, unfortunately, it would not be fair or reasonable, nor would such a requirement, in my judgment, stand the test in the courts. To withstand such a test successfully, it would have to be shown in all cases that the practice of taking in lodgers was injurious to the community; the exercise of the police power by the State would have to be justified.

Moreover, it would work real hardship in many cases. Take the case, for instance, of a high-class apartment house (which must under our tenement house laws, be considered as a tenement house) where one of the tenants is suddenly left a widow and has on her hands a large apartment at an expensive rental; she must in order to live, take in one or two persons to enable her to meet her obligations. Under such circumstances, the taking in of lodgers, as we all readily admit, is fraught with no evils and is a perfectly proper thing to countenance. It is seen, therefore, that we cannot go to the extent of absolute prohibition. We must, accordingly, leave in the hands of our health officials the right to say when lodgers may be taken and when they may not; let us not attempt to establish in our laws arbitrary and fixed standards; but let us leave the decision to be determined by the responsible public official with regard to the particular facts in each case.

A New Law Suggested.

The following provision of law I would suggest should be incorporated in all housing laws and also adopted by our Health Departments as part of their sanitary codes:

> No tenement house nor any part thereof, shall be used for the letting of lodgings, without the consent in writing of the board of health, nor shall any person not a member of the family be taken to live within an apartment occupied by any family, without such consent. It shall be the duty of the owner of such tenement house to see that the provisions of this section are at all times complied with, and a failure to so comply on the part of any tenant, after due and proper notice from him, shall be deemed sufficient cause for the summary eviction of such tenant and the cancellation of his lease.

With such a law and with an awakened public sentiment realizing keenly the dangers of room overcrowding, it would be possible in a short time to nip this evil in the bud in practically all of our cities, except of course, always, the City of New York. There the same remedy is required but, owing to the extraordinary conditions which prevail in that city, a long period of time would be required to bring about a change in the situation, as the evil has grown so rapidly and conditions have been neglected for so long.

THE REALTY FORUM.

A Protest Against Delay in Constructing More Subways.

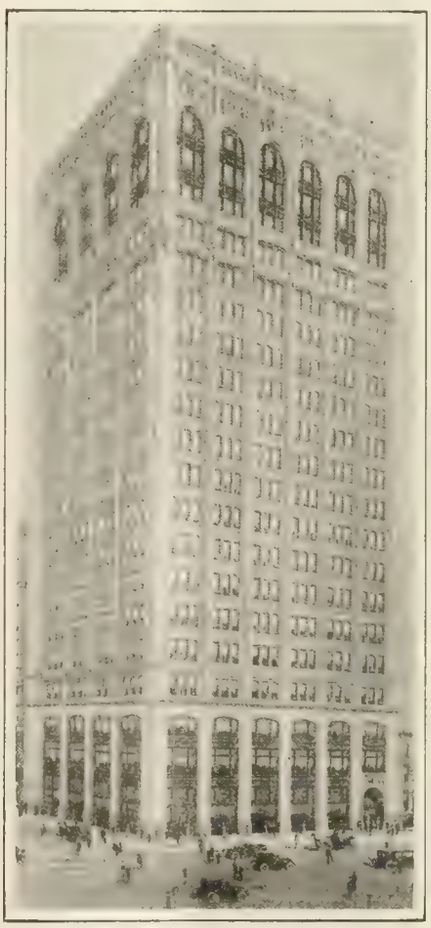
There must be a sound reason for activity in real estate. All the great movements of the past in New York have been predicated on great rapid transit improvements, or on extraordinary industrial expansion. For several years real estate has been waiting for the Public Service Commission to sign the operating contracts for the Dual System of subways. Meanwhile it has seen taxation rates assume equity-killing proportions, and restrictive measures and municipal annoyances upon property interests multiplied until the real estate business has been well nigh discouraged. All this has been borne with courage and patriotic complacency in the hope that a revival would come with the signing of the subway operating contracts. Then to have this business finally frustrated by unwarranted injunctions was a little more than could be borne with equanimity, and the demonstration at the Real Estate Exchange last Monday, at which intimations were given of the state of public feeling over the injustice being done to property interests, was a natural result.

The meeting was characterized by dignified and temperate presentation of the actual facts of the case and of the reasons why real estate interests should be considered at this time. As Robert E. Dowling pointed out, the welfare of Manhattan real estate is in no wise being served by the continuation of the congestion on traffic lines. As business men all the speakers approved of the terms of the contract and assured the public that their interests had been honestly and wisely served by the Public Service Commission. A new chairman of the commission having been appointed in the person of Justice McCall in the place of William R. Wilcox, it was but fair they said that he should have a reasonable length of time to study the nature of the contracts.

A Shame.

It was a shame, as Francis E. Ward said, that the subways should be held up so, but confidence was expressed in the new chairman as a sane, conservative and honorable man, who would do the right thing.

A sure foundation for the subsequent remarks was laid by the able explanation of the status of the case given by Public Service Commissioner John G. Eustis. Allan Robinson, President of the Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York, expressed disappointment that the subway negotiations should be held up. If this plan should be upset, he said, it would be a long time before private capital could again be induced to come forward and aid us. The president of the North Side Board of Trade, Mr. W. W. Niles, counseled patience for awhile, until the new chairman of the Public Service Board could have time to study the forms of contract. Then if something did not move it would be time for real estate men to take action.



Mr. Robert E. Dowling, president of the City Investing Company, expressed confidence in the new chairman as a man who would do the right thing in the crisis. He regretted that Chairman Willcox had not been able to sign them, but really he might have done so had he been more expeditious.

From the pointed remarks of Robert E. Simon, vice president of the Henry Morgenthau Company, it was easy to gather that the real estate interests of the city will be able to make up a strong case against subway obstructors if it should be necessary to present it for public consideration. Vast sums of public money have been poured out for unproductive improvements without a word of objection being raised, while accusations of robbery had been made against the pending subway contracts when every business man knew the terms to be very advantageous to the city.

"When the demand for new subways is backed by the unanimous consent of almost the entire city it should be acceded to without quibbling or question," wrote J. Clarence Davies in a letter which Chairman James L. Wells read to the meeting. "The realty interests of New York, which in the final analysis pays the bills, absolutely demand that the present contracts be signed, and that this should be final and absolute."

Work to Start on Madison Avenue Building.

The latest comer to the Madison avenue mercantile trade is the new twenty-story structure which Charles Kaye is to erect at the southeast corner of Madison avenue and 30th street. Construction is to be commenced about the first of April. It is the intention of the builders to have the building completed and ready for occupancy by the first of next January, and it is stated that some of the floors, including the entire store floor, have already been rented from the plans.

The Charles Kaye Building, to be erected at the southeast corner, Madison avenue and 30th Street, from plans of Buchman & Fox.

On the Madison avenue side the plot measures 123.5 feet, with dimensions of 100 feet in 30th street. As planned by the architects, Buchman & Fox, of 11 East 59th street, the three lower stories on the exterior will be constructed of Indiana limestone; the remaining seventeen stories will have buff colored ornamental terra cotta throughout, the style of architecture being a free adaptation of the Gothic. The main entrance will be treated in imported marble and bronze. Other features of interior equipment will be seven high-speed overhead traction elevators, fireproof stairways and a fire tower.

BUILDING REFORMS.

Supt. Carlin Says His Measure Would Weed Out Incompetent Builders and Botch Mechanics.

Superintendent P. J. Carlin of the Brooklyn Bureau of Buildings, who has fathered the proposed law that aims to license all builders in the City of New York, when interviewed for the Record and Guide this week, emphasized the need of legislation controlling Greater New York building operations, and declared that he had excellent reasons for believing the measure he had instigated would become a law. Superintendent Carlin was asked when he first became interested in the matter of licensing builders.

"About thirty-five years ago," he replied. "While I was president of the Mason Builders' Association of Brooklyn, the subject was first agitated. At that time," he continued, "it was thought necessary that only mason builders should be licensed, and much effort was directed toward that end. Builders, other than masons, were not then considered in this connection. Nothing, however, came of that agitation. With time it became clear to me that builders of all kinds should be obliged to qualify under a law designed to test their fitness for putting up buildings

"Mr. Carlin, what do you think will be the result if this bill now before the Legislature should become a law?"

"The immediate result," the Superintendent replied, "would be a better class of buildings, a weeding out of incompetent builders and a consequent doing away with botch mechanics employed by incompetent builders, with a return of clever, competent, skillful and painstaking mechanics who take pride in their work, but who have been gradually shoved aside to make way for men totally unfit for their calling and indifferent as to the appearance of their work when completed. Absolutely these workmen that I refer to, like their employers, cannot appreciate a good mechanic because they do not know one when they see him."

"How has the bill generally been received by builders?" the Superintendent was asked.

"I have not heard one man say a word against the direct purpose of the bill," Mr. Carlin declared. "One builder has said, with reference to the formation of the Board of Examiners, that a speculative builder might be placed on the board. Generally, however, all builders with whom I have spoken on the subject are in favor of the measure. I know that all good builders approve."

"How will the measure affect workmen engaged in the building trade?" Mr. Carlin was questioned.

"Nothing better for the welfare of the workingman could be done than the bill provides. He will be reasonably certain of obtaining better treatment and will be permitted to do his work properly under intelligent supervision, thereby bringing about a better feeling and better understanding between employer and employee."

"There is no doubt in your mind, Mr. Superintendent," the Record and Guide man observed, "that the bill will benefit the general public?"

"It is clearly manifest," Mr. Carlin replied, earnestly, "that a better class of workmen would be engaged in the construction of buildings, by reason of the provisions of the bill, and it follows that a better class of work will be the result; and the owners of buildings will have less to pay for repairs, and the general public will be insured against accidents that now arise through inferior building construction."

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Company.

The question whether a building is better served by being under the charge of an independent manager or of the agency department of a big real estate firm is touched upon in the current number of Pease & Elliman's house organ, the "Indicator." Naturally, the "Indicator" argues in favor of the big real estate firm, and particularly the big real estate firm of Pease & Elliman, but that does not make what it says any the less interesting. There are two points in the argument that deserve special notice. The first is to this effect: "We have an unvarying rule that no commission of any kind will be accepted by us or our employees from the dealers, supply houses or mechanics with whom we do business. Discounts, if any, are credited directly to the owners, the only compensation we receive for our services being the percentage on collections as specified in our contracts." A firm managing a great number of properties can, of course, obtain larger discounts than the manager of a single building.

But granting superiority in buying, how does corporate management compare with individual management in efficiency from the standpoint of the tenant? Here is the "Indicator's" answer: "We employ a force of competent men who give their entire attention to the properties in our care. It is their duty to visit each building every day to see that everything is running smoothly, and in case of any unusual occurence to make a report to the manager of the department, who in his turn inspects all properties once a month, and oftener should the occasion arise. All orders for repairs or supplies of any size must be approved by the manager of the department." Indeed, all bills, pay rolls, etc., are O. K.'d by three different persons. First, by the firm's agent in direct charge of the building, then by the manager of the (agency) department, and finally by the assistant-treasurer.

The chief requisites of good management are honesty and efficiency, and these requisites are emphasized by the "Indicator" in the case of Pease & Elliman's agency department. After all there is no hard and fast answer to the question whether a building is better served by having an independent manager than by being under the charge of a big real estate firm. Fair dealing and efficiency are not necessarily assured under either arrangement. But a big real estate house can, if it is so inclined, exclude grafting and can afford to pay a top-notch salary to a competent agency manager, something which the owner of a single building is not generally in a position to do.

An important book on building management—important both on account of its quality and particularly because it is the first of its kind—has just appeared from the press of the Patterson Publishing Company, of Chicago. It is entitled "Scientific Building Operation," and is edited by C. A. Patterson and William C. Lengel. It deals with such subjects as management, renting, accounting and reports, operation, janitor service, repairs, buying supplies, elevators, lighting, and insurance. The contents comprise about forty articles, most of which have appeared in "Building Management." Among the contributors are several well-known New York agents, including Charles Duross and C. F. Noyes.

THE BUILDINGS THAT PAY BEST

Are Those Which Experienced Real Estate Managers Have Helped to Plan, Whether They Be Apartments, Business Buildings or Even Hotels.

By ALBERT B. ASHFORTH.

THE building manager's opportunity to put into practice his ideas of how to fill his position to the best practical purpose does not come when he hangs his coat on a hook, opens his desk and starts to work. His task commenced when the plans of the building were conceived.

On the economical arrangement of the entire building from the sub-basement to the roof depends the failure or success of his building from a point of view of a profitable operation.

As the building manager's position depends upon the success or failure of his task, he cannot post himself too early as to the conditions he may have to contend with, and he should be capable of deciding on the question, for one thing, as to whether a low or high pressure plant should be operated, or whether it would be wiser to use outside electric light and power service.

This question must be conditioned on the size of lot, height of building, and character of occupancy. Often a building of small area, where there is a restaurant or some other business requiring a great deal of power, may demand its own plant from an economical standpoint, while its neighbor, covering a much greater area, would be losing money by the same operation.

Selecting the Help.

He must be a good judge on the quality of help to employ, how best to divide the duties of the different employees, give proper attention to their wants, and, in the case of office buildings, provide a room for them with suitable lockers, where they may lunch if necessary and where utensils used in their employment may be stored.

He must maintain the strictest discipline, always be on the alert to correct any lack of attention to duty, and see that each employee carries out his duties to the letter and is courteous to tenants. Much complaint from the tenants can be avoided if their wants are promptly complied with.

A Proper Cleaning System.

Office building managers have most frequent complaint from tenants on the lack of proper cleaning of their offices and poor elevator service. A building may soon acquire a reputation for poor service along these lines that will take years of effort to overcome. In the case of one building in New York the poor attention to the wants of its tenants by the building manager almost succeeded in vacating the entire property, and came nearly being a disaster to the owner.

Proper elevator service depends in a great measure on the ability of the elevator starter to control his runners and to keep the service running promptly and regularly. He should be a man of ability and expediency.

The Best Dividend Payers.

In over twenty years' experience I have found that the buildings—both apartments and business buildings, and even hotels—that have been planned by experienced real estate men prove to be the best dividend payers.

I have in my mind a man who to-day has achieved the greatest success in building management, owing, in a great measure, to his experience of many years as a real estate agent and broker. His wide experience in this capacity taught him the requirements of tenants for many and varied classes of property. In fact, he concluded that the average builder was so unfamiliar with the necessities of the tenant that if he built a building in which he could incorporate his ideas of economy and efficiency, he would be able not only to save money in construction, but to give more for the money than his competitors, and at the same time show a greater return than other more expensive propositions were maintaining.

I believe one of his first operations showed such a remarkable return that he was able to market a property costing $75,000 for $145,000. The entire operation covered a period of not over a year. From this small beginning, though large profit, he has been able so far to develop his business that to-day he can rest on his laurels and devote himself to the pleasure of living on his income.

Must Be a Diplomat.

The building manager must be a diplomat; he must familiarize himself with the peculiarities of his tenants, learn to know their wants and anticipate them; be courteous and agreeable, and be able to keep his tenants after he secures them.

I have not discussed the question of leasing, which often comes under the charge of the building manager, particularly in the case of apartments. Nowadays the owners are relying more and more on their superintendents to take care of this part of building management, and a chapter could be devoted to this particular phase of his duties.

In conclusion, the successful building manager must be thoroughly familiar with his property in every detail, be prepared for any emergency, keep a list of applicants for positions in case he may suddenly find himself deserted by his employees, know his tenants, be courteous and agreeable, and eliminate all opportunity for graft, for by so doing his tenants learn to know that they are getting a square deal. He must be alert and attentive to his duties and by his actions and devotion to his work he can build up an esprit de corps among his associates that will redound to his credit and at the same time be conducive of the best possible results to his employer.

What's Your Elevator Record?

In a certain building, having four of the gearless traction elevators and one combination freight and traffic elevator of the gear type, the following operating record is held:

Car No. 1 is put into service at 8:15 a.m., running continuously until 5:45 p.m., six days per week, being a local car, making any and all stops from first to ninth floors, a distance of 112 feet 4 inches, with an average of 16.18 miles per day.

Car No. 2 starts at 7:45 a.m., running continuously until 6 p.m., under the same conditions as No. 1, making an average of 16.64 miles per day.

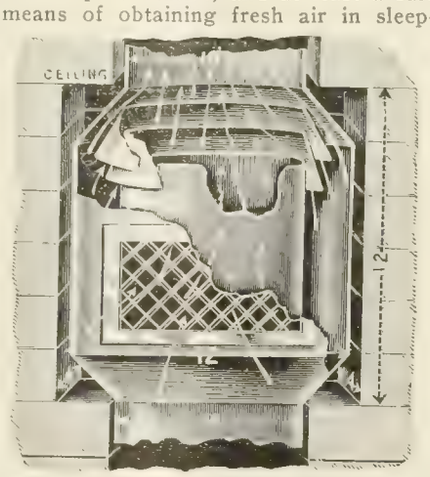
Car No. 3 is in continuous service during the entire day of twenty-four hours, every day in the year, except a few minutes for cleaning and adjusting, running as express with no stops between the first and eighth floors, but as local from the eighth to and including the fourteenth floor, a total of 174 feet 5 inches, from 8:15 a.m., to 5:15 p.m., the remainder of the twenty-four hours as local, serving all floors, making an average of 31.41 miles per day.

Car No. 4 starts at 7:45 a.m., continuous service until 6:15 p.m., as express from first to eighth floors, being local eighth to and including fourteenth floor, a total of 174 feet 5 inches, making an average daily mileage of 26.57. All cars —1, 2, 3 and 4—have a speed of 600 feet per minute.

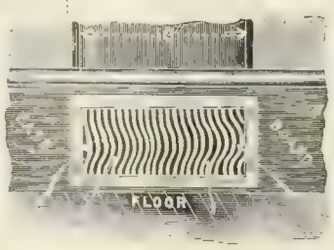
Car No. 5 is used for both passenger and freight service, and is in service twenty-four hours per day, except for cleaning and adjusting as necessary. It travels from sub-basement to fifteenth floor, 212 feet 10 inches at 400 feet speed, making a daily average of 18.57 miles. Therefore, we have a total daily travel of the five cars of 108.97 miles, handling 14,000 passengers daily six days per week, and about 1,000 passengers on Sunday, with a total of 2,984.51 car miles for the month of June, 1912, at a power cost of 7.5 cents per mile.

We are asking if this is an exceptional record or just an ordinary service. Perhaps some of our readers have greater efficiency records than this; if so, the editor of this department will be glad to hear from them.

The Danger of Making Promises.



Successful building managers have found that it is not usually a profitable thing to be lavish with promises that they are not willing to put down in black and white. The temptation to make extravagant promises is very great, especially at a time like this when there is tremendous competition in the leasing market. If a prospective tenant is too strongly urged and too many promises made him, he is very likely to be dissatisfied with what he gets, even though you give him all you promise. As a general rule a manager is always safe in keeping his standards high and promises low.



NEW THINGS

Uninfluenced by advertising considerations this information is offered on its merits for the benefit of building managers

A Tuberculosis Preventative.

Patents have just been issued to Merritt W. Griswold, of 79 Murray street, this city, for a multiple air ejector, which is commended to the attention of architects, because it is claimed by the inventor that this device is a tuberculosis preventative, and at least a safe means of obtaining fresh air in sleeping quarters. It is inexpensive to install, especially if done while building construction is under way. The accompanying cuts show the ejector head and foot piece. The operation of this device is described as follows:

"The removal of the foul air from both floor and ceiling, as herein described, is simple. The warm vitiated air from the ceiling escaping into the ejector head and rushing on out through the several narrow openings between the flanges, forms, jets that flow against all sides of the column of foul air from the floor and sucks it up, and carries out the heavier bacteria and microbes mixed with it. The lowest jet starts this air moving, the next one above gives it another push and so on up and out of the building with double quantity from the floor.

"The air taken out from the floor being the coldest, it is estimated that a room is from one to three degrees warmer in winter, and where rooms are located some distance from the furnace or heater, the suction, although slight, tends to draw the warmed air into the room, all uniting to give comfort, economy and health.

Uses of Lead Rope.

Lead rope is one of the newest commodities for making tight pipe joints. It is made of long fibers of pure lead. In joining gas and water pipes where liquid metal cannot be poured into the joint owing to restrictions, the rope is wrapped in cheesecloth or sheet rubber and makes a satisfactory metal packing. It can also be used on piston rods, valve stems for water, gas and steam, and in the engine room of any well appointed building it will be found to have many other practical uses. There is no limit to size of this rope, and it can be used when folded in suitable covering between flanges of high pressure lines. This rope is manufactured by the United Lead Company, 111 Broadway.

A New Translucent Ware.

Something new in the way of illuminating glass ware is being introduced by the Gill Brothers Company, of Steubenville, Ohio. This glass has the appearance of an alabaster globe, but it is claimed for it that it has a still higher translucency. It takes its name from the celebrated Parian marble, which it resembles in appearance. This glass possesses great reflecting power, accompanied by perfect diffusion and minimum absorption of light, producing a soft effective white ray with an absence of glare. The new material is being made up into globes and shades for all purposes, including classic globes for semi-direct lighting.

Efficiency of Lights.

Can you tell me whether tungsten lamps are more efficient than those having carbon filaments?

Answer.—The 50-watt incandescent lamp will give nearly three times as much light for the same amount of current as the ordinary carbon filament lamp. It is claimed that the tungsten lamp will not depreciate in candle power, as is the case with the carbon lamp. It is a common thing for the tungsten to burn 1,500 hours under favorable conditions. The manufacturers of carbon filament lamps give the average light at 700 hours.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Locating Pumps.

Please inform me as to the proper position of a pump in relation to source of supply?

Answer.—The pump should be set as near as possible to the water supply, and care should be taken that the suction and discharge pipes are of proper dimensions.

Action of Water in Boilers.

Can you tell me whether water stands still in a boiler when the engine is running or whether it moves up and down in the glass?

Answer.—When the boiler steam space is small in proportion to the size of the engine cylinder the gage glass may show a variation at water level at every stroke of the engine. This is due to the water in the boiler seeking its normal level when the steam pressure fluctuates because of consumption of steam in the engine.

Uses for Fusible Plugs.

Would you be kind enough to advise me through your department what a fusible plug is and what its uses are?

Answer.—A fusible plug is made of metal with the center bored out and filled with an alloy of tin and lead, which melts at a fixed temperature. It is generally placed in the crown sheet, about 3 inches above the top row of tubes in boilers. In case of low water in the boiler the plug fuses as the temperature increases and melts, allowing the steam to escape into the fire and extinguishes it before the boiler can explode or become burned. Fusible plugs are principally used on marine engines.

Representative William C. Redfield and Major John Park Finley will be the principal speakers at the annual dinner of the Brooklyn League, which is to be held this evening at the Hamilton Club.

The Public Service Commission of the Second District, in nullifying the increased commutation rates adopted by the New York Central a couple of years ago, declined to accept the argument that the interest upon the Grand Central Terminal improvements should be paid by the traffic centering there. The income from the commercial buildings utilizing the "air rights" over the terminal yards should, according to the commission, eventually take care of the interest upon the terminal investment.

The first meeting of the Realty Forum, held last Monday afternoon in the Vesey street salesroom under the auspices of the Auctioneers' Association, was called to discuss the dual subway contracts. It may be doubted whether, in the present emotional disturbance over that matter, the discussion made any great impression upon newspaper readers; but if it did nothing else, it brought together a representative body of men who thought alike, and when people who are very much in earnest about a common belief are brought into personal contact with each other they frequently end by devising some effective permanent organization. It is to be hoped that the Realty Forum may be the starting point for a movement to consolidate all the taxpayers' and real estate associations of the city into a federation which will enable them to act as a unit on public issues without surrendering their individual existence or interfering with their neighborhood activities on local questions.

A Great Outrage.

The indications now are that after a little more delay the contracts for the dual subway systems will eventually be signed. The new chief of the Public Service Commission is a man of courage and ability, who will soon understand the unusual advantage, which the dual system has over any practicable alternative and who will not allow himself to be brow-beaten into acting in a sense contrary to the manifest public interest. The arguments in favor of the dual system have been placed before him with convincing effect, both by Mr. McAneny and by ex-Mayor Low.

The two arguments whose force it is impossible to break are, first, that no alternative plan could give the people of New York anything like such a comprehensive and effective increase in their means of communication; and, second, that under any alternative plan the cost of rapid transit to New York's taxpayers would be increased by some $4,000,000 or $5,000,000. If the city of New York was so situated that it could construct a municipal transit system as comprehensive as the dual system and as completely connected with the existing means of rapid transit the advisability of embarking on the experiment of municipal operations might be worth considering. But such is not the case.

A municipal system would involve the abandonment of two-thirds of the advantages in the way of improved transit which will be derived from the dual system. It can be favored only by those who believe in municipal ownership and operation as a dogma, irrespective of the service which it is capable of rendering to the people of New York. The vital business affairs of a great city cannot be conducted on the basis of adhering to a dogma, no matter how much it may cost the city in convenience, health, comfort, money and general prosperity.

It is fortunate indeed that the case for dual system is so strong. If its advantages had been less obvious and considerable, or if the alternative had been somewhat more practicable, the opposition to it would probably have carried their point. The history of political controversy contains many examples of gross systematic and malevolent misrepresentation, but assuredly there is no case in which misrepresentation has been more flagrant and more reprehensible.

It is an outrage that public officials whose honesty and good faith are irreproachable and who have worked so hard and so successfully in order to make a good bargain for their fellow-citizens in a matter of vital public importance—it is an outrage that these gentlemen should be subject to a stream of such foul and unscrupulous denunciation. If the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate were deliberately selling franchises of enormous value to a private corporation for a nominal sum and as a result of personal bribery, they would not have earned any worse abuse than that which they have already received in the columns of the "New York American." There are periods in which one is tempted to believe that the evils of yellow journalism are abated, but examples of this kind demonstrate unmistakably that the improvement is only apparent. It may be considered as certain that when any crisis occurs which will make unnecessary excitement and suspicion dangerous, that journals like the "American" and the "World" will use all their perverted ingenuity to increase the perils of that critical moment.

In the present instance, however, they have apparently wasted their vocabulary of abuse and misrepresentation. There is not the slightest evidence that public opinion has been impressed by their violent and frivolous attacks. They would not even have succeeded in preventing the signing of the contracts before Mr. Willcox left his office had not they been able to make a final use of the opportunity which the possible court review of administrative acts placed in their hands. It is no wonder that public opinion is beginning to protest against the arbitrary use of the powers which under our political system the courts possess to embarrass legislative and administrative action. In this case an injunction was affirmed on grounds which cannot be justified for one moment. Instead of being an example of hasty and ill-considered execution of public business, the contracts had been prepared with a deliberation which seemed to be excessive to an outsider, and with a solicitous care for the public interest, which confirmed the highest standards of administrative propriety. Every equivocal legal point involved by them had already been passed upon or approved by the Supreme Court, the Appellate Division and the Court of Appeals.

The complaint did not allege a single defect which had not already been adjudicated, yet an injunction was granted and the signing of the contracts was prevented. The success of the device does not make one any less indignant that it should have been possible to use it, but the delay may well have some advantageous results. The new head of the Commission will have the execution of the contracts and it is just as well that they should carry his signature. It is very much better that he should be expressly responsible for them than that they should have been imposed upon him without his consent. It looks as if the whole business would be settled before March 1st, in which case the people of New York will have much to be thankful for.

The Increment Tax Absurdity.

The committee of the Real Estate Associations succeeded in making a strong argument against the proposed increment tax, and considering the opposition which the proposal has provoked, it is wholly improbable that anything will come of it. The real estate interests should not, however, be satisfied merely to defeat the increment tax, but their position will be very much strengthened in case they can draw up and agree upon some practicable alternative plan. Even if all the other measures recommended by the Mayor's Commission are adopted, the gain to the municipal treasury would be comparatively small. The increment tax was to be the great money-maker. If the increment tax is abandoned, what is the alternative? The Record and Guide does not believe that any body of intelligent men would want to restore vitality to the tax on personal property. Probably the best way to deal with the situation would be to adapt to New York the tax on rents which is used universally in Europe. If the tenant of every apartment and dwelling of New York was taxed upon the rent he paid in proportion to the expenses of the city, New York would not only enter into possession of a large source of revenue but the people of New York would take a good deal more interest in municipal economy.

But every one knows that such a plan is politically impossible. Any general tax on business would be equally out of the question. In the increasingly close competition between New York and other commercial and manufacturing centres, a tax on general business would be a grave handicap to the business men of other cities and would result in the driving away of invested capital, and such a tax would cost far more than it is worth. There remain two suggestions which have been made, and which the responsible representatives of the real estate interests would do well carefully to consider. It has been pointed out that while a tax on occupancy is politically impossible, just as a tax on all incomes above the subsistence level is politically impossible, a tax on a limited class of occupiers might be both feasible and profitable. If a certain percentage were levied on all rentals which exceeded, say, $1,500, a good deal of money could be raised from people who could afford to pay it without incurring any serious loss. People of this class usually have to live in New York and would not move because of a small increase in taxation.

The other suggestion is the taxation of that class of business which is peculiarly metropolitan and cannot escape from the tax collector by moving to Boston, Philadelphia or Newark. A tax on restaurants, theatres, and hotels would be shifted to the consumer after a few years and would be borne without any great strain or loss. The Record and Guide does not wish to advocate unequivocally either of these taxes, but they are worth consideration. In any event the representatives of the real estate interests cannot afford to avoid the responsibility of making some positive suggestions to meet the present crisis. Future increases in taxation are inevitable and unless other sources of income are provided real estate will be face to face with a continuation of the existing depression.

THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE.

The sale of the old Gallatin mansion at Fifth avenue and 53d street was probably the most notable transaction of the last seven days. This structure, once a theatre of social events, will soon make way for a modern business structure and emphasize the northward invasion of business in Fifth avenue. Less than a decade ago one would have been deemed rash to predict the capture of Fifth avenue by trade north of 42d street, and it was opined by those who were considered in a position to know that St. Patrick's Cathedral would prove to be a dead line for business, and that business buildings would never intrude further north than 50th street. It will be recalled that Russell Sage removed from the avenue near 42d street because of the business invasion of the neighborhood, to a house on the avenue opposite the Cathedral, where he thought business would never go, and only a short time before, William K. Vanderbilt, Jr. built a house on the avenue adjoining that of his father at 52d street, that cost in the neighborhood of $600,000. Not long afterward, business began its march further northward from its then northern outpost in the forty streets. The Windsor Arcade was then considered to be a business accident in Fifth avenue, and the class of stores in it catered to immediate neighborhood wants. But all of this has changed and in the light of the experiences of recent years it is difficult to predict intelligently about the future of Fifth avenue within easy distance of 59th street. Madison avenue is showing stronger business tendencies year on year, and it is possible that the traffic between it and Fifth avenue north of 59th street may cause an influx of trade to the intersecting streets and especially with a subway operating through the East Side to the Bronx and the steadily growing importance of the Queensboro Bridge as a traffic thoroughfare. Another few years will, in all probability, witness the demolition of the Vanderbilt mansions on Fifth avenue in the neighborhood of the fifty streets or their alteration into business buildings.

Sales in Greenwich Village during the past week indicate a continued lively interest in that part of the city by investors. The passing of the old Perry Street Methodist Church and its alteration for business purposes shows the trend pretty strongly. In this connection it is interesting to recall that fifty years ago and less Greenwich Village was the acme of the aristocratic parts of New York. Its most distinguished citizens and its men of greatest wealth had homes there —and look at it now! The northward growth of trade transformed Greenwich Village, and history is but repeating itself along Fifth avenue.

The market in its entirety gave evidence of a good investment demand during the week. Buying was quite impartial, apartment houses, dwellings and vacant plots all forming striking features of the dealing. The Bronx was fairly active, and some important plots changed hands for improvement with apartment houses, which is the prevalent form of construction there now. Frame construction is disappearing in the northern borough, and fee values are advancing in a manner commensurate with the character of improvements and the demand for living space.

Brooklyn and Queens contributed some important sales to the week's dealing, and it is evident that these boroughs are becoming more important commercially. Large business concerns have moved into these parts of the city which would a decade ago have looked upon them as remote from all metropolitan activity.

A Missing Link in a Chain of Title.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

It would greatly facilitate title searching in the Register's office, and incidentally remedy an evil existing in the present system of indexing conveyances of real estate, if in the conveyance of realty sold by virtue of an execution or by a sheriff, a referee or other person pursuant to a judgment, the name of the person whose right, title or interest is being so sold, were inserted in the grantors' column of the index, under the name of the officer executing the conveyance.

Under the present system only the name of the referee is inserted in the grantors' column, which results in a loss of the chain of title from the time that the person whose interest is being sold acquired title. There is no way of establishing this chain of title again except by a blanket search of all "referee" conveyances, a task which is both arduous and uncertain of completion.

JACOB P. LOHMAN.

Commendation for the Realty Forum.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Having attended the meeting on Monday at the Real Estate Exchange, termed the "Realty Forum," we were confirmed in the belief that this is an opportune time to hold more such meetings, and at frequent intervals discuss those topics which concern us not only as real estate owners and taxpayers, but as citizens of this great city; and attest our interest by our personal attendance and co-operation.

There is every reason to believe that by co-operating an organization so strongly and wisely governed may be built up, that its voice will be heeded when public officials are to be selected for the government of the city, and that when elected, none of them may with impunity override the well known wishes and interests of those who pay three-fourths or more of the carrying charges of the commonwealth.

We were so much impressed with the good work which may be accomplished by the public discussion of public matters that we asked to have our names added to the list of Forum members.

LEGISLATIVE MEASURES.

Scrutinized By Real Estate Interests—Change in Widow's Dower Rights Favored.

The Law Committee of the Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York, of which Mr. Walter Lindner is chairman, is studying the measures that are being introduced for passage through the State Legislature at Albany at this session, and reporting its findings and recommendations. This is a duty which the same committee has performed for a number of years. Attention is given only to those bills having a bearing on real estate interests, and it is important to note the conclusions which the committee has reached on a number of bills.

Mr. Herrick's bill, to amend Section 109 of the Real Property law in relation to a widow's dower provides that a widow shall be endowed with a third part of all the land whereof her husband was seized "at the time of his decease," instead of at any time during the marriage. (See Record and Guide February 1, page 236.) The committee finds no objection to the change on principle, but advises that in order to avoid both practical and constitutional complications, there should be a provision that this act shall not apply to inchoate right of dower of any woman in the property which her husband has at the time the act takes effect, or had at any time prior thereto.

Real Estate Bonds.

Several bills have been introduced with the object of bringing under the supervision of the Superintendent of Banks corporations engaged in issuing and selling profit-sharing bonds purporting to be secured by real estate, and making it a felony to issue or offer for sale such bonds without the consent of the Superintendent of Insurance. The object of these bills should be approved, the committee says.

Mr. Duhamel's bill amending the City Charter in relation to the expense of street openings, and providing that one-half of the expense, together with the costs of the condemnation proceedings, shall be borne by the city, is not approved by the committee.

The principle contained in bills introduced by Mr. Duhamel and Mr. Larrimer, changing the law as to instalment assessments, so that it shall apply when the assessment is three per cent. of the valuation of the property, is opposed by the committee on the ground that it would multiply the city bookkeeping and defer the collection of the assessment in so many more cases as to result in a considerable hardship to the city.

The Torborg and McElligott bills, abolishing conditional sales and transfers of titles, is disapproved. The present conditional sales law affecting property to be installed in buildings has been passed upon by the courts and is becoming fairly well understood, the committee says. The amendment would leave the vendor with a lien upon the property, which would be a change in technical relation without any corresponding gain to either parties to the transaction.

Bills amending the lien law, introduced by Messrs. Torborg and McElligott, provide that a warrant for the seizure of a chattel in an action to foreclose a lien thereon may not be granted if more than fifty per cent. of the contract price remains to be paid. This bill, in the view of the committee, deprives vendors and mortgagees of proper security and should be opposed.

A bill amending the Labor Law provides that the present law for the filling-in of tiers of floor beams shall be changed so as to require that the filling-in shall keep pace with the construction. The present law requires the filling-in to keep within three tiers of beams in iron work, and within two tiers on buildings having wooden floors.

As a result of the Triangle Shirt Waist Factory fire, about two years ago, 32 bills providing for the better protection of factory workers have been introduced into the Legislature. The bills will reorganize the State Labor Department. They were drawn up by the State Factory Investigating Committee. Although the committee was originally appointed to investigate the fire hazard, it was found that there were other more pressing problems needing attention.

In addition to the matter of fire walls, limitations on occupancy, proper fire-escapes, sufficient exits, and similar matters, the committee also considered tenement home work, child labor and hours of labor for women. A joint hearing on all the bills will be held in Albany on February 19.

Garages in Residential Neighborhoods.

The need of some law or ordinance that will exclude public garages from where they would be a danger to life and property, as well as destroyers of realty values, had an illustration in West 105th street last Tuesday evening in the burning of a garage which was recently permitted to establish itself midway of the block between Amsterdam and Columbus avenues. On three sides are apartment houses and also a church, and on the opposite side of the sixty-foot street other apartment houses and a home for aged people. All of these buildings were for a time in imminent danger and the crisis fully justified the fears which the residents of the neighborhood formed when the garage was opened.

Human life is too precious and adjacent property too valuable in exclusively residential sections to be in constant jeopardy or dependent on the chance that some careless chauffeur will not drop a lighted cigarette on an oil-soaked floor. In one of the aldermanic districts of Brooklyn public garages and moving picture theatres are altogether prohibited by a city ordinance recently passed. With such a precedent, why cannot other parts of the city be protected in the same manner?

—The months of the year are well represented in the real estate field, since Mr. March owns 150 Chambers street, Mr. April is an uptown real estate man, Mr. May owns 339 West 58th street, Mr. June is a Bronx painter, Mr. July owns 322 East 18th street, Mr. August at one time held 315 West 27th street, and Mr. November owns 1358 Lexington avenue.

—What may have been the first marriage license granted in this city is that of Christian Lawrior and Mary Bunt, dated Dec. 1, 1679, and recorded in liber 1 of Wills in the Surrogate's Office of New York County. How a record of a license to marry has found its way into the records of the probate of wills is a mystery.

ways, entirely enclosed in masonry walls and accessible at each floor through self-closing metal doors insure safety to the occupants in case of fire.

The lot has a frontage of 80.10 feet on Broad street and a total area of 14,256 square feet. It was purchased by the Fifty Broad Street Company from the Empire Realty Company through Messrs. M. & L. Hess acting as brokers in conjunction with Leopold Weil. A building and permanent loan has been obtained from the New York Life Insurance Company by William A. White & Sons, the agents. The designs for the building and the supervision of the construction will be in charge of Messrs. Willauer, Shape & Bready, who was also the architects for the new twenty-five story Candler Building, recently completed at Times Square.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

Impending Strike of Railroad Firemen Worries Building Material Dealers and Wholesalers Caught Understocked.

Statistics of Consumption Covering Front Brick in This Market for 1912 Compiled—Harbison-Walker Refractories Company Purchased by Hay Walker, Its President. Receivers for Milliken Brothers, Inc.

WHILE the market for masons' supplies was light this week, the strength of the general building material situation was more than vouchsafed by the strength in structural steel. Definite market reports indicate that deliveries were being made in better schedules and the unfilled tonnages were being steadily reduced as a result of the January lull in specifications.

The cause of the sluggishness was attributable to two causes. Weather conditions checked deliveries and pending orders. Then the threatened strike of the railroad firemen made the market nervous on immediate futures especially since the dealers throughout the entire district are not plentifully supplied. The assurances from freight departments of some of the railroads handling building materials are that the trouble will be of short duration if indeed the railroads do not come to some understanding with the men before the strike actually becomes an accomplished fact.

The nervousness of the market is chiefly shown among dealers and distributors who are under contract to supply material to buildings now under way, many of which are rushing work so as to have them ready in time for the spring renting market. These interests will be the hardest hit because the wholesalers whose local stocks are low, can, in an emergency, charter boats to bring their lumber here in sufficient quantities to supply practically all their needs and to take care, by barge and boat, of the suburban requirements.

Ever since the firemen's strike has been talked of building managers have been laying in heavy supplies of coal against a possible shortage if the strike actually takes place or is seriously prolonged. The same is true of factory managers in the outlying districts who are more or less dependent upon the railroads for their fuel supply. New York practically has enough coal on hand to keep buildings and factories going for sixty days, but should the strike last that long, prices would, of course, advance not so much to the large consumer but to the users of domestic sizes.

The application made by the Milliken Brothers, Inc., structural iron fabricators of Staten Island, for receivers this week, did not tend further to strengthen the general market and had it not been for reassuring reports regarding the improved mill shipments, pessimism would have been more general. The trade, however, believes that the temporary embarrassment of this company, and the failures among contractors and realty companies recently reported, are due to individual causes and not to general basic conditions in the building market. It argues that if there was anything wrong, material prices would not be as stiff as they are and would not show a disposition to advance still further.

Common brick in this market is moving sluggishly, but Portland cement continues to hold a strengthening tone despite the cold snap.

STRUCTURAL STEEL QUIET.

General Deliveries Improving as Quick Shipments Are Being Made Possible.

THE strongest buying movement of the market this week was in structural steel. The mills are reporting an increased number of orders. The decline of 104,000 tons in unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation in January was in line with the lessening of the accumulation shown in the two months preceding. From the record increase of 1,042,000 tons in October there was a drop of 252,000 tons increase in November and to 79,000 tons in December, indicating that October was the culmination of the movement and that buyers are now concerning themselves more in getting what they have contracted for than in providing for uncertain wants.

At the same time the mills are recognizing that their great problem is to reduce arrears in deliveries, and in some cases where business is offered for the second half they are not disposed to make a more definite promise than "at the convenience of the mill."

This week's activity in fabricated steel included approximately 35,000 tons being placed mainly for commercial buildings and manufacturing plant extensions. These included 12,000 tons for the Queens Elevated Railroad, 1,500 tons for the new Bradstreet publishing building and 1,500 tons for the Sheffield Farms Slawson-Decker Company's building.

Wire Nails Go Higher.

THE week closed with an advance of $1 a ton for wire nails and other wire products and it is understood that the Jones & Loughlin Steel Company is prepared to follow the lead of the Pittsburgh Steel Company which made the initial announcement. The American Steel & Wire Company still maintains its old schedule. The volume of business in wire products is light. Specification on contracts continue fair but not as heavy as in January.

Milliken Brothers' Petition.

COMING as it did immediately after the petitions in bankruptcy filed by several more or less prominent contractors recently, the application for receivers made by Milliken Brothers, Inc., of Staten Island, proved a shock to the entire steel and building material market. The trade, however, looks upon this move in exactly the same light it surveyed the cases of the other contractors and ascribed the cause to individual difficulties and not to any weakness in the general building market. The company's own statement to the court shows that if given a little more time it will be able to fully get on its feet and it seems to those who are in the inside that this was more of a protective move possibly against impatient creditors than a public confession that its resources were fundamentally weak. In fact the company has plenty of work on hand which will bring fair profits if it is left unmolested.

The petitioner's statement makes it plain that the receivership was rendered necessary by the fact that the company was not in a position to pay the maturing sinking fund installment of $300,000 and the February 1 interest upon its first mortgage bonds. At a conference at which the principal creditors of the various classes were represented it was decided that in the interest of all concerned a receivership was advisable to the end that the business might continue without interruption. The creditors have given assurances of their cooperation and of the necessary financial support for the vigorous prosecution of the business pending an early reorganization.

Francis Dykes, who has been the general manager of the company for several years, will continue to be in charge of the operations of the company as one of the receivers.

It was said in 1907 that while the company's bridge department had been carried on successfully the construction of the open hearth steel plant on Staten Island, costing, it was estimated, at least $2,000,000 more than had been estimated, brought the company into difficulties. The rolling mill was shut down at the time of the first reorganization and the activities of the company were confined to its structural steel business.

STONE MEN INTERESTED.

Independent Companies Express Gratification on Government Sherman Act Suit.

CONSIDERABLE interest centered this week in the stone trade in the rumors and subsequent announcement that the Government was about to proceed under the Sherman Law through the Federal Court for the Northern District of Ohio against the Cleveland Stone and subsidiary companies to ascertain whether there is a combination existing there in restraint of trade.

The Government alleges that this conspiracy extends into the building stone, flagging, curbing and grind stone interests. The companies named in the bill as defendants in addition to the Cleveland Stone Company are the Ohio Stone Company, the Kipton Stone Company, the Malone Stone Company, the Forest City Stone Company, the Grafton Stone Company, the Currier Stone Company, the Ohio Grindstone Company and the Mussey Stone Company, all Ohio corporations with their principal offices at Cleveland; the Clough Stone Company at Elyria, the Berea Stone Company at Berea, the Atlantic Stone Company at Xenia, the Haldman Stone Company at Tippecanoe, and the following Indiana corporations: American Quarries Company at Mitchell, Pery Matthews, Buskirk Stone Company, Bedford Quarries Company and Indiana Quarries Company at Bedford and the Indiana Quarries Company of New York. All these firms are represented here.

The following individual defendants were named in the bill: George H. Worthington, Edward A. Merritt, Charles W McCormick, William E. Sanders, E. R Perkins, Andrew Squire, George R. Miller, George A Garretson and Charles L Jackson, all of Cleveland; J. H. Wade of New York City, George K. Beddoe of Brooklyn, Charles W. Walters of Chicago, and Thomas J. Vernier and J. C. O'Brien of Bedford, Ind.

COMMON BRICK DULL.

Cold Weather Checks Demand As Ice Cuts Off Supply From City.

COMMON brick moved slowly this week. The weather was too cold for work on buildings, and the general temper of the market was sluggish. Prices were unchanged although here and there a barge load went out below $7. Basic prices run from $7 to $7.25 dock.

FRONT BRICK STATISTICS.

Demand Has Been Good—Consumption Records Broken.

FRONT brick has been in good demand and prices have held at levels somewhat higher than in the last three years, and may stiffen further.

Approximate consumption figures for front brick in the Metropolitan district covering 1912 have been compiled. They show a material gain over the figures for 1911, 1910 and 1909. For the Metropolitan district the total estimated consumption of front brick in 1912 was 103,000,000; in 1911 the consumption was figured at 95,660,000; in 1910 96,000,000 and in 1909, 98,000,000. The estimated total of enamel brick sold in this district in 1912 was approximately 5,000,000 as against the estimate of 4,000,000 last year. This is not inclusive of porcelain brick which is figured as front brick.

The total consumption of front brick exclusive of enamels in New York City during the last three years with values follow:

Year.	Consumption.	Value.
1912	87,000,000	$2,436,000
1911	60,000,000	1,380,000
1910	70,800,000	1,699,200
1909	75,000,000	1,875,000

When a merchant decides to move into larger or better quarters, he begins to figure the "extras" in addition to the rental cost.

The cost and upkeep of floor covering is one of the most important items of incidental expense. One of the strongest arguments you can offer a prospective tenant is to show him a floor, which has the decorative effect of a rug, is resilient and a deadener of sound, with no expense for upkeep.

We are equipped to take your contract—furnish the material—lay the floor and guarantee the job. Call at our office for inspection of material or telephone for samples.

NORTH SHORE TRANSIT.

An Extension of the Dual System to Bayside Validated by P. S. Commission.

The residents of the north shore of Long Island, between Flushing and Bayside, have been actively at work in organizing associations for a concerted movement in having the Dual Subway System extended from Flushing to Bayside, Long Island. A petition of 3,000 names was submitted to the Public Service Commission by A. M. McKnight at a conference with the Public Service Commissioners at which President Pople and Mr. Terry, of the Business Men's Association of Flushing, also attended. The commission was asked to legalize an extension of the route from Corona to Bayside for a three-track elevated, with the exception of about half a mile through Amity street, which was asked to be of subway construction.

The commission took the matter under advisement, and it is believed that the members are in favor of extending this rapid transit route to Little Neck Bay, Bayside, but could not promise subway construction as it could not reverse its policy of laying down the route as an elevated structure, as it had done in all outlying Greater New York districts, but that a question of a subway through Amity street might be approved later on, when the question of consents for the route is undertaken. Consequently, they validated the route by Amity street and Lucerne place to Whitestone road, Bayside, and thence crossing the Long Island Railroad by Warburton avenue to Little Neck Bay, Bayside. Bayside is about the same distance from 34th street as Bronx Park is, via the present subway and elevated structures in the Bronx.

Mr. A. M. McKnight, Treasurer of the McKnight Realty Company, commenting upon this said: "The first year the elevated in the Bronx was opened, the average daily fares paid at the last three stations, except Bronx Park Station, which is largely used by visitors to the Park, was in excess of 30,000 a day. In three years these figures increased more than 70,000 per day and realty values in the vicinity of these three stations increased from an average of $400 per lot to more than $3,000 per lot. This was on a two-track elevated railroad. The extension, as proposed, of the Dual Subway System to Bayside will be a three-track elevated, providing a third track of express train service, and a 5-cent fare over all lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Interborough System in Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn, as the Dual contract provides for the operation of the present Corona Line and the extension thereof jointly by the Interborough and Brooklyn Rapid Transit Railways.

"People of Broadway, Auburndale, and the Bayside Districts are offering the same complaint as to the needs of rapid transit: the taxes which they have been paying, and which have increased 50 to 100% in the past four or five years, and for which no improvements in the way of rapid transit have been offered to this section. The completion of this Dual Subway System, as far as Little Neck Bay, Bayside, will place Northern Queens on the same plane as the northern section of the Bronx and Washington Heights of Manhattan, and will unquestionably prove a direct benefit to the residents and realty owners, and will compensate the 284,000 people in Queens who pay 38% more personal tax than the 430,000 people in the Bronx."

NASSAU FARMS.

Small Farms Increasing in Number in the County Consequent on Influx of Population to Busy Centres.

While all suburban parts of Nassau county, Long Island, are growing in population, an interesting contrast is afforded in the rural sections of it which are in the hill country in its central part. Much of this hill country is just distant enough from the railroad to preclude its development into home sites; and, in this respect it differs widely from growing centers like Hempstead, Rockville Centre and Floral Park, which are all in the level area. While the hill country has become, to a great extent, a theatre of country estates of the wealthy the hill country in the eastern part of Nassau county and the western part of Suffolk county is becoming not only a chain of fine estates, but some of their owners are demonstrating, in the cultivation of some of their acreage, the general utility of the soil, for market produce, in these inner recesses of the Island; and, it means much to the City of New York and to the nation at large because the economic advantages of modern agriculture are being demonstrated.

For example, at Bethpage, on the 3,000 acre estate of Benjamin F. Yoakum, the railroad magnate, experiments in the growing of crops, and the raising of chickens are being carried on. Mr. Yoakum, in his travels through the west and southwest, frequently addresses farmer audiences on the problems that confront them; and, his remarks are often based on observations made on his farm in Nassau county. He is a great believer in scientific farming and intensive agriculture.

As a result, small farms, conducted by young men, are increasing in number in the interior section of Long Island near the Nassau-Suffolk line; and, the all year suburban resident of Nassau county, in growing places like Lynbrook, East Rockaway, Oceanside and contiguous communities will derive the benefit through being enabled to buy vegetables, chickens and eggs direct from the soil of their own county because the best profits and the most satisfactory business for these small farmers are in the communities within easy traveling distance of their farms. The common use of the automobile among farmers nowadays brings a market for their produce to them easily. Much of the farm land intermingled with the wooded central part of eastern Nassau county is coming into agricultural demand contemporaneous with the flow of population into the important residential communities. Each condition aids the other. The improved transportation facilities on the suburban divisions of the Long Island Railroad are accelerating the growth of the level parts of Nassau county more than it was hastened in the past.

—Real estate values along the New York Central and New Haven lines, within the commuting zones, will be benefited by the reduction of fares which the Public Service Commission of the Second District has ordered. A dollar or two more or less makes a lot of difference with the average homeseeker.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS OVER $2,900,000.00

CONCERNING OUR LOANS

It is the leading feature of this business to assist worthy people in home buying and building and in paying off mortgages on homes, which, under the provisions of the New Savings and Loan Law, it is authorized and empowered to do to a greater extent than financial institutions of any other class.

When all surrounding conditions are satisfactory, we go as far as 75% of value, if necessary, in placing our monthly installment loans.

Under the operation of the New Law, which became effective on January 1, 1911, the loans we are now making provide for monthly payments at the rate of $10 per month per $1,000 of the amount of the mortgage, which payments include interest, or the mortgage can be paid off entirely at any time, and after one year by the payment only of the balance due on the mortgage, plus one per cent. of such balance.

Our loans are made on First Mortgage only and are for the exact amount of the cash advanced.

Our New System is so simple and direct that a borrower can tell at any time from the credits in his pass book just what amount will pay off his mortgage.

While the law permits us to loan within a radius of 50 miles, we particularly invite applications on private residential properties in Brooklyn, Queens, Bronx and Westchester.

New Sources of City Revenue.

Ninety-six per cent. of the total assessed valuation of taxable property, as stated in the report of the Commissioners of Taxes to the Mayor, falls on real estate. What an astounding and inequitable state of affairs! New York, the metropolis of the nation, the richest of cities, the world's financial centre and the leader in industries and manufactures, derives almost all of its revenue from one source. It has a system of taxation, a matter so vitally affecting the every-day life of every rent-payer and taxpayer, which is archaic, antiquated and time-worn, says a bulletin of House and Real Estate Owners' Association of the 12th and 19th Wards.

New sources of city revenue must be found—and quickly. The present system of taxation must be radically changed to meet existing conditions. All those who enjoy the protection and advantages of our city government ought in some way contribute to the cost of the running thereof. The committee appointed by Mayor Gaynor "to ascertain new sources of city revenue" has taken a forward step in this direction in several of its recommendations. Many of the suggestions submitted by the United Real Estate Owners' Associations to the Mayor's committee have been included in the report to the Mayor. The proposed "Increment Tax," however, was not one of these suggestions.

TRADE LITERATURE

The 1913 Book of Pipe Standards.

The 1913 edition of the Book of Standards is now being distributed, price, $2 the first since the 1902 edition. It is much larger and more complete than the older one, yet its 559 6x9 inch pages will fit the pocket readily.

The index is very complete, all headings being thoroughly cross indexed. It contains 4,000 references. Several pages are devoted to a descriptive article covering the main process of manufacturing both welded and seamless tubes, also giving information in regard to the threading, durability and physical properties, etc., of both "National" pipe and Shelby seamless tubes. Also there are a number of pages which give weights, dimensions, threads per inch, test pressure, sections of joints, specifications, etc., of the various kinds of pipe and tubing made.

An article on protective coating, Matheson joint pipe, and Converse joint pipe contains desirable information on these subjects.

Tubular electric line poles receive considerable attention and several pages describe and illustrate tables in regard to lapweld and seamless tubes, upset and expanded, wrought pipe bends, butted and strapped joints, bump joints, valves and fittings including various kinds of nipples and flanges, hand railings and ladders, working barrels, cylinders, Shelby seamless specialties, Shelby seamless cold drawn trolley poles, tables of various physical properties of Shelby seamless steel tubes, physical properties of carbonic acid gas, Briggs' standard, holding power of boiler tubes, thermal expansion of iron and steel tubes.

Considerable prominence is given to articles on strength of tubes and cylinders under internal fluid pressure and collapsing pressures, by Prof. R. T. Stewart, Dean of Mechanical Engineering Department, University of Pittsburgh. The mechanical engineer, especially in the connection with boiler engineering problems, will find this department of exceptional value.

An article covering pipe used as columns is given, tables are supplied showing the use of standard, extra strong, and double extra strong pipe based on the New York Building Code as well as the Chicago building ordinances, which make the volume a valuable acquisition to an architect's library.

Considerable attention also is given to the mechanical properties of solid and tubular beams, of usual and unusual shapes. As tubing is finding considerable usage in the mechanical field, notably in automobile construction, this data is particularly useful. This article is accompanied by tables giving the mechanical properties of solid and tubular beams of uniform cross section, various conditions of loading are illustrated and formulas are shown to secure correct values of their physical properties. Unusual shapes are illustrated and formulae given to secure their properties as beams or columns.

An article on safety factors and safe working stresses is given, which shows through what ranges, values should be used for safe operation.

Chapters are supplied giving information in regard to water, gas, steam and air. It has not been the intention to go very deeply into these various subjects, only in so far as they concern tubular products.

A large collection of tables in conjunction with explanatory articles is given, dealing with an idea of the extent of which can be secured from the following list:

Fifth roots and fifth power. Decimals of a foot for each 1-64 of an inch. Decimals of an inch for each 1-64. Wire and sheet metal gages in aproximate decimals of an inch.

Proportions of screw threads, nuts and bolt heads, illustrated explanatory article accompanied by tables showing dimensions of screw threads, nuts and bolts. Several pages are devoted to area and weight factors for tubes and pipes by means of which it is readily possible to figure the area and weight of various kinds of tubing. A special table is shown by means of which it is possible to find directly the weights of nearly all sizes and thickness of steel tubing up to 36 inches in diameter. By means of factors weights of various other metallic tubing can be found. A table showing properties of tubes and round bars is given with an explanatory article. This table gives various physical properties, including circumference, area, weight, surface in square feet, volume, moment of inertia, radius of gyration, etc., for tubes and round bars up to and including 36 inches. This data is given in increments of .01 inch up to 16 inches and increases from there by ⅛-inch increments to 36 inches. The metric system is included with conversion methods for most of the more commonly used measures including temperatures.

A glossary of terms used in the pipe and fittings trade will be found in the back of the book and in many instances the meanings of many of the more or less well known words used in this trade are defined.

Bungalow Types and Styles.

A beautiful book is being issued by the Building Brick Association of America, of 949 Broadway, which every architect and home builder should have. The book deals with the possibilities of obtaining artistic effects in small building construction. It also gives comparative costs. The work is being sold at 50 cents.

Pneumatic Water Supply Systems.

A running water supply for suburban service, using a tank from which the water is forced by air pressure, has met with favor. The Goulds Manufacturing Company, 64 West Fall street, Seneca Falls, N. Y., is putting out a hand-operated system for shallow wells, combined hand, windmill and power outfits for deep and shallow wells and large capacity power outfits for shallow wells or lakes. Booklets will be sent on request.

Inclined Railways.

It is the purpose of this catalog to bring to the attention of those interested in the many advantages of incline railways for developing and enhancing the value of property that otherwise would be practically of no value," says the Otis Elevator Company, in introducing to architects and engineers its latest bulletin on the subject of incline railways, which will be sent to any interested person upon application at the company's office, 11th avenue and 26th street, New York.

"Incline railways may be divided into three classes, namely: Tourist and passenger inclines, traffic inclines and commercial inclines. The tourist or passenger incline railways are used as a means of reaching some high point on a mountain or in a mountain range, where the view of the surrounding scenery is particularly attractive. Usually at the upper terminus of the incline railway a hotel or summer colony is established, and the adjacent land, because of the incline railway, is converted from almost valueless property into an attractive, popular and profitable mountain resort.

"These incline railways in the majority of cases where hotels have been erected or summer colonies established, have proved to be very profitable investments. This quick and comfortable means of transportation also results in developing the land on the mountain side for residential purposes, bringing large returns from its sale. There are, moreover, other conditions that make the incline railway an attractive investment for the purchaser. There are large tracts of land throughout the country that are practically of no value, their elevation making them inaccessible. These tracts of land, especially if in close proximity to a city, or even within a city itself, could be made extremely desirable and valuable for residential purposes if there were some easy means of approach. The incline railway provides the means of developing such tracts of land and makes them accessible and valuable."

Gibbons' New Catalog.

M. J. Gibbons, of Dayton, Ohio, who has achieved such remarkable success in furnishing rural and city homes with modern heating, lighting and plumbing improvements, has recently issued an elaborate new catalog which contains a wonderful amount of useful and valuable information for every home owner, builder and contractor. The book will be mailed free to anybody upon request to M. J. Gibbons, Dayton, Ohio.

Electric Equipment of Bakeries.

The General Electric Company has just issued Bulletin No. A4073, which deals with the electric equipment of bakeries. This bulletin refers to the sanitary advantages of such an equipment, the efficiency, economy of space, convenience, cost, maintenance and reliability, and illustrates the various pieces of aparatus used in bakeries, equipped with electric motors. It refers also to the electric lighting and to electrically heated ovens for baker's use.

Electricity in Construction Work.

The General Electric Company has just issued an interesting bulletin No. A4080 devoted to the use of electricity in excavation and construction work. The bulletin deals with both the generating of the current and its use through motors. It touches on the advantages to be derived from the use of electric power, and refers briefly to its application to the work in connection with the Panama Canal, Catskill Aqueduct, New York Barge Canal, and in general building construction.

Competition Among Electrical Contractors.

While addressing an audience of electrical contractors not very long ago a man prominent in the contracting business said that the time-honored assertion to the effect that competition is the life of business sounded well enough as a general proposition, but that in the electrical contracting field competition was altogether too often the death of profit. Speaking before the same audience, another contractor cited as evidence of improvement in the conditions in his own town the fact that, of the important contracts which he had recently secured, many had been obtained without any competition at all.

Such expressions as these are very interesting, but they are quite liable to create an impression which is not intended. Some remarks by Mr. Ernest Freeman, president of the National Electrical Contractors' Associaiton, at a recent meeting of the Illinois Association of Electrical Contractors, had important bearing on this subject.

Mr. Freeman explained that the national and State associations were not trying to eliminate competition so that prices for electrical construction be pooled or boosted. The one aim in this matter, he said, was to show the contractor what the elements of cost in electrical contracting are and to convince him of the folly of trying to install work for less than cost.—"Electrical Review."

Fifth Avenue Association.

The sixth annual meeting of the Fifth Avenue Association was held this week at the Holland house. President Robert Grier Cooke presented his report of the year's work and announced as a result of a convass of property owners it had been found that the general sentiment in the Fifth avenue section was in favor of limiting the height of buildings hereafter erected to 125 feet.

The officers elected were Robert Grier Cooke, president; William P. Sackett, first vice-president; George T. Mortimer, second vice-president; Gustav Baumann, third vice-president; Louis H. Hosmer, secretary; Frederick L. Eldridge, treasurer.

A Heating and Ventilating Code.

The most important topic at the annual meeting of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers was on the question of legislation for compulsory heating and ventilating. For a number of years both engineers, manufacturers and legislative bodies have been looking to this society, it was said, for a model form of specification which would be fair to the different manufacturers enabling them to furnish heat under conditions which were practically possible, and to the ventilating engineers, to allow them to furnish the amount of air changing required without an excessive cost that would place the installation beyond the reach of the average public building.

A draft of a proposed law was discussed, but final action was postponed. One of the sections provides that any room or apartment having less than 1,500 cu. ft. and more than 500 cu. ft. of air space for each and every person within the room or apartment, and having outside windows and doors whose total net area is at least one-eighth of the floor area, shall be provided with artificial means of ventilation which shall be in continuous operation during the period of occupancy when the outside temperature requires the windows to be kept closed.

The officers for the ensuing year are: President, John F. Hale; vice-presidents, E. F. Capron and A. B. Franklin; treasurer, James A. Donnelly; Frank T. Chapman, Ralph Collamore, D. D. Kimball, W. W. Macon, J. M. Stannard and Theodore Weinshank, managers.

The Fort George Tunnel.

The thousand-foot tunnel under Fort George Hill, giving ready access to the Subway from the rapidly developing Fort Tryon, Fort George and Bennett avenue districts, is practically completed and will be opened to the public in a few days. This tunnel is bound to prove a great boon to the residents of the district affected, who have hitherto been able to get rapid transit facilities to the heart of the city only by going to the subway in a circuitous route. Before the opening of the 191st street station on the Subway Division, about a year ago, the residents of the rapidly up-growing area of Northern Manhattan between 181st street and Dyckman street were forced to walk many blocks to enter the tube. But when this station was opened, the problem was not entirely solved. To the east was another fast growing neighborhood which also needed to be dealt with. Residents of the Fort George and Fort Tryon sections had to climb the hill in order to get to the subway, walking nearly half a mile. The new tunnel obviates all this.

The passageway—purely for pedestrians, of course—is 1,020 feet long, 12 feet wide and 12 feet high. It runs 225 feet under the surface of the hill on a level with Broadway, and cost $76,000 to build, the Interborough Bulletin says. The tunnel will be well lighted at all times and ample protection will be afforded those using it from "footpads," by two policemen stationed at either end of the tunnel every hour of the day and night.

Real Estate Insufficiently Safeguarded.

Lawson Purdy, president of the Department of Taxes, speaking to the New York Furniture Warehousemen's Association, said the rights of real estate owners are neither regarded nor safeguarded as they ought to be in New York. "We have allowed people to encroach upon the property of their neighbors," he said, "and the cost to the people has amounted to untold millions because their rights were not safeguarded so that their neighbors could not encroach upon them by the use of their own property. People in New York have been allowed to do as they pleased for many years, and we have gone so long without any policy that it is too late to recommend any now.

"The value of land has come to be based on the power to build lofty buildings. Many high office buildings in lower Manhattan do not pay because the light and air have been destroyed by neighbors who had been compelled to do the same thing, and we have brought all this on by not restricting the use of land. The other boroughs should profit by this example."

Up to the Small Town.

The problem of keeping the boy on the farm is a vital one, but it is not more urgent than that of keeping the boy in the small town and the interior cities of our various states. Now that can only be done by creating more opportunities for him. By the development of undeveloped sources of wealth which every community possesses. We are educating our boys, shoving them through High Schools and State Universities, and more and more they are taking to the modern constructive professions, to civil and mechanical engineering, as well as chemical and electrical engineering, and just as soon as they get through they must go somewhere else to find a market for their training and their knowledge. Now, I tell you it is up to the small town to develop its resources in order to conserve its best product.—its young men.—W. H. Miller at the National Federation of Retail Merchants.

New Electric Light Company.

The Long Acre Electric Light and Power Company has filed with the Public Service Commission an application for a certificate approving the construction of its plant. This company has been before the commission for several years in various applications for permission to issue stocks and bonds. Those applications were taken to the courts and long litigation followed. In December, 1912, the Court of Appeals decided that the company had not obtained from the proper authorities consent to the construction of its plant. The present application is made to get the approval of the commission for that construction. A hearing will be held on the application January 29.

MUNICIPAL IMPROVEMENTS

Public and Local Works Contemplated in the Greater City.

A Summary of the Proceedings of the Local Boards, the Board of Estimate, the Supreme Court and Various Commissions and Bureaus Relating to Street and Other City and Borough Improvements

The news collected here under the general head of Municipal Improvements is intended to be of service to property owners as well as contractors and brokers. It covers every measure looking toward a change in the City Map, toward the acquisition of title to real estate by the city or toward construction work, including the grading of streets, the laying of sewers, the building of schools, etc. Each such measure is acted upon by one or more—generally by several—official bodies before it becomes a valid ordinance. In these columns the successive official acts pertaining to it are noted from the time it is introduced in a Local Board or in the Board of Estimate. Wherever public hearings on it are granted, the fact is also announced.

Municipal improvements may be divided into two classes—those that are paid for out of the general tax levy and those that are paid for wholly or in part by special assessments on the property owners benefited. The latter, which are the more important to real estate owners, originate in the Local Boards. However, every local improvement, except certain street improvements calling for an expenditure of not more than $2,000, must be submitted to the Board of Estimate for authorization.

The news is classified and is printed in this order: Local Board Calendars, Local Board Resolutions, Proceedings of the Board of Estimate, Public Hearings, Assesements Due and Payable

LOCAL BOARD CALENDARS.

As regards the majority of city improvements, including all that call for special assessments, the Local Boards are in a sense neighborhood legislatures. They have absolute authority over certain street improvements, costing not more than $2,000. With respect to all other local improvements, they exercise full legislative functions, subject to approval by the Board of Estimate. The Board of Estimate seldom vetoes a measure coming from a Local Board. It is before the latter that the property owner should be most watchful to make himself heard concerning proposed improvements. When a Local Board resolution comes before the Board of Estimate, the presumption of expediency is on the side of the measure, as this has been adopted after open consideration by a body supposed to be familiar with local sentiment.

There are twenty-five Local Improvement Districts in the city, each with its Local Board. This is composed of the Borough President and of the Aldermen who represent the Aldermanic districts within the Local Improvement District. The Borough President's secretary acts as secretary of the several boards. Each board has jurisdiction over matters relating to its district. In the case of matters relating to two or more districts, the boards of the districts affected sit in common. The meetings are subject to call by the Borough President.

PUBLIC HEARINGS.

One or more hearings are granted in connection with all proposed improvements. In the case of local improvements, the first hearing is by the Local Board. Such hearings are noted in this news department of the Record and Guide under the general head of Local Board Calendars. Hearings by all other bodies are noted in the present column.

In acquiring title to land for streets, sewers, parks, approaches to bridges, etc., condemnation proceedings are commonly resorted to. A proceeding having been authorized by the Board of Estimate, the Corporation Counsel makes application to the Supreme Court for the appointment of three commissioners. If the cost of the land is to be paid wholly or in part by property owners benefited, the commissioners are known as commissioners of estimate and assessment. They hold their meetings at the Bureau of Street Openings, a clerical and legal organization under the supervision of the Corporation Counsel charged with the management of all legal proceedings which involve awards for damages or assessments for benefit to land.

If the cost of the land is to be paid by the city as a whole, as in the case of school sites, dock property, etc., the commissioners are known as commissioners of estimate and appraisal, whose place of meeting is at 258 Broadway.

In the case of assessments for local improvements of a physical nature which do not have to be confirmed by a court of record, the assessments come before three permanent commissioners appointed by the Mayor. They constitute the Board of Assessors, which has to do with assessments for such improvement as the regulating and grading of streets, the laying of sewers, etc.

By the Board of Estimate.

At a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, to be held in the City Hall, Manhattan, on Feb. 20, at 10.30 a. m., the following matters, among other matters, will be considered:

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Blum & Blum Win Competition.

The Freundschaft Club has selected the plans prepared by George and Edward Blum, of 505 5th avenue, for its new home to be erected at 105-107 West 57th street, diagonally opposite the Lotos Club property, on a plot 42x100.5 feet. The selection was made from a competition as the best design to meet the requirements of the club. It shows a five-story, basement and sub-basement structure, with foundations and walls of sufficient strength to increase it three more stories at the desired time. In addition to the usual features found in modern clubs, it will be equipped with a large ballroom and a roof garden, which can be enclosed in winter. The cost is estimated at $130,000.

Twelve-Story Loft on Bijou Site.

The site of the Bijou Theatre on the west side of Broadway, between 30th and 31st streets, has been purchased by clients of the Taylor-Sherman Company, of 500 Madison avenue. TOMKINS' DOCK PLANS.

Resubmits to Estimate Board West Side Terminal Scheme.

Dock Commissioner Tomkins resubmitted to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment this week his plan for terminal facilities and equipment thereof to serve the North River waterfront between Dey and West 60th streets. Much additional detail was added to the plan which was submitted last September.

Commissioner Tomkins has always advocated building an elevated marginal railroad to carry the tracks of the New York Central and any other roads that might desire traffic rights thereon. The Board of Estimate committee has been in favor of a subway.

Gas Pressure Regulations.

The Public Service Commission for the First District, by orders just served upon the companies, has established gas pressure regulations for all companies furnishing gas for light, heat or power in the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens with the exception of the 31st Ward of Brooklyn. This ward embraces Coney Island, where the consumption of gas is largest during the summer, and for this reason it is excepted from the order, but only until the commission can make observations of the conditions prevailing during the summer season, after which suitable regulations will be established for that ward.

The orders just adopted were issued on the recommendation of Commissioner Milo R. Maltbie who held hearings on the subject. They are similar in form and substance to the orders previously adopted for the boroughs of Manhattan, The Bronx and Richmond. In the main they provide for the establishment of pressure gauges, and thereafter for the maintenance generally of a minimum pressure at the consumer's end of the company's service pipe of not less than 2 inches water column, and for a maximum pressure not exceeding 6 inches water column. Limitations are also placed upon momentary and pulsating pressure variations.

New Plan of Subway Operation.

A committee consisting of George H. Beck, Henry G. Wynn, Henry Bloch, Frank Eberhart, Charles H. Schnelle and Charles W. Eidt, attended a conference at the office of Borough President McAneny, to consider the advisability of the plan presented by Mr. Wynn to change the operation of the completed subway system by dividing it into "zones." It is planned to have the local trains operate in three zones:

(A) From the Battery to 42d street;
(B) From the Battery to 86th street;
(C) 86th street to 149th street.

A local train leaving the Battery would go as far as 42d street on the Lexington avenue branch, turn west at 42d street to Broadway, and then proceed down on the Broadway branch to the Battery; and so with the other zones. No change is to be made in the running of the express trains. The only construction work that will be necessary in order to install this system, is the building of a connecting subway at 86th street from Lexington avenue to Broadway and a connection of about 150 feet at 149th street where the present subway and the new Lexington avenue subway almost meet.

The plan is supported by the House and Real Estate Owners' Association of the 12th and 19th Wards, which, through a bulletin, names the advantages that would accrue as follows:

Passengers desiring to alight at points south of 42d street would not occupy trains going north of 42d street. The statistics of the Public Service Commission show that the zone between the Battery and 42d street has the greatest number of passengers for local traffic. By this system there would be twice as many local trains south of 42d street as north of 42d street.

There would be a subway for passengers to ride from the east to the west side of the city or vice-versa.

The scandalous congestion at express stations whore passengers change for local trains would be avoided.

The city would have several crosstown lines of subway system, the crosstown subway at 86th street from Lexington avenue to Broadway satisfying a long-felt want. Communication between the east and west sides on 86th street by subway has become vitally necessary.

There will not be a congestion of empty cars at the end of the line, and there will be no need of running cars practically empty, in the upper part of the city.

Aid Asked in Smoke Study.

The University of Pittsburgh, through its Department of Industrial Research, of which Robert Kennedy Duncan, Sc.D., is director; Raymond F. Bacon, Ph.D., is associate, and Raymond C. Benner, Ph.D., is Chief Fellow, is sending out an invitation to architects, building managers, and building material interests asking them to supply it with information concerning the various effects of smoke on buildings and building materials. The principal questions covering the three subjects of "Architecture," "Interior Decoration" and exterior materials follow:

EXTERIOR MATERIALS:—

1. In a clean atmosphere the deteriorative process known as the "weathering" of building stone is often marked by a compensating improvement in the appearance of the exterior texture of the stone. In a smoky atmosphere, however, both texture and appearance are attacked, and an accelerated process of decay is accompanied by a progressive besmirching of surface.

With these facts in mind, are you of the opinion that the deteriorating effects of a hostile atmosphere may be arrested and the good appearance of stone be preserved against besmirching influences by some treatment that will render the surface of stone non-absorbent?

2. Have you made any observations or experiments that confirm you in the opinion given?

3. Do you know of any remedy other than that of filling the pores of the surface that is likely to accomplish the ends sought?

4. And if we regard moisture as the most potent means of conveying foreign matter into the pores of stone, is not the exclusion of moisture the first step necessary in keeping stone clean?

5. And would not a known means for rendering the surface of stone non-absorbent without discolorations of texture do much to promote an increased use of stonework in buildings and consequently prove of benefit to the stone industry?

6. Have you developed any special theory of your own with respect to the proper treatment of stone surfaces that you are willing to state for the benefit of others?

7. Have you made any personal experiments that may throw any additional light on the subject of this inquiry?

8. Have you, in your experience, become possessed of any formulae that may be useful treating stone surfaces?

9. Will you kindly give the results and state the comparative value of any materials you have experimented with?

10. Have you noticed that stone work decays more rapidly in a smoky atmosphere, and would you suggest that particular varieties be used where attacked by smoke?

11. Have you any special views and observations to contribute to the subject?

ARCHITECTURE:—

4. Do you advise your clients to use any special material in buildings or residences, as for example, brick, stone, terra cotta, sheet metal, etc., because of the presence of so much smoke and soot in this city?

5 Do your clients ask you to use any special material as above, because of smoke and soot in this city?

6. Does the smoke and soot influence you in your choice of style or character of architectural expression in which you design?

7. Does the smoke and soot influence you in the matter of detailing mouldings and ornaments?

8 Has the smoke and soot anything to do with your selection of color for exterior painting?

9. What, in your opinion, is the increased cost of the above items beyond what they would be if Pittsburgh were as free from smoke and soot, as for instance, Washington, D. C. (State amount in per cent. or if you have exact figures in mind we would be pleased to have them).

10. General remarks.

INTERIOR DECORATION:—

4. Owing to the prevalence of smoke and soot in the atmosphere, do you advise the use of paints, in this district, which have certain qualities which make them "washable paints"?

5. Do your clients, as a rule, select schemes for interior decoration in which the colors will show dirt, as little as possible?

6. Do you find that at the time of repainting your clients ask for a change of color because of the experience with smoke and soot?

7. Is interior repainting found necessary more frequently in Pittsburgh than elsewhere?

8. Is the selection of colors of wall paper affected and how?

9. How frequently is papering found necessary?

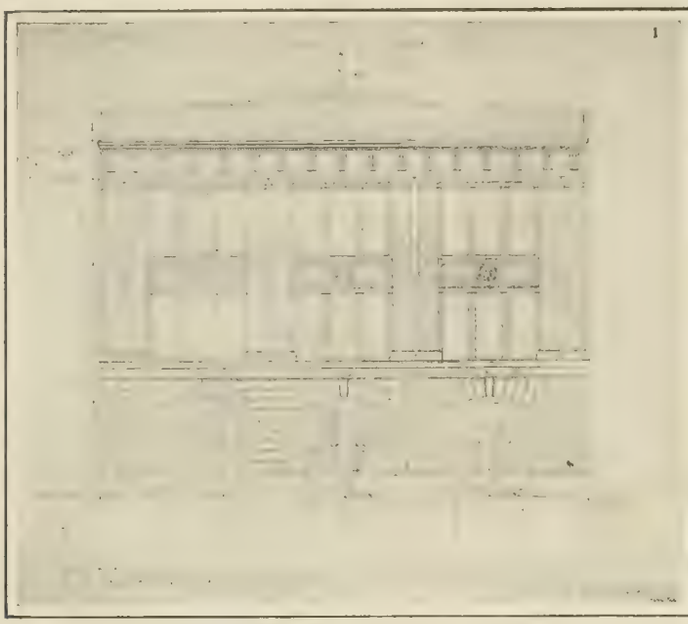
10. How frequently is cleaning the paper found necessary?

11. How is the selection of color of furniture, rugs, tapestry and hangings affected?

12. How frequently is cleaning or renewal of rugs, tapestry and hangings necessitated?

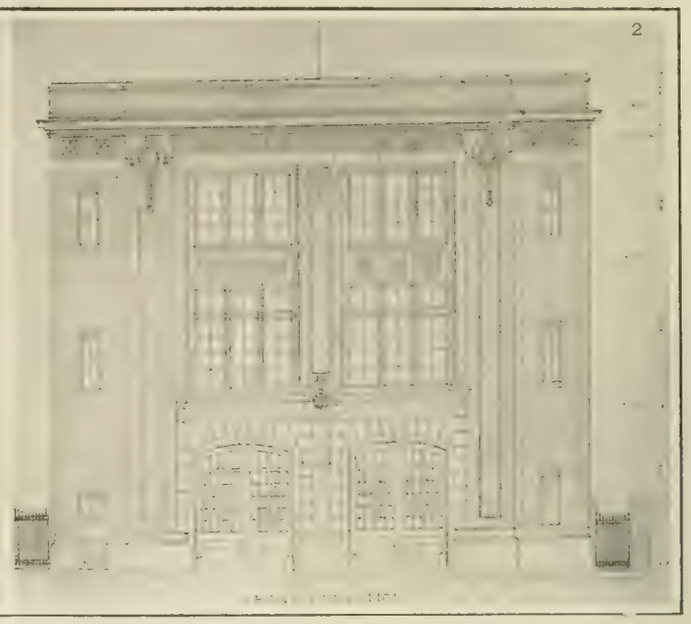
13. Are you limited in any way as to selection of materials, as for instance, in the matter of tapestry, or silk hangings for walls?

14. What, in your opinion, is the increased cost of the above items beyond what they would be if Pittsburgh were as free from smoke and soot, as for instance, Washington, D. C. (State amount in per cent., or if you have exact figures of any particular work in mind, we would be pleased to have them).



15. General remarks.

Noiseless Plumbing.



Most of the noise of plumbing work can be traced to four different causes, any one of which can be easily and inexpensively eliminated. Noisy water closets are due chiefly to the singing and hissing of water flowing through the supply pipe; to noisy ball cocks, which close so slowly that a disagreeable hissing noise is evident for some time before the water is shut off; to the way the flushing water strikes the contents of the closet bowl, and to the dashing of water against the sides of the soil stack when flowing to the sewer. The noise due to water flowing through the supply pipes can be eliminated by making the fixture branches sufficiently large so that the velocity through the pipes will be very low. This is where the architect can contribute to the noiselessness of the plumbing, by specifying large size water supply pipes, says a writer in Modern Sanitation.

He can still further improve his work by investigating the merits of closets more closely, and not assume that all closets will work equally well. Manufacturers must supply goods to fill the demand already created and for this purpose must carry an extensive line of goods suitable for all places, conditions and prices. In many buildings the noise of a water closet is not objectionable, so long as it can be had at a cheaper price than the noiseless kinds, and to fill such orders the manufacturers must stand ready. In the better class of work, however, such as private houses and hotels, noiseless closets are preferable, and the architect will do well to look carefully into the merits of the various combinations, so that when in need of noiseless goods he can specify them. Knowing the quality of the closets he specifies, he should then insist upon getting these fixtures and no other.

The Architectural Designs.

Forty-two buildings for the Fire Department are under construction or being planned at the present time. A map showing the location of each one was printed in the Record and Guide of June 1. Herewith are reproduced the architects' drawings of a number. The total cost of the forty-two new buildings will be $2,153,899, and the total cost of apparatus $1,259,000. The sites, twenty-three of which are new, will cost $124,370.

The architecture of the fire alarm stations will harmonize with the surrounding landscape scheme. All three are to be low-lying structures. All stations will be large enough only to hold the actual fire alarm signal plants. There will be no overhead wiring to mar the beauty of the surroundings and all wires leading to these places will be under ground and will form part of the underground fire alarm telegraph system which is being pushed rapidly forward.

Brick, stone and concrete are used in the construction. All the buildings have been designed with an eye for architectural beauty and utility, with a minimum of cost to the city. As a matter of economy, Commissioner Johnson deemed it wise to have a double engine and hook-and-ladder company under one roof wherever feasible, and after a careful review of the situation and personal inspection of the various sites he was able to do this in thirty instances. Frank J. Helmle of Brooklyn, is the architect.

In Brooklyn and Queens most of the new houses are located in sections which have become thickly populated during the last few years. This is also true of the new houses in The Bronx and in the upper part of Manhattan. In designing the isolated fire-alarm telegraph stations for Manhattan, the Bronx and Brooklyn, the Commissioner instructed his architects to plan types of buildings which will harmonize with the landscape scheme of the parks in which they will be located. All three are low-lying structures, pleasing to the eye, and in the opinion of the Municipal Art Commission are well adapted in every way for the purpose for which they are intended. Bids for erecting six more of the houses were received August 30. Two of the houses will be erected in Brooklyn, two in The Bronx and two in Queens.

The Fire Commissioner states that in the Fire Department budget for 1913, which he submitted to the Board of Estimate, he asked for an appropriation of more than $11,440,000, and that as forty-two more firehouses will be added to the department, more than one thousand additional men will be needed for the uniformed fire fighting force.

How the Building Year Opens.

Building projects are more numerous so far this year in Brooklyn and Queens than they were last year up to the corresponding date, but fewer in Manhattan, and The Bronx. The recession in the Manhattan statistics is entirely natural after the great rush of last year. Manhattan is devoted nowadays to heavy construction, most often requiring more than one year to complete, a great deal of work remains to be finished, steel deliveries are slow, and the first week of a new year is not the time to expect many plans for skyscrapers.

The case is different with the smaller work of the outer boroughs, where it is pleasant to see marked improvement insured. The signing of the subway contracts is certain to be followed by pronounced building movements in the outer boroughs, which will gain force and breadth as the new transit lines near completion. In Manhattan the building movements will be slower in gaining headway, but they will be of high importance.

Official reports from other cities for January disclose a decided increase in number and value of plans filed during January compared with the January of last year. In Chicago the increase is 250 per cent., Cleveland, 115 greater, Detroit 236 per cent. greater, Milwaukee, 381 per cent. greater, Scranton 200 per cent. greater, Newark 124 per cent. greater.

EXPLANATION OF TERMS USED AND RULES FOLLOWED IN COMPILING RECORDS.

Q. C. is an abbreviation for Quit Claim deed, i. e., a deed wherein all the right, title and interest of the grantor is conveyed omitting all covenants and warranty.

C. a G. means a deed containing Covenant against Grantor only, in which he covenants that he hath not done any act whereby the estate conveyed may be impeached, charged or encumbered.

B. & S. is an abbreviation for Bargain and Sale deed, wherein, although the seller makes no expressed consideration, he really grants or conveys the property for a valuable consideration, and thus impliedly claims to be the owner of it.

The street and avenue numbers given in these lists are, in all cases, taken from the insurance maps when they are not mentioned in the deeds. The numbers, it will occasionally be found, do not correspond with the existing ones, owing to there having been no official designation made of them by the Department of Public Works.

The first date is the date the deed was drawn. The second date is the date of filing same. When both dates are the same, only one is given. When the date of drawing is other than in the current year the stated year is given. When both the dates are in the same year the year follows the second date.

The figures in each conveyance, thus, 2:482—10, denote that the property mentioned is in section 2, block 482, lot 10.

It should also be noted in section and block numbers that the instrument as filed is strictly followed.

A $20,000—$30,000 indicates the assessed value of the property, the first figures being for the lot only and the second figures representing both lot and building. Letter P before second figure indicates that the property is assessed as in course of construction. Valuations are from the assessment roll of 1912.

T. S. preceding the consideration in a conveyance means that the deed or conveyance has been recorded under the Torrens System.

Flats and apartment houses are classified as tenements.

Residences as dwellings.

All Christian names, streets, avenues, states and months are abbreviated when possible, also in some instances names of Banks, Trusts and Insurance Companies.

The number in ( ) preceding the serial number to the right of the date line, at head of this page, is the Index number for the Checking Index.

The Star following names of street or avenue in the Bronx Conveyances, Leases and Mortgages indicates that the property recorded is in the annexed district, for which there is no section or block number.

THE RIGHTS OF PROPERTY OWNERS

By LAWSON PURDY

Consequences of Erecting Extravagently High Loft Buildings, Many of Which Are Not Fully Tenanted.

Mr Purdy is President of the Board of Tax Commissioners.

Evils Due to the Absence of Proper Building Regulations—Disappearance of Dwellings—Waste of Space.

EVERY property owner has a right to do anything he pleases on his land so long as he does not impair the equal liberty of all others to do the same. Unfortunately, our law does not adequately protect the owners of real estate from having their rights infringed by the action of their neighbors.

It is quite obvious that there are thousands of lots on Manhattan Island the value of which is substantially impaired by the erection of adjacent buildings of such character as to shut off the light and in other ways reduce the utility of neighboring lots. The law should not permit the erection of any building of such character as to be inappropriate, if every lot within the zone generally suitable for the erection of such buildings were similarly improved.

Anyone draughting building regulations should always keep the idea before him that the regulations should be such that the entire territory could be covered with buildings of the kind provided for. Our unfortunate city has had its appearance ruined and its utility immensely decreased by the lack of protection accorded to property owners. These matters are better governed in all cities of Europe. German cities have grown as fast as our cities, but they always give the impression of orderliness and harmony.

Frightful Waste.

To a greater degree every year, any observer of real estate conditions in this city must be impressed by the frightful waste involved by buildings being rendered useless on account of changes and conditions of neighborhoods. In part, this is doubtless inevitable, but to a large degree it is unnecessary, and is due to the license allowed of encroachments on the rights of others.

South of Chambers street the value of land is concentrated on Broadway, Wall street and a few of the neighboring streets. Within two hundred yards of Broadway and Wall street there are a few corner lots 25x100 worth $1,000,000 or more, while a few hundred feet farther lots are scarcely worth two per cent. as much. This condition has arisen from the UNREGULATED USE OF LAND.

Within a few years office buildings with ample light and air have been erected and full rented, which to-day cannot be filled at much lower rents, because their light and air have been impaired by the erection of similar buildings, the erection of which one may say was forced by the very permission to erect them, which produced an enormously high land value.

If, thirty years ago, suitable restrictions had been placed upon the height of buildings, there would not today be one dollar less of land value south of Chambers street; but the high points would not be so high and the low points would not be so low. The value WOULD BE MORE EVENLY DISTRIBUTED throughout the territory. The streets would not be so congested; so many men and women would not be working by artificial light; there would be more health and comfort for every one in the downtown district, to say nothing of more beauty, and less waste of capital invested in business.

Half-Rented Loft Buildings.

No one can walk today through lower Fifth avenue and the streets east and west of Fifth avenue without being saddened by the dark, gloomy, congested condition produced by the erection of extravagantly high loft buildings, many of which are but half tenanted and paying but little return on the invested capital.

Within thirty years millions of dollars have been invested in fine private dwelling houses between Central Park and the North River. What is the value of those houses today? In many cases the value has gone entirely, and good houses fit for a hundred years are torn down to make way for a nine- or ten-story apartment house with an extravagantly ornate front and a hideously unclothed and unashamed rear; and on some fine streets these lofty buildings line the street. Light and air are lacking, and so are rents.

Violating an Old Principle.

From the most material point of view hundreds of millions of dollars have been lost because we have disregarded the old principle that a man may not use his land so as to invade the rights of others. It is doubtless too late to save most of Manhattan, but it is not too late to save the other boroughs from a similar fate.

The evils already described have sprung mainly from the lack of proper building regulations, models for which can be found in every European city. Berlin properly goes so far as not to permit the builder to affront the eyes of the citizen. Some of the troubles of real estate investors are due, however, to individual greed.

Individual Responsibility.

A practice not unknown is to erect an apartment house, fill it with tenants at half the rents shown by the rent receipts, and sell it to an innocent investor at a sum representing the fictitious rent capitalized. Soon after the investor takes possession, the tenants move on to the next building completed by the speculative builder and the investor finds an empty house, which he can fill only at rents much less than those on the faith of which he bought the property.

These fictitious rents again induce the erection of more buildings of the particular type than the market demands, resulting in a waste of capital, which must be paid for by the community in some way. Probably no law can remedy this evil, or should attempt it, but the lenders of money on building loans can do much to prevent reckless and dishonest building operations.

Straighten the Harlem Ship Canal.

The Harlem Ship Canal is of little use to commerce compared to what it might be. The piers of High Bridge obstruct navigation for large boats, and the sharp turn at the Johnson foundry is another difficulty to contend with. The U. S. Government ought to provide against the time when the Hudson River steamboat lines, especially those carrying freight as well as passengers, will be forced away from their historic docking places on the lower West Side and will have to find berths in the Harlem. A couple of the High Bridge piers should be removed, the double curve opposite the foundry cut out, and the Bronx Kills opened to navigation. Make these changes, establish markets on the river front on both sides of the river, and the river and sound boats will enter and make the shores of the Harlem one of the most desirable parts of the city to live and do business in.

PRIZE-WINNING APARTMENT HOUSES

New York Chapter of Architects Gives Medals and Honorable Mention to Owners of the Best Designed Houses of the Year.

OWNERS and builders are finding from experience that it pays them to have their apartment houses well designed, and that their reward for contributing to the good appearance of the city does not consist merely in the commendation of the public. This has been proven in the case of a number of fine houses finished within a year or two. Who the owners of some of the houses are was disclosed at the annual banquet of New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects at the Hotel Plaza on Thursday evening.

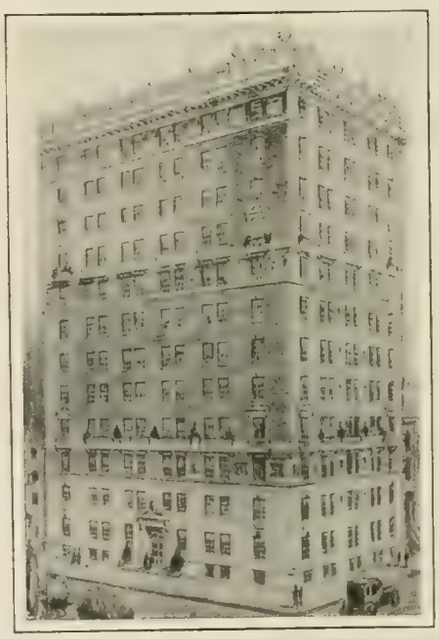
The names of the owners of the five best apartment houses were announced by President Robert D. Kohn and the two medal winners were called forward and personally presented with the prizes that had been awarded by a jury of experts. Similar awards are made annually, with a desire on the part of the chapter to encourage good street architecture and at the same time to accord public recognition to the person in each case really responsible for the good work—the man who foots the bill.

The Jury.



The jury of award this year consisted of C. Grant LaFarge, Lawrence F. Peck, George B. Ford, Walter B. Chambers, Henry Atterbury Smith, Robert W. de Forest, Tenement House Commissioner John J. Murphy and Secretary Egerton Swartwout of New York Chapter.

The awards are made for two classes of houses, the first class consisting of houses more than six stories high, and the second class of houses of six stories or under. In the class for the larger houses a gold medal and two honorable mentions were given this year, and for the smaller houses a gold medal and one honorable mention.

The Prize Winners.

James T. Lee, president of the Century Holding Company of 1182 Broadway, received the gold medal for the large apartment house at 998 Fifth avenue (Fig. 1) which is near the Metropolitan Museum of Art. This was the first modern apartment house to be erected in "Millionaires' Row." Designed by McKim, Mead & White, it is worthy of the prominent and costly site it occupies and of its aristocratic surroundings. Immediately it was rented to families of high social position for the highest rentals ever paid in New York for apartments. It has not only proved a highly successful financial venture, but is to be credited with helping very considerably to change the ideas formerly held among wealthy people in regard to living in apartment houses. A deep-seated repugnance has been very generally removed by the excellent class of houses now being erected.

The other gold medal was awarded to the Wedgewood Company, of which Henry F. Keil is president, for the apartment house on the west side of Decatur avenue, one door north of Fordham road (Fig. 4) which was erected from plans of A. J. Thomas, architect, with offices at Fordham road and Webster avenue. The house in question contains five stories and is of semi-fireproof construction.

There are stores on the grade floor which have brick arches over the store fronts to do away with all projections over the building line.

The building illustrates how by the use of simple, inexpensive materials a very attractive and even artistic appearance may be given to a facade. The award in this case proves that a building need not be very costly in order to win a gold medal for excellence of design and construction, and that a little brick house up in Fordham is just as worthy of a medal as the big stone mansion in Millionaires' Row, where the rents mount close to $25,000 a year.

A special feature of the design of the Wedgewood Company's house is the open loggia connected with the entrance hall and stair hall to the roof, all treated in front brickwork and trimmed with marble. The entrance hall has marble mantles, radiators concealed in pedestals and a ceiling composed of elliptic art glass lighted from behind. Although the building is not yet finished, both the apartments and stores are fully rented. Said a leading member of New York Chapter yesterday, when commenting on the awards:

Profit in Good Architecture.

"Here is the point which now ought to be brought out most prominently. It means money in the pocket to employ an architect of widely recognized ability. An owner who does this and gets an artistic though not necessarily an expensive building, not only performs a patriotic duty but also gets a house which everybody, so to speak, would like to live in, and he derives the very highest income that any building of its size and situation could produce.

"Do you suppose that Mr. Lee, the president of the corporation owning 998 Fifth avenue, could have obtained tenants willing and able to pay twenty to twenty-five thousand dollars a year for apartments in his house if he had chosen a poor architect? He surely would have had to content himself with a smaller revenue that he now receives.

"I know of a dwelling which was designed by a member of our chapter and built in New Jersey, which cost the owner about twenty-five thousand dollars. In the same place and close by another house was built from plans furnished by a local builder. This house also cost about twenty-five thousand dollars, but the one designed by the prominent New York architect was sold for forty thousand dollars and the other one for only twenty-two thousand. In other words, the owner of the first named house got a dwelling worth far more than it cost, while his neighbor got one that wasn't fully worth what he paid for it."

Honorably Mentioned.

Two apartment houses over six stories in height, received honorable mention, the first of these being the house at 401-405 Park avenue, owned by the Park Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street Company, of which George R. Coughlan is the head. (Fig. 2). The architects were Cross & Cross of 527 Fifth avenue.

The second honorable mention in the class of apartments over six stories high was awarded to Clinton G. Marshall, president of the corporation owning the house at 135 West 58th street, for which Walter B. Chambers of 109 Broad street, was the architect. (Fig. 3).

The first and only honorable mention given for houses of six stories and under went to Mr. A. Feldman, owner of the A. Feldman Construction Company, for the house which he erected on Riverside Drive at the corner of 149th street, from the design and plans of George & Edward Blum.

President Robert D. Kohn was the toastmaster of the occasion and among the speakers heard were Borough President McAneny, Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, Edward M. Bassett, Grant La Farge, and Walter Cook, president of the American Institute of Architects.

President Robert D. Kohn in presenting the medals at the banquet, said:

"It is my privilege as President of the Chapter now to announce the decision of the jury on apartment house medals and mentions for the year 1912. As our members know, this is the third award of this character. The chapter adopted the scheme in 1910. Its purpose is by this time, I think, well understood in the city. The members of the chapter wish to encourage excellence of design in the exterior of apartment houses. Two separate awards are made: one for buildings six stories in height or under and one for buildings higher than six stories.

"The qualities of design which it is desired to encourage, and to which the jury gives particular consideration in reaching its decision are the following: Simplicity, good proportion, the artistic and practical use of inexpensive material, the avoidance of imitation of sham material, adaptability of design to site, and the satisfactory solution of the essentially utilitarian problems of design, such as fire-escapes, tanks, bulkheads, awnings, etc.

"It was our belief in establishing this scheme that no more helpful step could be taken towards the improvement of the general appearance of our city than to encourage better design in the exterior of our tenement houses. We have reason to feel encouraged even in the short period that our plan has been in operation.

We believe the owners responsible for the construction of our apartment houses are beginning to realize the importance of good design as an essential part of the success of such buildings, and we take credit to ourselves for at least a small portion of the advance that has been made in this movement."

LICENSING BUILDERS.

Commissioner Murphy Opposed to Restricting Anyone's Right to Earn a Living.

It is a big question which the Superintendent of Buildings in Brooklyn has again opened up by causing a bill to be introduced in the State Legislature providing for the registration and licensing of builders. At one period the Legislature seemed to encourage the idea that trades and callings should be hedged around, and that no one without a certificate of competency should be permitted to practice therein, but of late years it has not been prevailed upon to add to the list of protected occupations.

Superintendent Carlin pointed out through the Record and Guide last week some of the evils that have grown up under the open-door policy in the building trades, evils which have resulted in the shoving aside oftentimes of competent mechanics, to make way for men unfit for their calling and having little pride in their work.

A larger view of the subject was taken by Commissioner John J. Murphy of the Tenement House Department when interviewed this week for the Record and Guide. The Commissioner has not yet seen the actual text of the bill in the Legislature, but he said that with the general principle that people should be required to take out a license before being permitted to earn a living in any legitimate business, he had no sympathy.

"I think that the right to work, provided that one's efforts are directed in a legitimate direction, is, or ought to be, inalienable," remarked the Commissioner. "Unfortunately, our social structure is so misshapen that evil consequences seem to follow from the application of right principles. Anyone who has direct contact with the building and construction business must realize the importance of securing greater responsibility on the part of men who engage in it. If horseshoers and plumbers require to be licensed, it would seem to be much more necessary that men engaged in important work like building should be so regulated.

"It is to be hoped, however, that the bill will be so drawn as to protect the public, as far as possible, from the abuses which have notoriously attended the operations of the same policy in the past in other departments of work. The danger lies between the possibility of the creation of a close combination on the one hand and the throwing open of the license to anyone who will pay for it, directly or indirectly. I have had no doubt for a long time that architects should be licensed. The fact that they do not supervise the buildings which they have designed is one of the evils of which we have most often to complain."

New Rapid Transit Routes.

The Public Service Commission for the First District has transmitted to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment resolutions laying out two new rapid transit routes needed for the Dual System. One is known as the Park avenue-Lexington avenue connection at 42d street, Manhattan, and provides for the connection of the existing subway with the new Lexington avenue subway.

The other is known as the Flushing route and provides for the extension of the Woodside, Astoria and Corona route in Queens from its present terminus at Prime street, Flushing, through Roosevelt avenue, Amity street, Marston avenue, Lucerne place, Station road, and Warburton avenue to Bay Side boulevard. This route will bring the district in and around Flushing and Bayside into all-rail communication with Manhattan.

—The Public Service Commission has ordered that a hearing be held February 25th, before Commissioner J. Sergeant Cram, on the application of the Central Crosstown Railroad Company for the approval of the abandonment of a portion of its railroad in East 17th and in East 18th streets, between Broadway and Avenue A. The company's petition says that there is no longer any necessity for the operation of the road through such portions of these streets.

THE SUBURBAN HOUSE AND ITS GROUNDS

By WILLIAM HERBERT

Almost any Site in a Good Neighborhood Can be Made Habitable and Charming if Large Enough and Rightly Handled

WHERE SUMMER PORCH LIFE CAN BE ENJOYED.

NOT so many years ago a man who wished to write about the relation of the ordinary suburban house to its natural surroundings could have found almost nothing to say. The ordinary suburban house had no surroundings. It was often situated on a lot very much wider than the house, and usually it differed from the city house only in being detached. In purchasing such a lot and in adapting a house to the site, all that could be done would be to secure the best exposure for the living-rooms and to make use of any trees or any view of which the property might possibly be possessed.

As we have already seen, a strong tendency has existed of late years to change all this. The average suburban house is surrounded by more land than formerly, and the land selected by development companies is more frequently irregular, picturesque and heavily wooded. Such a property offers many sites having certain peculiar advantages, and the wise buyer is he who can distinguish those advantages of location that will contribute most to his pleasure and comfort. Even in case the property is flat, treeless and devoid of interesting outlook, much can be done by an intelligent owner and his architect to make it unusually attractive and comfortable.

Where Economy Is a Mistake.

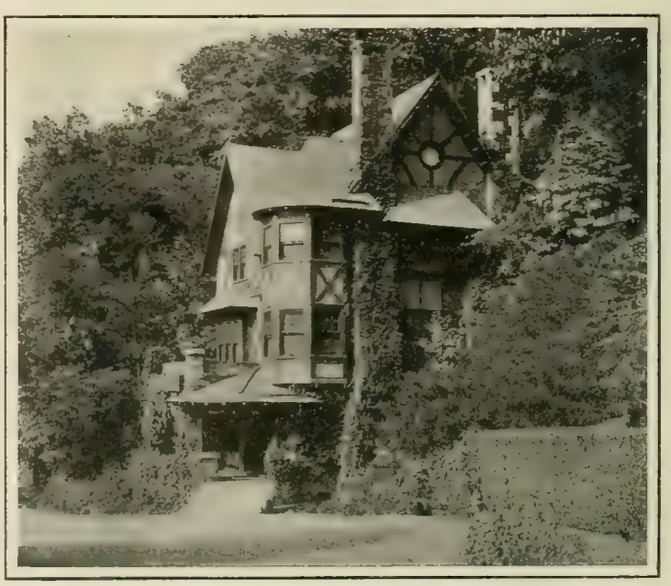
The one indispensable condition of doing so is the purchase of a lot or of a house situated on a lot large enough to permit of some development. Unless it is a matter of absolute necessity, the suburban resident who economizes drastically on the size of his lot is making a grave mistake. The benefit which he gets from his residence in the suburbs depends in certain essential respects upon the amount of space which he owns around his house. If he has enough space for some trees and shrubbery for a garden, and for a playground, it is evident that he is securing for his family and himself a very good imitation of real country life.

Moreover, the site constitutes the profitable part of the purchase. It may and usually does increase in value while the house necessarily diminishes in value.

Give Your House a Spacious Site.

But it is, as I have said, particularly desirable to surround a house in an uninteresting situation with a spacious site, because the occupants of such a house are dependent for the attractiveness of their place upon the way in which the ground around the house is treated. Taking in, as they would be, an uninteresting outlook, they must make their own grounds more interesting, and it is always possible to make them very interesting indeed, provided the site is not too small. The object of such a treatment would be to shut out somewhat the comparatively uninteresting environment and plan the grounds so that they would be somewhat private and domestic, like the house itself.

Hedge It Around.



This does not mean that the grounds should be surrounded by a high wall that would be beyond the means and obnoxious to the feelings of the majority of suburban residents, but it does mean that the property should be surrounded by a picket fence and should be so planted, either with hedges or shrubbery, as to provide an effectual screen against the curiosity of the passer-by on the street or road. But the real object of such a screen would not be so much the protection of the house and grounds from the inspection of strangers as to provide a background for an attractive and entertaining outdoor domestic life for the family.

Treatment of the Grounds.

No rules can be laid down for the treatment of the grounds in order to make them a really appropriate extension of the interior of the house. It will depend upon the shape and size of the plot, the point of the compass in relation to the street and road, and the needs and means of the family. Some houses will be situated near the street and will have the grounds in the rear, as the suburban houses of our colonial ancestors. Others will be situated at some distance from the street and will have their grounds in front. Some will face the street, and some will turn their end to the public and will have an entrance at the side.

Position of the Rooms.

In planning these arrangements it must be remembered that the living-room should, if possible, be faced south, and the dining-room east, and that the chief bedrooms should not, unless it is necessary, face the west. West rooms are the hottest of all in summer. Considerations of exposure should of course be modified somewhat by the desire to obtain full benefit from the prevailing wind during the hot weather. If because of the proximity of the ocean, the prevailing wind in summer should not happen to be from the south, the problem does not have to be spent on grading. But the suburban resident should be circumspect and take good advice before he buys a house or lot situated on an irregular piece of land. The desirable sites in an irregular and picturesque country are more desirable than sites containing an even larger area in a flat and uninteresting country, but the undesirable sites in an irregular country may be far less desirable than a piece of land which has no natural attractions.

Almost any site in a respectable neighborhood can be made habitable and even charming if it is large enough and is handled with intelligence and good taste. On the other hand, no amount of good management can make a house becomes complicated. Many families would sacrifice a certain amount of sunlight in cold weather in order to obtain all the air that is blowing in hot weather.

Of course the planting should in some measure be determined by considerations of the same kind. Trees and large shrubs should be planted so as to break the disagreeable winds while allowing the agreeable winds so far as possible a free passage.

Hillside Lots Preferable.

Many of the foregoing considerations apply to an irregular as well as to a flat site, but in the case of an irregular site they are complicated by many additional considerations. Lots situated on a hillside are usually to be preferred, provided the hillside faces a pleasant view and a desirable exposure, and provided, also, too much money pleasant, in which the living-room and piazza have to be faced north, because of the lay of the land. The adaptation of the plan of a house to the layout of the ground and to the points of the compass is one of the most difficult and complicated parts of an architect's practice. The result in any particular case is almost always a compromise. Some advantages have to be sacrificed to others. But a purchaser should be sure that the compromise adopted has preserved those advantages which are most likely to contribute to the happiness of himself and family.

What Style of House.

A general impression prevails that a picturesque site should be improved with a house designed in one of the picturesque styles; a house, that is, which also is irregular in outline, symmetrical in treatment and loose in composition. This impression is wholly without foundation. There is no reason why a Colonial house that is an example of balanced and symmetrical design should not be placed on the most irregular of sites. It all depends on the way the house is treated, the way it is placed on the site, and the way in which the site itself has been graded, in order to give a proper resting-place for the building.

Colonial Houses.

In all probability more grading would be required in order to suit a Colonial house to an irregular site than would be necessary in the case say of an Elizabethan house; but even this rule would have many exceptions. Extremely artificial and classic designs, as every student of Italian villas and gardens knows, often harmonize perfectly with irregular and even precipitous sites. On the other hand, a picturesque house never looks better than on a perfectly level site. In both cases the successful effect depends upon the treatment of the grounds and upon the size and location of the neighboring trees. The essential thing is not to have a house designed in any particular style, but whatever style is adopted to make sure that it is competently handled. A good Elizabethan house, no matter where it is situated, is always better than a poor Colonial house. Fortunately, as we have already seen, the better development companies sell to their clients on the average better houses than these clients would have built for themselves. Their regular designers, while not impeccable, almost always do a good average building, which raises rather than deteriorates the aesthetic standards of their occupants.

More Elevators for 181st Street.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company has notified the Public Service Commission for the First District that it has let a contract for the installation of an additional elevator at the 181st street station on the Broadway branch of the subway. The Otis Elevator Company has the contract and expects to have the new elevator ready for operation April 1. There are now four elevators in this station, but there is room in the shaft for two more, which have already been ordered by the commission. The one now being installed is the first to be supplied under that order.

THE WEST SIDE SUBWAY QUESTION

Hugh Gordon Miller Explains the Situation Which Confronts Property Owners—High Taxation in Anticipation of Transit Improvement.

The Seventh Avenue Association of Manhattan, including taxpayers in the whole section between Sixth avenue and the Hudson River, in urging the prompt execution of the pending subway contracts, have called the attention of the Public Service Commission to the state of affairs existing in the territory concerned, as described in a memorandum filed on behalf of the association by Hugh Gordon Miller.

UNLESS the contracts are promptly executed and the plans for the Seventh Avenue Subway perfected, the taxpayers on that whole West Side of the city of Manhattan, along and adjacent to Seventh avenue, will have to very materially reduce the valuations placed upon property for taxation purposes and which will have, unless the subway for Seventh avenue is consummated, been burdensomely, and almost to the point of confiscation of property, inflicted upon them under the city's pretense of said subway for the past several years. This reduction, which must be brought about either voluntarily by the city or by the court decisions, will not be less than 25 per cent. of the present assessed valuation in that section, and will amount to at least $10,000,000.

This does not take into consideration the increased assessment which has been placed on property in a section known as Greenwich Village. Let me illustrate by a concrete case. The property adjoining the corner of Seventh avenue and 29th street is assessed at $44,000. It is covered by three buildings four stories in height and rents for less than $1,400. As it is assessed on a basis of $44,000, the taxes amount to $820 as against a gross rent of less than $1,400. This has been done by the city and endured by the taxpayers on the implied promise by the city of the construction of the Seventh Avenue Subway. There could be no other excuse for such a tax situation on the part of the city, so that the city is impliedly, at least, if not legally, and certainly morally, committed to this Seventh avenue project, and has obtained already hundreds of thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money in this section on such basis.

High Taxation.

The tax increase, resulting from this implied promise of the city to build this subway, has during the time of these promises, amounted to from one hundred to five hundred per cent. increase. It is obvious that this rate of taxation so made cannot continue unless conditions are improved by the subway building, and the development of the Pennsylvania station and transit matters incidental thereto.

We hold no brief for the Pennsylvania Railroad, but doubt that this railroad would have planted $125,000,000 of money in the West Side of the city of New York for such a depot and tunnel and other improvements if it had not been led to believe by the city of New York that it would have subway connections commensurate with its outlay. To fail to keep these implied obligations would be acting in bad faith to the taxpayers.

The development of this Seventh avenue section, justifying the tremendous taxation rate, will not, as everybody knows, take place until the subway with its Seventh avenue line is settled upon and the work begun. It would be nothing short of getting tax money on false pretenses, a poor example for the city to set for its citizens.

A Billion Dollars of Over-valuation.

I have no doubt that this increased tax rate situation has been carried out throughout the greater city—during the years of this subway constructive promise by the city, and in all sections, just as it has been done in this Seventh avenue west side section. With approximately six millions of tax values in the city there will have to be (if these lines which have been promised constructively and impliedly by the city, and which it is now, in effect, by Mr. Mitchel and Mr. Maltbie proposed to abandon because of the undisputed lack of the city's borrowing capacity, if it has to construct and operate the lines itself) at least a billion dollars of such reduced tax valuation for the whole city. This in round numbers would be a loss to the city on its present tax receipts of approximately eighteen million dollars and would put the city in an almost bankrupt condition according to the budget estimates.

Again, the city of New York, through the Board of Estimate and a special committee thereof (of which Mr. Mitchel, the President of the Board of Aldermen was a member) carried through recently on the specific ground that the Seventh Avenue subway extensions, a plan which has been improved and provided for (and for which the maps have been altered) for the lower extension of Seventh avenue itself and the widening of Varick street, at an estimated cost of twelve millions of dollars, of which these adjoining property owners must pay forty-five per cent. of five million four hundred thousand dollars. Political pretenses are one thing, but the obtaining of money from taxpayers in such a way, in such large sums, and under conditions, which but for this subway would be almost confiscatory, is a thing which President Mitchel has not given sufficient thought to in his zeal for the admittedly ideal, but at present situation, impracticable municipal ownership theories.

Henry P. Knowles, Architect.
377 FOURTH AVENUE.

Too Far to Be Recalled.

This lower Seventh avenue street surface extension, under such pretenses, seems to have gone too far to be recalled. It has become almost actually a finality. Unless a subway is built at the same time, there will be no material advantage to the property resulting from the street opening, and the same, with its cost to the taxpayers, would never have been consented to by them on any other basis. At the public hearings for this assessment at which Mr. Mitchel took a leading part, the adjacent property owners agreed to pay this assessment with the distinct understanding that the Seventh Avenue Subway was to be built, otherwise they would never have consented to pay any part of the cost of this expensive opening of lower Seventh avenue. We hold that the city has thus used our property and taken our money in taxes and is constructively and impliedly and through the President of the Board of Aldermen, Mr. Mitchel, and his special committee of the Board of Estimate, is specifically, absolutely committed to this Seventh Avenue subway extension. We cannot believe that the city will load us with such taxes and withdraw the subway extension.

The Narrowest Building in the Silk Trade.

The eight-story building which William W. Heroy, president of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, is erecting at 377 Fourth avenue, in the silk trade, will be the narrowest mercantile structure put up since the reconstruction of Fourth avenue began. The frontage is 22.5 feet, with a depth of 100 feet, and was designed by H. P. Knowles, of 1170 Broadway. The exterior will be of white South Dover marble, furnished by B. A. & G. N. Williams; the central portion of the front, including the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh stories, is of tapestry brick, furnished by Fiske & Company; with colored terra cotta tiles introduced in the spandrels. A very high first story was required by the tenant, the Hartley Silk Manufacturing Company; the upper stories being each 10.6 feet high in the clear. The floor beams are of steel, with reinforced concrete arches. There will be one passenger elevator. The Edward Corning Company, 100 William street, is the builder.

PROTEST AGAINST McDONOUGH COMPENSATION BILL

Mighty Host of Contractors Charters Special Train to Attend Albany Hearing

IF the wishes of the builders of New York City and State are heeded by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate and the Insurance Committee of the Assembly, the McDonough State Insurance bill, variously known as the McDonough State Workmen's Compensation bill, as the Murtaugh bill in the Senate (No. 350) and as the Jackson bill in the Assembly (No. 269), will never be reported out of committee. And if there is any credit due anybody in particular for arousing the forces of the city against this measure it is due to William Crawford, president of the Building Trades Employers' Association and William J. Holmes, its secretary.

Late last week they sent out a "fire-alarm call," as the secretary called it, to all builders and contractors who are members of the association, calling them to arms against the passage of what many consider a monopolistic and revolutionary bill. The result was one of the biggest meetings ever held by the association, and it was then and there decided to charter a couple of special cars and make a record-breaking protest delegation to the State capital on Tuesday. Instead of taking two cars, the association found it necessary to charter a special train of thirteen cars, because more than half a hundred people signified their intention of going from this city, while members here wired to friends and business associates scattered along the line between this city and Albany, with the result that when the train pulled in at the capital city at 12.30 nearly a thousand persons alighted, all bound for the hearing which was called for 2.30.

The Senate chamber was filled. Every seat was occupied and white-ribboned delegates were standing not only in the aisle and lobby, but up to the Speaker's dias. The meeting opened promptly. It was figured that it might last two hours and possibly three. Instead it lasted until midnight and would have continued longer had not the committee decided that the matter had been thoroughly discussed. At that time there were still seventeen speakers yet to be heard.

Otto M. Eidlitz, of New York, spoke against the Murtaugh-Jackson bill on behalf of the principal contracting interests of the city and State, including manufacturers and merchants, as well as similar interests elsewhere in the State. He characterized the bill as unfair to the employer, the employee and the public. It was not, in his opinion, a workman's compensation act; moreover, many of its provisions were conflicting. The Foley-Walker bill as amended, he said, had the support of his clients. It included practically all classes of workers. The schedules of compensation in the Murtaugh-Jackson bill, he said, are grossly high. Its enactment into law would foster antagonism between capital and labor, it would jeopardize all mercantile interests. He believed the Foley-Walker bill, as amended, would meet existing conditions and hoped it may meet with the favor of the Legislature.

Representatives of practically all the building trade organizations in the State followed Mr. Eidlitz in endorsing his views. The New York Chamber of Commerce and the New York Merchants' Association through their representatives also approved Mr. Eidlitz's statements and added that they favored just, sound and uniform workmen's compensation legislation.

A number of organized labor bodies also opposed the Murtaugh-Jackson bill, among them the various New York City building trades. Others spoke in favor of the Murtaugh-Jackson bill which the American Federation of Labor has endorsed. Still others endorsed the Foley-Walker bill, but suggested several amendments, including one to have a labor man placed on the commission. What was wanted above all things, they urged, was a law to safeguard workmen against accidents.

The Massachusetts Insurance Department, through one of its representatives, told how beneficially the workmen's compensation law of that State had worked and how successfully it had operated. In six months the insurance charges, under the law, had been reduced 25 per cent. Injured people and their families in that State are now receiving four times what they got under the former law. About three-quarters of the State's employees are covered by its elective act, and it was stated that "the long delays incident to litigation are done away with. We have an arbitration committee, provision for which is not made in the Foley-Walker bill. These three things we deem essential: State regulation, constant supervision and control of insurance companies so that justice will be done. In Massachusetts the mutual companies are insuring about 250,000 employes, and the stock companies about the same number, and it is felt that the State is working no confiscatory injustice against these companies. The matter of preventing accidents is also a large consideration. Under the laws in the Foley-Walker bill are several features which appeared to be an improvement on the Massachusetts law."

Commissioner William D. Dixon, of the New Jersey Employers' Liability Commission, told the assemblage that the Murtaugh-Jackson bill should be styled "an act to place the industries of this great State in the hands of an irresponsible oligarchy." The New Jersey Department feels that it has the most effective law on the subject yet enacted in any State in the Union. It is universally accepted, and its schedules are regarded as eminently fair. A representative of the Michigan State Government expressed the opinion that the laws of that State was most efficient and explained at some length its features.

Daniel Harris, president of the State Federation of Labor, declared that the members of that body favored only the Murtaugh-Jackson bill. The workmen of New Jersey and of Illinois were opposed to the compensation laws operative there; he said the Foley-Walker bill would not compensate. He contended that it would not take the workmen out of the courts.

A member of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ohio claimed that the vast majority of the employers of that State are in favor of the State insurance system as embodied in the Murtaugh-Jackson bill.

The committees took no action on any of the pending bills.

The chief difference between the two bills is that the Murtaugh-Jackson measure would limit the employer to State insurance, while the Foley-Walker bill permits him to file a bond with the State to insure compensation for workmen injured while in his employ. The labor interests are in favor of the Murtaugh bill on the general principle that it provides a State guaranteed fund from which compensation shall be made. The Foley-Walker bill is favored by contractors who believe that the State has no right to compel them to buy their insurance from the State only.

LEGISLATIVE MEASURES.

Doubling the Tax Transfer Tax—For Compulsory Arbitration.

Downtown real estate interests were annoyed this week by the introduction of a bill in the Legislature to double the tax on stock transfers. The tax is now two dollars per hundred shares. Among stock brokers there was a general expression of angry protest at this and other measures aimed at the business of stock speculation by the administration at Albany. It was declared that a continuation of such legislation would injure New York as the financial center and cause a dispersion of banking and brokerage business to other cities. With this belief many real estate firms have expressed sympathy and conferences have been held at the office of Bryan L. Kennelly with a view to calling a general mass meeting of protest.

Another bill proposes to double the tax on automobiles. It is claimed by the advocates of the bill that it is unfair that real estate should be heavily taxed for good roads, while automobiles which make use of the roads, and, in fact, require almost the same public utilities as real estate, escape with a trifling assessment.

A bill which Minority Leader Brown of the Senate and Assemblyman Adler have introduced provides for a system of compulsory arbitration of disputes between public service corporations and their employes and prohibits the stopping of work by strikes and lockouts. It also provides for the appointment by the Supreme Court of three arbitrators to settle the differences between the corporation and its employes. Violation of any agreement reached is made a misdemeanor and is punishable as follows: In the case of the company by a fine of not more than $100 per day for each day of the violation, and any damage suffered by reason of the violation, and if the violation persists the company is to forfeit its rights and franchises. Employes who persist in violating the provisions of the act are prohibited from again entering the employ of any public service corporation in the State.

—When the Bronx County question was submitted to the State Court of Appeals it was accompanied by a request from the parties for an early decision It is hoped by the appellants that the judgment of the court will be passed before the Legislature adjourns, in order that new legislation may be framed accordingly.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Company.

Here is another house organ issued by a New York real estate firm. It is the "Spear & Co. Bulletin," and is the second publication of the kind which has commanded our notice. The first requisite of a house organ, or, indeed, of any publication, is that it must have the power to command respectful attention on account of its appearance. This the "Bulletin" has. It is of good size, is printed on good paper, is illustrated, and its typography is in good taste. Finally, the continuity of the text is not broken by a clutter of advertising cards. The second requisite is that the contents must be of value to the readers. In this respect also the "Bulletin" is to be commended. There is an informing article on Reducing Your Insurance Rates, by Harry Swanson, head of Spear & Co.'s engineering and repair department. An unsigned article on Tenanting the Wholesale Section should, we think, be read with interest and profit by owners in the old mercantile district below Fourteenth street. Without attempting to catalogue the entire text, it may be said that the contents of the "Bulletin" show that a big real estate firm which speaks frankly and concretely of matters within its experience should have no difficulty in getting a hearing.

What interests me particularly about the new house organs noted in this column today and last week is that they deal principally with building management. They are evidently founded on the theory that the personal convass and the private medium of communication are more effective than newspaper advertising. Indeed, this belief is clearly expressed in the "Bulletin"; "Our renting organization, in its personal canvass, can afford more effective publicity, with much better chances for filling your building, than half a dozen newspapers." There can be no doubt that the sort of examples of economy given by the "Bulletin" with respect to the building at 43 to 47 West Twenty-fourth street is effective publicity work and that such examples are hardly suitable for newspaper advertisements. In the case of this building cost figures are printed showing that by substituting a low pressure for a high pressure steam heating plant Spear & Co. reduced the yearly cost of heating by 50 per cent., cutting it down from $2,317 to $1,098.

While on the subject of low pressure plants, it is interesting to learn from the "Metal Worker, Plumber and Steam Fitter" that the highest building in New York to be heated with low pressure cast-iron sectional steam boiler is probably the sixteen-story Putnam Building at 2 to 6 West Forty-fifth street. The "Metal Worker" states the case for the low pressure plant so briefly and impartially as to justify the following quotation: "The building occupies a ground area of 60x90 ft. and was erected from plans and specifications drawn by Schwartz & Gross, architects, 347 Fifth avenue, New York City. In this building no high pressure steam was required for operating the pumps or elevators due to the provision of electric equipment, and consequently the use of the low pressure cast-iron boiler was favored. The owners and architects had in mind the ease with which such boilers can be fired, the economy attending their use as steam generators and the little care required in the operation. It might here be stated that similar heating plants employing cast-iron boilers are to be found in a number of office buildings in New York City comprising but few stories less than the building under consideration.

SEEKING TENANTS FOR LOFT BUILDINGS

Intricate Conditions That Building Managers Must Meet—Trade Movements—Necessities of Different Lines—Fourth Avenue as an Illustration.

By EDWIN H. HESS.

LOFT building construction has undergone a material change in ten years and, as a result, the loft manager of today has need for a much more highly specialized knowledge than ever before. In former times there were fewer buildings of this character and their equipment was of a very crude nature as compared with our present-day standards of construction. High-speed electric elevators have taken the place of the ancient hand hoists and the more recent hydraulic lifts, and steam heat and electric lights have replaced coal stoves and gas or oil lights. Light and the economical arrangement of floor space have also come to be extremely important factors, and trade centers are now concentrated within a few blocks, whereas they were at one time scattered over large areas. The loft manager today must, therefore, concentrate his efforts to a much greater extent than in former times. He must know his few blocks and know them thoroughly, where before he could spread his efforts over a large territory.

Keen Competition.

Present-day competition is of the keenest and, where formerly tenants sought the landlord, the landlord or his representative is now obliged to devote a large part of his time to seeking tenants. He must be able to demonstrate to prospective renters that his building is better situated and better adapted to their line of business than others on the market, and must be sufficiently well posted in all the latest conveniences of modern construction, to use them as talking points for securing tenants. In other words, he must be a salesman as well as a manager.

The manager, particularly where he is also a real estate broker, must be able to advise his clients as to market conditions and buying and selling. He must be able to select for them the most promising locations and obtain for them the best possible prices. He must also be familiar with the mortgage market so he may enable them to secure a maximum amount of loan money at a minimum cost. The manager must thoroughly familiarize himself with prevailing rents, must know when to advise his owners to accept offers or reject them and must be able to suggest structural changes in the layout of floors which will permit the owners to meet the necessities of tenants in various lines of trade. Individual owners, for the most part, have no intimate knowledge of the conditions which surround the properties they own, and the manager must on this account be possessed of tact, sound judgment and the ability to make his clients see conditions as they really exist.

In the last few years there has been a remarkable shifting of trade centers throughout the city and many builders of new structures have found themselves saddled with inadequate investments because of their lack of ability to foresee the trend of various trade movements. A manager who keeps well posted as to the various trade movements and uses due judgment in analyzing the knowledge which he obtains is in a position to materially assist his clients in selecting locations for loft buildings that will prove profitable for the present and which will enhance in value in the future.

Special Trades.

The necessities of the different lines of business must be carefully studied. To some trades, north light is absolutely essential; to others, a location convenient to lines of transportation is the important factor. Certain businesses require a certain average amount of floor space, and the rental which they can afford to pay is limited. Other trades can afford luxuries and their profits will warrant the expenditure of larger rents.

In former days it was very common to find the manufacturer and the wholesaler located in the same building. Today, the best of the wholesalers are refusing to go in buildings occupied by manufacturers, and certain locations are becoming popular among high-class wholesale concerns because of the united refusal of the owners to take manufacturers. The best instance of this can be found today along Fourth avenue from 14th to 34th st.

As a rule, the wholesale concerns have a wider margin of profit than the manufacturers and are, therefore, able to pay higher rents and employ a better class of help. On this account they are handicapped by being in the same building with those who manufacture and employ cheap labor, which is apt to hang around the halls and sidewalks and crowd the elevators at certain hours.

Some lines of business prefer to concentrate in one building, whereas other lines desire to be separated. For instance, one will find a number of lace and embroidery houses in the same building, whereas it is extremely uncommon to find more than one umbrella dealer in any one building. In planning a building, all these things must be taken into consideration, as the number of elevators, the location of stairways, the position of columns and the height of ceilings all have an important bearing on the securing of tenants.

Loft Leases.

Loft leases differ from office leases in that the tenant, as a rule, takes his premises for a term of years, makes his own repairs and maintains his quarters as best he sees fit. It is not always the best policy, however, for an owner to adhere strictly to the terms of his lease in this respect, particularly when failure to correct a very apparent defect may cause serious loss to a tenant or extensive damage to the building.

While the average loft lease absolves the landlord from damages caused by leakage or broken pipes, it often happens that an adjoining tenant whose stock is damaged by carelessness on the part of someone else is able to show just cause in the courts why he should be reimbursed for such loss, and, on this account, a wise landlord will repair defective pipes when his attention is called to them.

Plumbing should never be left unrepaired and boilers out of condition are dangerous not only to the building but to the lives of the tenants. Too much care cannot be given to the maintenance of elevators. A stranded cable may carry its load in safety for months, but there is always the danger that it will part without warning and carry its passengers to severe injury or death, in which case the moral and financial liability would be tremendous. It is frequently wise in a busy loft building to have elevator repairs made either nights or Sundays, even though the overtime labor charges are heavier, as the tenants will appreciate the fact that they are not inconvenienced by the laying down of cars during working hours.

Cheap Repairs No Economy.

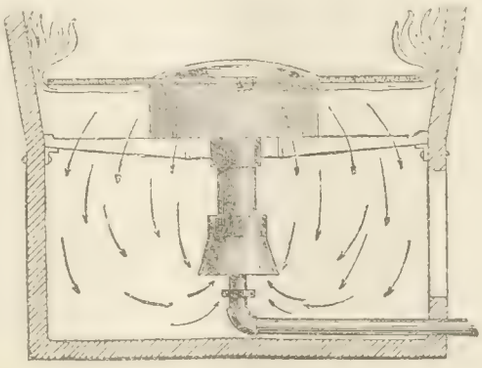
The manager or agent should have a good working knowledge of the cost of repairs and should not depend solely on the judgment of his engineer or janitor in this respect. Economy is an important factor in the maintenance of a building, but cheap repairs are no economy, and care should be taken that the best of material and workmanship are used, particularly in the engine-room and on the elevators. The practice of some agents in accepting commissions from repair people cannot be too strongly condemned. The agent who undertakes the management of property does so generally on a commission basis and he should see to it that the percentage is sufficient to allow him a fair compensation for his services. Where an agent accepts commissions for repairs the owner pays for it in the bills, and today the repair people who are willing to do business on this basis are as a general rule not to be trusted for quality of materials or workmanship.

Insurance Matters.

In loft buildings, the question of insurance is an important one and the manager should give this careful study.

A tenant whose fire record is bad may raise the rate, not only for the building, but for all the occupants. The manager should also be familiar with the various forms of liability insurance and should not overlook the importance of rent insurance, which, in case of fire, reimburses the owner for loss of rent during the period of reconstruction. It is always a safe plan for the manager to consult with the insurance people before accepting a tenant in a loft building unless he is absolutely sure that the business of the prospective tenant will not affect the existing rate on the building.

NEW THINGS



Uninfluenced by advertising considerations, this information is offered on its merits for the benefit of building managers.

Non-Siphonable Traps.

Something new in the form of a non-siphonable trap for sinks, closets and other uses is being introduced by the Detroit Sanitary Supply Co., of Detroit, Mich. The trap is designed with the idea of meeting requirements of ordinances which are making positive sealing of fixtures one of the most important points in modern plumbing. All of the passages in this device are of smooth inner construction, and a large clean out is placed at the bottom. Access to the drain connections in case of stoppage can be had quickly without trouble. They are made in nickel plate glass or lead in wells or plain or floor patterns.

Gas Burners for Furnace.

A novelty is being introduced by John W. Chamberlain, of Toledo, O., who has a new gas burner for use in furnaces. This device illustrated herewith is said to be first practical burner adaptable for heating boilers, furnaces and stoves mechanically using gas for fuel. A patent mixing chamber produces a perfect blue flame and gives intense heat. It requires no special fitting.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Testing Electric Service Meters.

I am desirous of ascertaining how to test electric service meters supplying different tenants from an isolated plant in an office building.

Answer.—A simple method, and one frequently employed, is to connect another meter which is correct in the same circuit with the one to be tested.

Finding the Weight of a Fly Wheel.

Can you advise me how to calculate the weight of a fly wheel?

Answer.—First find the cubical contents of the metal of which the wheel is composed. If this is cast iron, multiply the total by 450 pounds, which represents the weight of one cubic foot of cast iron, and divide the result by 2,240 to arrive at the number of long tons contained in the wheel.

Linoleum Stains.

We have recently put down some linoleum in one of our offices and complaint has been made that ugly stains have appeared on it. I have tried acids but these have produced white spots.

Answer.—The stains you complained of probably are umber stains. These may have originated in oil or spirit, but we presume that they are oil or varnish blotches. Acids applied to this kind of stain not only burns through the stain, but also destroys the color of the linoleum. The best means to remove the stains in question without injury to the linoleum or affecting its color is to use a good varnish remover and daub the spots which will resolve in a very few minutes. This will be noted by its wrinkled appearance, when it can be wiped off with a cloth dampened with benzine or turpentine. Do not allow the remover to remain any longer than is required to soften and remove the stain, otherwise it will take up some of the color of the linoleum. If the job is too small to warrant purchasing remover a mixture of chloroform and a small portion of spirit of ammonia, procurable at any drug store will remove any dried spots of stain without injury to the surface.

Finishing Cypress.

Here is a communication from George E. Watson, manager of the All-Round Helps Department of the Southern Cypress Manufacturers' Association, New Orleans, who says we were in error in calling cypress a tough wood. We might put up a stiff argument for our interpretation of the word tough, but we are quite willing to withdraw that elastic adjective. The main thing is that the wood is mighty good for a great variety of purposes, and can be finished in an unusual number of ways:

"In your issue of Feb. 8, page 295, there is a question and answer headed 'Finishing Cypress.' You are in error in your answer to this question, in that cypress is not tough, but is one of the soft woods. The painters who finish cypress by first burning and then rubbing with a stiff brush are following a certain prescribed method of finishing cypress after the Japanese method of finishing Sugi, and I am enclosing herewith a pamphlet which fully described this process and which shows the beauty of this finish. The idea is not to obtain a smooth finish, but to obtain a raised grain or embossed finish, and the effect is most beautiful. As you may receive further questions along this same line, we send this volume of our Cypress Pocket Library to you so the writer of answers to these questions may be informed as to the results of burning and rubbing out with a wire brush. Cypress may be finished the same as any other wood, but it is the only wood grown commercially in this country which can be satisfactorily finished by the Sugi process." The volume, by the way, is worth sending for.

Attaching Plaster to Concrete.

Can you advise me regarding a good practical way of attaching plaster to concrete?

Answer.—Make the concrete as porous as possible by omitting the sand from the mix and by not spading the concrete next to the forms. Where plaster is required underneath a floor or roof, if the forms are sprinkled with ½-inch stone before the concrete is placed, a rough surface will be obtained to which plaster will key nicely.

To attach Portland cement plaster to smooth concrete, hack the surface with a point, brush the surface thoroughly to get the dust out, wash it, and in every case make sure that the under concrete is thoroughly wet before the plaster is applied. Otherwise the water will be soaked out of the plaster and the plaster will not adhere. Wash the surface with grout just ahead of the plaster and make sure that the plaster is applied before the grout has had time to set. The only way in which lime plaster may be satisfactorily placed on a concrete surface is to use plaster which is principally composed of plaster of paris.

The Board of Estimate on Thursday granted authority to the Commissioner of Docks to adopt plans for Barge Canal terminal facilities on the East River, Buttermilk Channel, Gowanus Bay and Upper Bay, between the foot of Fulton street and the foot of 66th street, Brooklyn.

With the incorporation of the parish of Reick on January 1, Dresden gained 514 acres in area, whereby it has attained an area of about 17,297 acres. By way of comparison, it may be stated that of the larger German cities Berlin has but 15,695 acres and Leipzig only 14,467 acres. New York has 209,218.

There seems to be a growing tendency on the part of associations of professional and business men to establish services of real value to their members—to achieve by co-operation results which are beyond the means of individuals. The latest example of this tendency is the Information Bureau authorized by the American Society of Engineering Contractors at its annual meeting. Through this bureau the member will receive answers to specific questions. When a question is submitted it will be referred to a member of the society who specializes in this class of work to which the question belongs, and the answer will be mailed promptly to the questioner; afterwards it will be published in the "Journal" for the benefit of the society. Among the officers elected at the meeting, New York is represented by the first vice-president, Edward Wegaann. Howard J. Cole, of Montclair, was made president, and George T. Clark, of Saskatoon, Canada, second vice-president. The directors are A. S. Bent, of Los Angeles, DeWitt V. Moore, of Indianapolis, and Leon F. Peck, of Greenwich, Conn.

The Dual Subway, the Only Practical Subway Proposal.

The character of the alternative rapid transit system proposed during the week by Messrs. Mitchel and Maltbie is a sufficient indication that the Dual Subway is the only really practical proposal with which the city is confronted. In order to satisfy local public opinion, they have tried to arrange for the construction of practically all the lines which are provided for by the proposed contracts. An attempt is to be made to secure the money by the issue of securities based upon the earnings of the new lines; but, if this attempt fails, as its proposers admit that it probably will, they want the city to begin construction with the money now available and rely upon the passage of a constitutional amendment to provide the necessary additional means—as if the city would dare to go ahead and carry out a certain plan without being sure of all the money needed for this purpose. Even if the plan of Messrs. Mitchel and Maltbie were financially practicable, there is only one respect in which it is an improvement on the Dual Subway system.

The city might be able to raise the money required for the construction of the new system at a somewhat smaller expense, but the smaller carrying charge imposed upon the new subways would be more than counterbalanced by the much heavier cost which the travelling public would be obliged to pay. The city would be divided into three rapid transit zones, without any connection one with another, and the passage from one zone to another would always cost an additional fare. These extra fares would amount, according to the calculations of experts, to several million dollars a year, besides being a serious hindrance to traffic. It is very much to be hoped that the new head of the Public Service Commission has been as much illuminated by the discussion of the past few weeks as has the public opinion of New York City.

Colossal Examples of Economic Waste.

Proud as a city may be of two such terminals as those of the New York Central and the Pennsylvania railroad companies, there can be little doubt that at the end of a couple of generations they will be regarded as colossal examples of economic waste. The spending of $100,000,000 on a passenger terminal is very much like buying a public inconvenience at an enormous cost. Some sort of a terminal is doubtless the most convenient method of handling through passenger traffic on its arrival in a city; but the two big stations in Manhattan would be comparatively insignificant buildings—in case they were intended only for the accommodation of passengers with baggage. It is the suburban traffic, and the enormous number of trains needed to accommodate it in the future, which has necessitated the purchase of acres of costly land and the erection of such spacious buildings.

The Grand Central Station has been planned to meet the needs of the next fifty years, and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has avoided the development of any suburban traffic with New Jersey so as to keep an abundance of room for the accommodation of Long Island local trains. Yet it would be an immense benefit to their customers, in case no such accommodation had been provided. Not one suburban passenger in a hundred who arrives at the Grand Central Station is seeking a destination in the immediate neighborhood of 42d street and Park avenue. They all want to be carried to some other part of the city; and in order to reach the end of the journey they are obliged to walk a longer or shorter distance, take another train and pay an extra fare. The suburban service of the great railroad companies should constitute a part of the rapid transit system of the metropolis.

It looked at one time as if the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company appreciated this fact, and intended to connect their suburban lines in the Bronx and Westchester with a rapid transit subway in Manhattan; but for some reason the idea was abandoned. The consequence will be a great congestion of business and traffic in the immediate vicinity of the station, and the annual loss of a large and increasing amount of time and money. Some day a higher standard of economy and efficiency will demand the establishment of an intimate connection between every aspect of the suburban and interurban transit system. It is just as desirable that the transit system of a great city should be unified as that its telephone system should be unified. The greatest merit of the proposed Dual System of rapid transit is that it brings about a degree of unification in the means of communication of the city of New York which would have seemed impossible not many years ago.

The Foreign Situation.

It is no wonder that the stock market has continued to be discouraged by the tendency of the recent news. Business throughout the United States continues to be large in volume and wholesome in character; and if general conditions were free from dangerous features, a prosperous year would appear to be certain; but general political conditions are becoming more threatening every week. The new administration will take office at a time of almost unprecedented unrest in international politics. The domestic situation which confronted President Cleveland in 1893 is not more sinister than the foreign situation which will confront President-elect Wilson. In Mexico conditions go from bad to worse; and it is very probable that the unfortunate country will be plunged into anarchy. If the United States is obliged to intervene, the cost in money will be so heavy and the demands by the Government on the money market will be so considerable that business will be deprived of any sufficient margin of credit on which to expand. But this is not all. Serious trouble is brewing in Central America. It is very probable that during the current year there will be renewed trouble in China; and, of course, the situation in Europe is threatening. Whatever the outcome of the existing war, or the character of the treaty of peace whereby it is terminated, its effect will be profoundly to disturb the balance of power. Other readjustments must certainly follow, and such readjustments, even if they are consummated without any explosion, will keep public opinion apprehensive, capital timid, and will encourage the hoarding of gold. A prudent business will consequently avoid taking very many risks during a season which contains so many possibilities of serious complications in international politics.

Perhaps Radical Charter Changes.

It is evident that during the course of the present legislative session some radical changes will be proposed in the charter of the city of New York. The politicians who are now preparing these changes are not saying very much about their work in public; but occasional inklings are given of the way in which they intend to amend the New York instrument of government. In all probability the proposals will take the form of the general grant of a larger measure of home rule to all the cities of the state. The first section of the bill is said to read as follows:

"Every city is granted power to regulate, manage and control its property and local affairs, and is granted all the rights, privileges and jurisdiction necessary and proper for carrying such power into execution. No enumeration of powers in this or any other law shall operate to restrict the meaning of this general grant of power or to exclude other powers comprehended within this general grant."

It is dangerous to approve any proposed piece of legislation until its details are announced; but if the passage quoted above is a fair indication of the contents of the new bill, it will have the approval of disinterested students of the actual operation of American municipal institutions. One of the great handicaps from which American municipal government has suffered has been the narrow construction placed upon its legal powers.

Even when the Legislature had apparently intended to endow municipal administration with a liberal grant of power for the performance both of specific and general functions, the tendency of judicial construction has always been to limit the actual exercise of those powers just as far as possible. The consequence has been that American cities have constantly been obliged to appeal to the State Legislature for the passage of specific laws which concerned essentially local business, and the responsible foundation of local government has been undermined. The city of New York will never enjoy a really responsible municipal administration unless the principle of home rule is embodied in its charter and unless this principle is liberally construed. The introduction of the completed bill will be awaited with the liveliest interest.

THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE.

Judging by the large transactions in real estate this week the market is now on the crest of the wave of heavy dealing for the season. In many respects it was a remarkable market. Beginning with the sale of the Pullman Building, on Madison avenue, followed by the exchange of a large new building in West 26th street and the building of the Bank of the Metropolis on the west side of Union Square, the week approached its end with the sale of the W. Seward Webb mansion, on Fifth avenue, to John D. Rockefeller, while during the interval many sales of divers kinds of property were negotiated. The transfers also disclose the sale of 588 Fifth avenue by Henry G. Trevor to Samuel Frank and others, who will remove their shoe business from 244 Fifth avenue to the address mentioned. The new address is between 47th and 48th streets and the removal is another instance of the northward trend of trade in this avenue.

It is understood that John D. Rockefeller bought the Webb mansion in order to frustrate the march of business to a point where it might impair the select residential character of the block on 54th street, near Fifth avenue, where his town house as well as that of his daughter's is situated. The Webb property is abutted by the Rockefeller plot. It will be recalled that during the last year Mr. Rockefeller has bought four dwellings in 54th street near his own home that seemed threatened to be bought for alteration into business buildings; and, it is only very recently that the same owner deeded his daughter an easement in a vacant lot near her 54th street home so that its light and air would remain unimpaired. It may be that Mr. Rockefeller will reimprove the Webb plot with a modern business building, but he has the satisfaction anyway of determining what shall be done with the property. Just how long the famous oil man can restrain business from creeping around his residence remains to be seen. Thomas E. Ryan tried to halt the march of trade into Fifth avenue in the vicinity of 11th street, some years ago, but it came there finally in spite of his efforts to keep it out and a large business building is now opposite his old home. The Vanderbilts have sought to hold business south of the Fifty streets, and J. Pierpont Morgan has tried to keep business from Madison avenue in the vicinity of his home; and while Mr. Morgan has succeeded to a degree his efforts have not been entirely successful and it is not probable that they will be. There is every likelihood that when trade starts in earnest to get into 54th street just west of Fifth avenue that it will go there and that fine mansions will give way to the onslaught. For it seems probable that within the next twenty years there will be very few, if any, fine mansions on Manhattan Island. Taxable values are tending to become greater and the tendency is stronger, year on year, for the wealthy of New York's population to reside on country estates within easy traveling distance of Manhattan. Besides every circumstance points out the northward march of business. When Altman's and Tiffany's established their headquarters in Fifth avenue, followed as they were by many smaller concerns, the famous thoroughfare was doomed for trade; and, the camping of business in the intersecting streets is accentuating the demand for business space.

There was a lively tilt between the Board of Estimate and the owners of property on the new Court House site last Thursday, when the owners appeared before the Board to express their sentiments about the city not taking title to the various parcels it has selected for its new civic center. The owners wish the city to take title not later than March 1 of this year. There is more than $6,000,000 worth of real estate involved belonging to 65 owners and 250 tenants are affected. The owners cannot effect long leases with tenants because of the uncertain attitude of the city in the premises and as a result there is much vacant space in the buildings in discussion. For example, one building that brought an income of $19,000 a year before the city condemned the property now yields only $2,000 a year and even this income is threatened. It is asserted by the owners that in some cases the mortgagees have threatened to foreclose; and, it must be conceded that the owners are between the two horns of the dilemma, the city's dilatory methods on the one hand and the attitude of the mortgagees on the other. It appears that the commissioners of estimate and appraisal have acted with due diligence, but they and the Court House Board have not informed the Board of Estimate how long the city will have to carry the properties in question. The Board, it would appear, wants definite information. In the meantime the owners affected are anxious about their status in the matter and nobody can blame them, for they certainly have been patient. Action by the Board of Estimate is deferred for two weeks while the Corporate Stock Budget Committee looks into the subject. The owners have given notice that they are determined to hasten the final settlement.

The Danger Points in Picture Theatres.

Nearly one thousand moving picture machine operators are under constant employment in this city. Their work is checked up by twelve inspectors from the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity, which refuses to approve of the electrical equipment unless the operator thereof can prove his competency. Operators must obtain a certificate from the department, and since 1910 the examinations have been more searching than formerly.

There are various deliquencies of operators which the department has to deal with. Poorly patched films or those having sprocket holes torn out cause a number of the accidents which might easily result in a conflagration if the operator were inattentive. Leaving the magazine doors open, operating with flame shields down, operating with the lamp house open, operating with a grounded lamp, smoking in the booth, are all dangerous practices against which the inspectors strive to protect the public.

While moving picture theatres are just as dangerous in one place as another, it is evident that when they intrude into purely residential neighborhoods they put in jeopardy more households and threaten losses more irreparable than if they were required to keep on the business avenues, or to confine themselves to recognized amusement centers. Apart from the fire-hazard which attaches to the cheap theatres, they attract, when they go into a quiet neighborhood, a swarm of people unpleasant for the old residents to contemplate, and the consequence to be expected in such cases is many vacancies in the block and the destruction of real estate values.

A fire-hazard and other unpleasant features also attach to garages, and the owners of property in an upper West Side residential block recently had both a garage and a tiny "nickelodeon" suddenly appear as neighbors. As the garage was half-burned up last week and the "movie" hasn't been permitted to open, owners and tenants thereabouts are not altogether hopeless that one of the most "homelike" blocks in old Bloomingdale will yet be saved.

Would Stop Speculation in Real Estate.

An avowed purpose of the Committee on Congestion of Population which is conducting an exhibition of diagrams and placards on Union Square is to discourage speculation in real estate, and as a first step the proposed bill in the Legislature which has for its object the reduction of the tax on buildings and a corresponding increase in the tax on land, is strongly advocated. It is well for real estate men to fully understand this.

Mayor Gaynor evidently does, for he said in a noonday speech at the place this week that there is one phase of the single tax which he had never thought too happy:

"The idea is to centre all taxes on the land. That would mean to let all buildings and improvements made by the hand of man go free and tax the land, which was made by the hand of God.

"I don't know when you can bring it about. I do know that that chapter of Henry George's book would make me poor if put in effect. Most of my money is tied up in property in Brooklyn."

—The fact that a man who has by his own unaided efforts earned and saved enough money to buy the big Pullman Building on Madison Square has called forth many expressions of surprise, because of the infrequency of such purchases by young men of that kind nowadays, in old New York. A generation ago nearly every young man was ambitious to improve his financial circumstances by investing his savings in real estate. This was thought to be the best way to get on in the world. It is not so easy now as then to obtain the title to a piece of Manhattan property, but Fred Stone's transaction may be the forerunner of many more of a similar kind by young men who have been investing their money elsewhere.

RAILROAD GETS PLOT.

Supreme Court Confirms Award to J. K. O. Sherwood for Dunton Property.

After a legal fight extending over a period of several years the Long Island Railroad Company has been granted possession of the small acre of land at Dunton, Queens Borough, on the line of the company's Jamaica terminal improvement. About 700 square feet comprises the total. Situated near where Van Wyck avenue crosses the line of the railroad, the property belonged to J. K. O. Sherwood and when the railroad company sought to buy it at private contract he asked a great deal more for it than it was considered to be worth, some say as high as $50,000. The company refused to pay the price asked by the owner and sought to condemn the property on the ground that it was a public necessity for the company to have it in order to carry on the Jamaica improvement. Through his attorney, Mr. Sherwood attacked the company's right to condemn in the premises and the matter went finally to the Court of Appeals which sent the case back to be tried by a jury as a matter of fact was involved.

After the jury decided that the company had a right to condemn, the Supreme Court appointed commissioners and they have awarded Mr. Sherwood a price approximating $46 a square foot for his property. Justice Van Siclen, of the Supreme Court, has confirmed the award of the commissioners, which totals $31,000 for the plot and $1,000 extra is allowed for expenses. Expert appraisers for Mr. Sherwood declared the property to be worth from $60,000 to $75,000, while those for the railroad company appraised it as being worth from $6,000 to $10,000. The litigation has delayed considerably the terminal improvements at Jamaica, the total cost of which will be more than $3,000,000.

Prof. Woolson on Concrete.

Before the Insurance Society of New York on Tuesday evening Professor Ira H. Woolson, Consulting Engineer to the National Board of Fire Underwriters, delivered the first of a series of addresses on modern methods of concrete construction with special reference to its relation to fire insurance and fire prevention.

The speaker reviewed the history of concrete from the time when Rome was at the zenith of its power down to the present. He spoke of methods of using it in construction, its various mixtures, what concrete is used for, giving special reference to the fireproofing of skeleton steel frame work and the construction of an entire building of this material. Then he spoke of the different kinds of steel reinforcement, such as plain bars, deformed bars, twisted bars, bars with lugs and fins, woven fabric and sheet, also sheet metal both plain and perforated.

In the next address which he will deliver on this subject before the same society at 84 William street on Tuesday evening, March 3, at 5 o'clock, Prof. Woolson will take up the subjects of distribution, fireproofing and the manufacture of concrete blocks and their relation to building construction, including failures of reinforced concrete buildings and their causes as found by commissions appointed to investigate building collapses at different times and places.

—The subway contracts will be signed within a few days—if not to-day, then early next week. This was the declaration made last night by Mayor Gaynor amid deafening cheers from the members of the North Side Board of Trade at their annual dinner at the Burland Casino, in The Bronx.

—Seven lots on the Upper West Side were sold this week in the auction room at $20,250. They are assessed for taxation at $42,000. If the single tax or the increment surtax or any other tax could stimulate building so as to "lower rents, increase wages, reduce the cost of living and abolish involuntary poverty," these lots should not have remained vacant so long as they have.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

The Inside Reason Why the Steel Company Has Refused To Join the Independents in Price Advances.

How the Mexican Imbroglio, Trust Reform Bills, Stock Exchange Incorporation Legislation and Other Factors Are Affecting Securities and Building.

FURTHER developments in the Mexican revolt was responsible for putting a mild quietus on the general securities market this week and for the first time steel and other basic building material interests began to give thought to the possibility of postponement of orders. This cast a slight shadow over the outlook for the second half and opening of the third quarter, especially if jingoists are successful in tantalizing the authorities at Washington into acts of intervention. This, however, has only been felt by the securities market and has not yet affected contracts.

The introduction of bills at Albany to regulate the stock market also was a contributing factor in the unrest among securities, but sage heads in the building material and construction departments believe that even though war is declared and the legislature puts through burdensome bills at Albany, it will have a tendency to encourage real estate investments, and this should give a stability to the general building construction market.

It is generally believed that contracted operations will proceed on schedules. Should general hesitancy develop, however, the pig iron and steel interests may be expected to take such action as to discourage any postponement of construction plans.

Those who are close in the steel department hint that herein lies the reason for the steel corporation's determined stand against advances in price at this time, although the present stiffness of the market would seem to warrant such action. It was suggested that the steel company's attitude was one of extreme far sightedness in view of the differences which have arisen between the firemen and the railroads, the development of the Mexican trouble to the extent that this country might be involved, the doubt attending the effect tariff revision will have upon business in general, and the complexion of the stock exchange incorporation bills, not to mention the possible effect of New Jersey anti-trust regulations and certain government suits and inquiries, all of which have more or less direct bearing upon future building construction.

On the other hand there is a decided demand for new building construction in New York City and vicinity. Plans are being laid, contracts have been specified, new construction business, all in larger volume than has been reported in any recent year, combine to insure a degree of stability in the building market that cannot be upset so long as basic iron and steel markets maintain their present heavy mill capacities.

Open weather, the fact that labor which emigrated last summer is again returning to these shores in large numbers, thus giving manufacturers a good labor market; low mill stocks and a general tendency to return to the old principle of supply and demand, are all adamant elements that make for continued firmness of the general building material and construction markets, and to insure a continuance of prosperity. There has been no indication of crumbling of prices. On the other hand there is a firm tone.

COAL SITUATION IN NEW YORK.

Bituminous Prices Drop While Anthracite Remains About Normal.

THE general trade may be said to be on a normal, seasonable basis. The mines are producing a heavy tonnage and the arrival of cold weather has created a somewhat stiffer demand.

There is considerable irregularity in the demand for merchant sizes, but this is being overcome by shippers insisting that every order must call for at least two of the domestic sizes, that is, as far as the retail dealers are concerned. Stove sizes are scarce and egg sizes the most plentiful. The demand for chestnut is moderate. Pea coal is still short and is the only size selling about circular quotations. With the exception of barley the steam sizes are moving better to apartment house, office buildings and factories, and prices are remaining as a rule without change.

Soft coal has been selling in the local market the past week at prices considerably lower than the same grades could be bought for at the mines. In this respect the situation differs little from that which has prevailed for three weeks or more, the only change being that quotations have gradually become weaker as coal standing at the different ports reached or passed the demurrage stage and had to be sold for what it would bring.

There has been a lot of this class of tonnage disposed of in recent weeks, and as not much is being sent down here on consignment now, the inference is that the accumulation has been pretty well worked off. If this theory is correct, the local trade is gradually getting into a healthier state, though the price situation does not indicate any change for the better. While some of the coal that is being sacrificed is of poor or indifferent quality, the discriminating buyer is able to find among it a considerable amount of the better grades, and these better grades can be had in some cases as low as $2.55 f. o. b., or an even dollar at the mines.

It is impossible to buy good Central Pennsylvania coal for mine shipment at that figure. Somerset County producers are asking from $1.30 to $1.45 for their better grades, and the poorer coals are bringing $1.15 up, as a rule. Low grade Clearfield coal is selling down to $1.05, but the better qualities are quoted at $1.25 and upward. Cambria County coals have much in the same range, with some of the highest grades going almost entirely under contract and practically unobtainable in the open market. It is a peculiarity of the present situation that while poor coal can be had at about summer prices, the better brands are in demand at good figures.

NO DEMAND FOR BRICK.

Question of Price Range Covering Common Brick Explained.

COMMON brick in this market is in light demand as far as cargo movements at wholesale dock are concerned. The only sales in the Hudson River market last week were four covered cargoes which went out at $7.50. Most of the dealers are riding from stack and there are only 34 covered cargoes left in the market.

Official transactions for North River common brick during the last week with records covering the corresponding week last year follow:

NOTE.—Inquiries from dealers and consumers regarding our quotations for Hudson River common brick have been received recently and complaint is sometimes made that the full range of prices has not always been published. This seems to call for an explanation.

Quotations made in this department are those covering basic transactions at the West 52d street wholesale docks. During the winter months a record is given of the number of cargoes under cover and the number of covered cargoes sold. This brick is quoted only when the number of covered cargo sales during the week aggregate a total large enough to be a factor in the market. When, as was the case in the week ending Feb. 8, only 1 covered cargo was sold, no quotation was made, because the sales of this brick were not sufficiently heavy to permit the fixing of a basic price. For the same reason if one or two uncovered or open cargoes of brick happen to be sold for less than the lowest basic record price, that brick is not considered as properly belonging in an official brick price range and the quotation is not given as minimum. In other words the brick quotations published in the Record and Guide are those representing the largest number of cargo sales within a range representing the average high and average low sales. The market is never judged by the quantity of brick ridden from stacks, this brick having figured in quotations and records of an earlier date. Frequently, especially in times of great speculation as at the present, the wholesale market will be extremely dull while dealers will be active on their stacks. At such times it is impossible to definitely quote price, hence, only wholesale cargo quotations are given.

The word "basic" in parenthesis following the classification of brick means that most sales are being made between those levels, which in the case this week is between $7 and $7.50, which latter figure happens to be the average current price for covered brick in the wholesale market.—Ed.

STEEL SPECIFICATIONS HEAVY.

February Tonnage Somewhat Lighter Than December and January.

EASTERN steel makers have found that specifications, while heavy so far this month, probably will not exceed December or January's business. Contracts are reported to be heavy, but specifying is slow.

The most active demand in the Pittsburgh district other than the semi-finished material which cannot be satisfied by deliveries for at least six to eight months, is for merchant bars. Some of the larger makers are so far behind in deliveries on merchant bars that they will not quote on new inquiries. Warehouse stocks are very low, and high premiums prevail for prompt shipments.

The heavy demand for steel sheets continues a feature of the Pittsburgh market. Eastern pig iron makers ascribe the dulness to last fall's heavy buying.

While steel makers as a whole are hopeful that there will be an active year in the trade to December 31, with good prices and large unfilled tonnage next January 1, the Western makers are more optimistic than the Eastern, for the latter will feel European competition more keenly if the tariff is cut.

Domestic consumers of copper continue to hold aloof from the market in anticipation of a still further decline in electrolytic. The same is true of the consumers of manufactured products, although some orders for electrical work and power plants and transmission lines were placed when the market receded to 15 cents for electrolytic. Such buying is temporarily over, but it is evident that consumers are watching the market carefully for any change in the tide affecting future delivery.

SAND AND GRAVEL FIRMER.

Plan on Foot to Standardize Gravel for Entire Country.

THE local market for sand and gravel has taken on an almost precedented strength for this time of the year. In fact some of the companies handling this commodity say that they are having trouble in meeting the demand. Sand is very stiff at 45 cents and gravel is held at varying prices generally even with list. An extra large demand for sand and gravel is reported from railroad interests, including subway contacts. Even building construction interests are aggressively in the market.

Charles D. Warner, secretary of the National Association of Sand and Gravel Producers, in commenting upon the sand and gravel situation, called attention to the activity of the National Association of Sand and Gravel Producers and what it hopes to accomplish in the near future.

The association has two committees at work, which promise much for the producers of gravel and the users of it. One is the Committee on Uniform Grades and the other is the Traffic Committee. The work of the Committee on Uniform Grades will be centered upon securing an arrangement agreeable to all sections of the country, for four or five standard sizes of gravel, that will be designated in a uniform manner, so that a "No. 1 gravel," for instance, will mean the same thing in every part of the country.

This system will make for better conditions in the architect's work in specifications, in the invoicing of materials, and will bring all the other advantages that uniformity gives. The gravel machinery manufacturers should welcome this change, as it will mean to them uniform screens. The association's committee will cooperate along this line with the National Association of Cement Users' Committee, and practical results are expetced in a short time. Aid in the consummation of the plan has been promised by Percy Wilson, Secretary of the Association of American Portland Cement Manufacturers, and by Richard L. Humphrey, President of the National Association of Cement Users.

As indicating the rapidity with which the gravel industry has grown in the United States, it may be said that as an industry it is practically only ten years old. It has grown up along with the cement industry, and at the present time there are more than 900 producing companies in the country. Last year these companies paid to the railroads of the United States more than $30,000,000 in freight. Notwithstanding this volume of business, gravel and sand have no regular classification. It also will be the work of the Freight Committee of the association to secure more equitable freight rates.

REAL ESTATE NEWS OF THE WEEK

Brokerage Sales, Leases and Public Auctions

Large Properties Form the Prime Feature of the Week's Dealing.

The real estate market this week was prolific of good sized transactions, notable among them being the sale of the Pullman Building, on the east side of Madison Square; the Twenty-sixth Street Building, described elsewhere in this issue; the Bank of the Metropolis Building, which figured in a trade; loft buildings in Walker, Prince and Howard streets; a few elevator apartment houses; numerous private dwellings; vacant plots for improvement; and, tenement houses in various parts of the city. The Bronx was well represented in the business of the week. Brooklyn did not show up as well as during the week before. The metropolitan and suburban counties of New Jersey show considerable activity and dealing in lots on Long Island is fairly active.

The Manhattan sales totaled 47, again 35 last week and 57 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 14, against 15 last week and 12 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 33, compared with 20 last week and 31 a year ago.

From the Bronx 19 sales at private contract were reported, against 14 last week and 16 a year ago.

The amount involved in the Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $584,783, compared with $1,999,391 last week, making a total since January 1 of $6,974,303. The figure for the corresponding week last year was $481,676, making the total from Jan. 1, 1912, $7,099,344.

Kompolite is the "clinching" argument to use in

Renting Your Vacant Loft

Because—merchants, especially silk merchants, prefer, and some of them demand—1st, a floor which does not "dust" or gather dust.

2nd, a floor which is soft, resilient and requires no covering.
3rd, a floor with a complete range of colors—like a rug.
4th, a fire-proof floor.
5th, a floor with a sanitary, non-absorbent surface.

KOMPOLITE

is the answer. You need look no further for a feature to put up to your merchant prospects. Write or telephone.

THIS METAL CEILING HAS CHARACTER

Beam Ceiling, Craftsman Style, in a Suburban Resid ence

A plain design—most effective as the "finishing touch." In Craftsman style, grained to match the effect of fine woodwork, it has all the advantages inherent to metal construction. No nails. All joints tongued and grooved. It does not shrink, swell or "craze." It is incombustible and does not harbor insects. Can be put up directly on wooden beams, flat tile arches or placed over plaster ceilings.

Ventilating Public Schools.

The Heating and Ventilating Magazine (10 cents, 1123 Broadway) contains in its February issue on page 38 an article describing the new rules for ventilating New York's city school buildings. The article deals with the new orders for the operation of the heating and ventilating systems in the schools which are considered radical to a degree in their reversal of former products. Such systems are hereafter to be practically in charge of the principals, to be operated or not at their discretion, while the frequent opening of the windows is not only permitted but ordered.

TENEMENT LAW AND RENTS.

Deputy Commissioner Mann Says Rents Are Less Than 25 Years Ago.

In his annual report for 1912 the Deputy Commissioner of the Tenement House Department challenges the generally accepted statement that the tenement house law has caused the raising of rents, at least in Brooklyn, by increasing the cost of construction.

"The fact is that rents are comparatively less to-day than twenty-five or thirty years ago. The average four-room flat in a double tenement—invariably in a frame structure at that—brought from $9 to $12, equal to $2.50 per room, per month. If the toilets were in a dark recess in the hall, one for each two families, and wooden washtubs in the kitchen, and gas connections, it was considered to have modern improvements, and if it had a bathroom and toilet and range for each family it was called a house with 'all modern improvements.'

"The latter house invariably had five rooms to a flat and rented for from $12 to $15, or about $3 per room, per month. All of these houses were built with interior dark bedrooms, having no windows to the outer air, except in some instances a small shaft of about 2x4 and another of about 1x3 for the watercloset.

"These types of houses are now listed in the Tenement House Department as 'old law tenements,' and rent now for approximately the same amount quoted above, though the rooms have been made light by partition windows, and the general sanitary and fire-escape conditions have been improved immeasurably. From this I contend that rents have remained stationary in that type of house, and I speak now essentially of the average workingman's apartments.

"This would indicate that the existing old law tenements have depreciated in value, since notwithstanding the improvements put in as required by the Tenement House law, the rents have remained about the same as when they were originally built. This would be the reasoning of the average owner. The fact is, however, that they have really held their own in value since it is a sure law of trade or business that all things in use deteriorate with age. So with houses which, while they have become old, they need not only constant repair but improvements as well to enable them to compete even in a measure with the new law tenement.

"In regard to the latter, with its many advantages, with its light rooms and halls, sanitary plumbing, cemented cellars, concreted and drained yards and courts, safeguards against and ample means of escape in case of fire, not to mention the modern conveniences of separate ranges, enameled sinks, tiled bath rooms with porcelain or enameled bathtubs and wash basins, syphon washout water closet, dumbwaiter, etc., practically for each family, the Tenement House law has not increased the rents.

"I can point out hundreds of such houses especially in the Borough of Queens, where the accommodations can be had with all of these advantages and conveniences just enumerated, including five rooms and bath, at from $15, $16 or $17 per month rent, and I will add that these houses are so well built of brick and stone, with interior trim and woodwork, together with the decorations that invariably go into this class of houses, as to excel anything that was ever offered before the enactment of the Tenement House law for the same rental.

"In this connection it might not be amiss to say that there need be no more timidity on the part of the investors either to lend on or purchase tenement house property, old or new, since nearly all old ones have now been improved to meet the requirements of the law, and the new ones have been erected in compliance therewith."

TAX RATE ESTIMATE.

Two Point Cut in 1913 Due to Economies and Larger Income.

In an official statement issued last night, Comptroller Prendergast estimated the tax rates in the various counties of the city for 1913 as follows:

New York (Manhattan and The Bronx)	$181
Kings (Brooklyn)	1.85
Queens	1.85
Richmond	1.92

These rates are two points lower in Manhattan, The Bronx and Brooklyn than in 1912. The Queens rate is one point higher and the Richmond rate the same.

The decrease in the tax rate, in spite of the fact that this year's budget is $11,621,184.65 larger than in 1912, is due not only to the increased assessments but also to the fact that the general fund this year will be $10,600,000 greater than last year.

Adaptability of Metal Spanish Tile.

That metal spanish tile is in great popular favor is shown by the many different types of buildings on which it has been installed. It came after years of study and experiment with a view of perfecting weatherproof tile roofing combining architectural beauty, light weight, ease of application, fire and lighting proof qualities and low maintenance cost. It offers a very handsome, durable roof at a moderate cost and is adaptable for residences, stations, express offices, all kinds of public buildings, and in the case of every installation up to the present time it has met with general approval. The water guard of the tile is high and the joints are perfect with ample provision for expansion and contraction under all climatic conditions. The heavily embossed S shapes permit free circulation of air underneath the tile, keeping the underside free from moisture. This air space also acts as a perfect non-conductor of heat and cold. The Berger Manufacturing Co., of Canton, Ohio, has descriptive catalogs for those interested.

A Summary of the Proceedings of the Local Boards, the Board of Estimate, the Supreme Court and Various Commissions and Bureaus Relating to Street and Other City and Borough Improvements.

The news collected here under the general head of Municipal Improvements is intended to be of service to property owners as well as contractors and brokers. It covers every measure looking toward a change in the City Map, toward the acquisition of title to real estate by the city or toward construction work, including the grading of streets, the laying of sewers, the building of schools, etc. Each such measure is acted upon by one or more—generally by several—official bodies before it becomes a valid ordinance. In these columns the successive official acts pertaining to it are noted from the time it is introduced in a Local Board or in the Board of Estimate. Wherever public hearings on it are granted, the fact is also announced.

Municipal improvements may be divided into two classes—those that are paid for out of the general tax levy and those that are paid for wholly or in part by special assessments on the property owners benefited. The latter, which are the more important to real estate owners, originate in the Local Boards. However, every local improvement, except certain street improvements calling for an expenditure of not more than $2,000, must be submitted to the Board of Estimate for authorization.

The news is classified and is printed in this order: Local Board Calendars, Local Board Resolutions, Proceedings of the Board of Estimate, Public Hearings, Assessments Due and Payable.

LOCAL BOARD CALENDARS.

As regards the majority of city improvements, including all that call for special assessments, the Local Boards are in a sense neighborhood legislatures. They have absolute authority over certain street improvements, costing not more than $2,000. With respect to all other local improvements, they exercise full legislative functions, subject to approval by the Board of Estimate. The Board of Estimate seldom vetoes a measure coming from a Local Board. It is before the latter that the property owner should be most watchful to make himself heard concerning proposed improvements. When a Local Board resolution comes before the Board of Estimate, the presumption of expediency is on the side of the measure, as this has been adopted after open consideration by a body supposed to be familiar with local sentiment.

There are twenty-five Local Improvement Districts in the city, each with its Local Board. This is composed of the Borough President and of the Aldermen who represent the Aldermanic districts within the Local Improvement District. The Borough President's secretary acts as secretary of the several boards. Each board has jurisdiction over matters relating to its district. In the case of matters relating to two or more districts, the boards of the districts affected sit in common. The meetings are subject to call by the Borough President.

PUBLIC HEARINGS.

One or more hearings are granted in connection with all proposed improvements. In the case of local improvements, the first hearing is by the Local Board. Such hearings are noted in this news department of the Record and Guide under the general head of Local Board Calendars. Hearings by all other bodies are noted in the present column.

In acquiring title to land for streets, sewers, parks, approaches to bridges, etc., condemnation proceedings are commonly resorted to. A proceeding having been authorized by the Board of Estimate, the Corporation Counsel makes application to the Supreme Court for the appointment of three commissioners. If the cost of the land is to be paid wholly or in part by property owners benefited, the commissioners are known as commissioners of estimate and assessment. They hold their meetings at the Bureau of Street Openings, a clerical and legal organization under the supervision of the Corporation Counsel charged with the management of all legal proceedings which involve awards for damages or assessments for benefit to land.

If the cost of the land is to be paid by the city as a whole, as in the case of school sites, dock property, etc., the commissioners are known as commissioners of estimate and appraisal, whose place of meeting is at 258 Broadway.

In the case of assessments for local improvements of a physical nature which do not have to be confirmed by a court of record, the assessments come before three permanent commissioners appointed by the Mayor. They constitute the Board of Assessors, which has to do with assessments for such improvements as the regulating and grading of streets, the laying of sewers, etc.

By the Board of Estimate.

At a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, to be held in the City Hall, Manhattan, on Feb. 27, at 10.30 a. m., the following matters, among other matters, will be considered:

WOULD TAX CEMETERIES.

Queens Borough Would Assess Them for Cost of Street Openings.

A measure that promises great relief to property holders in Queens has been introduced by Senator Patten at Albany, which provides that cemetery corporations in Queens shall not be exempt from the payment of assessments for the legal opening of streets in their vicinity and for their improvement, including the construction of sewers. Under existing laws the whole burden of such improvements has fallen upon adjacent private property owners.

In the Second Ward, where a number of the largest cemeteries are situated, improvements costing millions of dollars recently have been projected or are in course of construction, and the bill has been introduced to permit the city authorities to assess a just proportion of the cost of these against the cemeteries.

The bill has been urgently demanded by local property owners and civic organizations; but is being vigorously opposed by the representatives of the cemetery corporations. However, the property owners believe they will be supported by the courts in having the bill passed from the fact that before consolidation the old town governments were permitted to place a tax of $1 each upon every funeral cortege that passed over the roads of the borough, which sum total was used to keep the roads in repair.

Foreign Commerce of the Port.

The total foreign commerce of the Port of New York during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, amounted to $1,914,263,840, an increase of $169,386,706 over the preceding year, says a Bulletin of the Chamber of Commerce.

The total foreign commerce of the rest of the country was $2,174,451,477, an increase of $135,978,434.

In foreign commerce, therefore, New York made a larger gain than the rest of the country during the last fiscal year. The total foreign commerce of the whole country (including New York) was $4,088,715,317, an increase of $305,365,140.

Hotel Woodward to Be Enlarged.

It is announced that work is soon to be started by proprietor Thomas D. Green, of the Hotel Woodward for remodelling and enlarging the hotel at Broadway and 55th street, that will involve the expenditure of upward of $100,000. Back of this space a lounge and smoking-room will be constructed, occupying the entire space now used for dining-room service. The present Old English oak panelling will be redecorated in gold, and the ceiling done over in old ivory. The color scheme will be brown and blue, the wall space in between the oak panels being ornamented with plaster work, carrying out the general effect. An annex to contain 100 rooms, all with baths, is contemplated on the east side of the present building. These rooms will be furnished in keeping with the rest of the building, no expense being spared to make them as comfortable and attractive as possible. Operations are expected to be commenced in the near future, so that the building will be completed and running by the first of next August. The annual meeting and banquet of the New Jersey Lumbermen's Protective Association will be held in Newark, N. J., Feb. 26, with business session in the afternoon and banquet in the evening. Both events will be held at the Washington Cafe, Broad st and Military Park, Newark.

CLIFFORD B. MOORE, Assistant Engineer, Topographical Bureau of the Borough of Queens, New York City, has been promoted to Chief Engineer at a salary of $6,000 per annum. Mr. Moore entered the city service in 1900 as a transitman with engineering staff of the Department of Finance.

JOHN M. CARRERE, the architect, of the firm of Carrere & Hastings, who died on March 1, 1911, at the Presbyterian Hospital from injuries sustained when his cab was struck by a street car, left an estate valued at $331,020, according to the transfer tax appraiser, whose report was filed in the Surrogate's Court this week. ASA G. CANDLER, of Atlanta, Ga., was the guest in whose honor a dinner was given on Wednesday evening at the Hotel Astor. The festivity was arranged to celebrate the completion of the Candler Building in West 42d street, and was given by the architects, the builders and the real estate firm which represents Mr. Candler in New York, Oscar D. & Herbert V. Dike. One year ago, the first day of February, 1912, the contracts with the architects and builders were signed. There were few, at that time, who believed that a 25-story office building west of Broadway would be a success, but the same sagacity which made the Candler Building of Atlanta the most successful office building in the South, with a rent loss for last year of less than one per cent., ran true in this New York venture, the influence of which is already being felt in 42d street. The only note of sadness was struck when Mr. Candler spoke with feeling of the great loss caused by the death of Arthur E. Willauer, head of the firm of architects, a loss both personal and to the profession. Mr. Cauldwell, of the Cauldwell-Wingate Company, spoke on the construction of the building, and George Lee Bready spoke for the architects. Oscar D. Dike was toastmaster, and all voted the dinner a great success.

Wenderoth, Washington, D. C.

TRADE LITERATURE

Grand Central Column Construction.

The Engineering Record of February 1 (price 15 cents, 239 West 39th street) contains an article on Columns in the Grand Central Terminal. It deals with the subject of providing possible future extension of 23 stories above the lofty concourse and tells in an interesting way by detailed sketches and diagrams how the columns are braced to form several wind resisting towers. The portal construction, girder bases and their deep riveted girder connections also offer very interesting details to the architect having to do with methods of types of steel construction.

Steel Work of Novel Design.

Comparatively little has been published regarding novel steel construction of the Seamen's Church Institute at Coenties slip and South street, New York, of which Warren & Wetmore are the architects. Balcom & Darrows are the engineers. An article describing a steel-cage construction having cantilever foundation girders with grillage fulcrums on continuous pneumatic caissions, wall piers, trusses, and double plate girders carrying 7-story columns, and cantilever supports for a 12-story corner tower, appears with illustrations in the Engineering Record of February 3 (price 10 cents, 239 West 39th street) showing the different types of column framing.

Dixon's Catalog Ready.

The new 1913 Dixon graphite catalog is now ready for distribution by the Dixon Crucible Company of Jersey City. It is designed to interest jobbers, purchasing agents, and others, interested in graphite crucibles, paint lubricants and pencils. It contains 100 pages of type and illustrations. Its chief value lies in the fact that it shows new applications for the use of graphite in many departments of building construction.

Lead Pencils for Fine Work.

A lead pencil which meets with the exacting requirements of artists, architects and draftsmen is pretty sure to find ready appreciation with the general pencil using public. This has been demonstrated by the big demand for Venus drawing pencils. This brand of pencils was designed particularly for work where smoothness and absolute uniformity of lead is essential and in their manufacture the finest quality of graphite is employed and treated to give it great durability, smoothness and an absolute uniformity of hardness for each different grade. The American Lead Pencil Co., of New York, will send further information regarding pencil perfection for particular writing or drawing requirements upon application.

Burglar Alarm Circuits.

The Electrical Review for February 15 (price, 10 cents, 13 Park Row) contains an article on page 349 by George Reed on the subject of Burglar Alarm Circuits, so explained as to give the architect an intimate idea of how this detail is worked out in practice. On page 350 is an article by V. Spath, describing the rewiring of a house with rigid circuit. The same number contains an article on page 344 on the investigation that the New York Edison Company is making into the subject of electrotherapeutics.

Small Gas Engine Power.

Power, of date February 18 (price, 5 cents, 505 Pearl street) contains an article on Misleading Indicator Diagrams on page 226 by L. Grossbaum and an article by M. W. Utz on the Operating Cost of a Small Gas Engine Plant. In this article records which may be of value to architects having supervision over the installation of small power plants are published.

Freezing Process for Foundations.

A description of what is believed to be the first application of the freezing process for constructing a building foundation; the method used for the substructure of a department store in Berlin, Germany, appears in the Engineering News of January 30 (price, 15 cents, 505 Pearl street). The article on page 214 tells just how the work was done and discusses difference in cost between the freezing and the pneumatic-caisson processes.

TRADE LITERATURE.

A Handbook for Building Engineers.

A book which should be of value to engineers in buildings is entitled "Mechanical World Pocket Diary and Year Book for 1913," published in Manchester, England, by Emmott & Company, Ltd. It is bound in cloth, contains 388 pages and is illustrated. Price is 25 cents post paid. The book contains a number of tables which will be of value to the mechanical engineer. The steam engine, steam turbine, steam boiler, oil engine, gas engine and gas producer receive attention. The section devoted to spiral gearing deserves special mention, as this is a subject not usually included in handbooks. Tables are given for the cutting of gears of this form as well as of the more ordinary form. There are a number of mathematical tables and tables of conversion of units in different systems.

Studying Fuel.

F. J. Brislee, D. Sc. D., is publishing through D. Van Nostrand Company, of this city, a 269-page illustrated book at $3, which is the first of a series of volumes treating the subject of industrial chemistry under the general title "Outlines of Industrial Chemistry." The purpose of each volume is "to provide students and persons employed on the technical side of any particular industry with a handbook explaining the chemical aspect of the operations carried on in that industry.

The first two chapters treat of the chemistry of combustion and include a consideration of reacting substances, reaction velocity and the use of catalysers to accelerate the velocity of reactions. The next chapter deals with the analysis of fuel and flue gases and proves very instructive. Directions are given for the use of Hempel, Orsat and Stead apparatus. The precautions to be observed in taking and analyzing a flue-gas sample are enumerated.

Calorimetry is the subject of Chapter IV and includes instructions for using several well-known calorimeters. Chapter V describes the many kinds of pyrometers for furnace control, and special attention is given to the Féry radiation pyrometer.

After a rather technical discussion of combustion temperature calculations in Chapter VI, the classification and composition of various fuels are treated. A simple laboratory test is described for identifying the class to which a coal belongs, i. e., as to whether it is a caking or noncaking coal.

New General Electric Bulletins.

The General Electric Company, of 50 Church street, announces the following bulletins ready for distribution. These bulletins are prepared for the express use of specifiers on building construction and engineering work and are valuable for reference purposes:

Bulletin No. A4065, just issued, is an attractive publication of 36 pages, in colors, and it illustrates fixed and oscillating desk and bracket fans for alternating and direct current, and also ceiling fans and ventilating fans. The publication contains also illustrations of various wiring devices for use in connection with fans as well as a list of supply parts for all fans.

Bulletin No. A4069, just issued, is devoted to the subject of portable and stationary air compressor sets, which supersedes the company's previous bulletin on this subject.

Bulletin No. A4066 illustrates that company's electric hardening furnace. This publication supersedes a previous publication on this subject.

Bulletin No. A4063 describes various types of polyphase induction motors. This publication supersedes the company's previous bulletin on this subject.

Bulletin No. 4994 describes and illustrates subway transformers, and supersedes a previous bulletin on this subject.

Parian Illuminating Glassware.

The Gill Bros. Co., of Steubenville, O., is issuing an attractive catalog, dealing with Parian illuminating glassware. The catalog is complete with diagrams showing the relative reviewing power of the various shapes and globes turned out by this company and presents data which should be of great value to an architect. Further, the catalog contains a description of the use of the tables in laying out lighting installation which should be of great value to architects, owners and building managers. Copies of this work may be obtained by requesting "Illustrated Catalog No. 30," at the Steubenville address.

Handbook on Wiring.

The Electrical Review Publishing Company of Chicago, 608 South Dearborn street, Chicago, is issuing its 1913 edition of its standard wiring for electric light and power by Cushing. It contains the latest rules of the National Fire Underwriters with explanations and illustrations. A full description of carbon, gem, tantalum, tungsten and master incandescent lamps. In addition it contains the most simple and complete formulae and tables, with examples worked out for direct and alternating current wiring for light, heat and power, for all systems—prepared especially for this year's edition of "Standard Wiring." Every necessary table for every equipment of the constructing engineer, contractor, general station and wireman is included. It settles disputes, and if referred to before wiring will prevent costly mistakes. Some electrical companies give them to all their inside and outside help. It is bound in flexible leather, pocket size, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

Building Stones and Clay Products.

Under this title John Wiley & Sons, of this city, are publishing a handbook for architects, by Heinrich Ries, Ph.D., Professor of Economic Geology of Cornell University.

It is incumbent upon all architects to know the properties of various building stones and to recognize them in rough and finished form. A course intended to give such knowledge is presented in most of our architectural colleges. At Cornell University this course is given by Prof. Ries, and the present book is one prepared after some years' instruction in the subject, and follows the course of lectures given at that university.

It takes up, first, a general but brief description of rock minerals and rock and the properties of building stone in general. Then follows specific chapters on ignegous rock and gneisses, sandstones, limestones and marble, slate and serpentine. The latter part of the book is devoted to clay products and takes up the general properties of clay and describes in detail the building brick, terra cotta, hollow block, roofing tile, wall and floor tile, and sewer pipe and sanitary ware.

The general chapters are abstracted forms of the larger books on rock products, and give only the more imoprtant facts in each case. In fact, the author states that for more specific information more detailed books should be consulted. Under the specific chapters on special types of stone, the qualities of the stone are given, their classification and very valuable information. The book is illustrated by 59 page plates.

Business Building.

In the February number of Advertising and Selling (20 cents, 71 West 23d street) Herbert E. Sumner tells a story of how a big lumber business was built from small beginning through the agency of trade paper advertising. The article contains a practical and true story of what trade paper advertising can do for a business when that advertising campaign is properly conducted. The subject of the article is the Sumner Lumber Company, of 50 Church street, and the article is written by the man who has made his advertising net him large and permanent dividends.

EXPLANATION OF TERMS USED AND RULES FOLLOWED IN COMPILING RECORDS.

Q. C. is an abbreviation for Quit Claim deed, i. e., a deed wherein all the right, title and interest of the grantor is conveyed omitting all covenants and warranty.

C. a G. means a deed containing Covenant against Grantor only, in which he covenants that he hath not done any act whereby the estate conveyed may be impeached, charged or encumbered.

B. & S. is an abbreviation for Bargain and Sale deed, wherein, although the seller makes no expressed consideration, he really grants or conveys the property for a valuable consideration, and thus impliedly claims to be the owner of it.

The street and avenue numbers given in these lists are, in all cases, taken from the insurance maps when they are not mentioned in the deeds. The numbers, it will occasionally be found, do not correspond with the existing ones, owing to there having been no official designation made of them by the Department of Public Works.

The first date is the date the deed was drawn. The second date is the date of filing same. When both dates are the same, only one is given. When the date of drawing is other than in the current year the stated year is given. When both the dates are in the same year the year follows the second date.

The figures in each conveyance, thus, 2:482—10, denote that the property mentioned is in section 2, block 482, lot 10.

It should also be noted in section and block numbers that the instrument as filed is strictly followed.

A $20,000—$30,000 indicates the assessed value of the property, the first figures being for the lot only and the second figures representing both lot and building. Letter P before second figure indicates that the property is assessed as in course of construction. Valuations are from the assessment roll of 1912.

T. S. preceding the consideration in a conveyance means that the deed or conveyance has been recorded under the Torrens System.

Flats and apartment houses are classified as tenements.

Residences as dwellings.

All Christian names, streets, avenues, states and months are abbreviated when possible, also in some instances names of Banks, Trusts and Insurance Companies.

The number in ( ) preceding the serial number to the right of the date line, at head of this page, is the Index number for the Checking Index.

The Star following names of street or avenue in the Bronx Conveyances, Leases and Mortgages indicates that the property recorded is in the annexed district, for which there is no section or block number.

IMPORTANT TO THOSE WHO EXPECT TO BUILD

WHEN PLANNING TO BUILD, you will find it of great value to first make a careful personal study of the illustrations of houses, etc., that have been designed and built by a number of leading architects, and to also learn their ideas regarding the best interior arrangement and the most appropriate furnishings. This important information, which would greatly aid you in deciding about your own building plans, when you take them up with your own architect and builder, can easily be obtained from the several hundred exterior and interior designs that are beautifully illustrated in the last six numbers of the

Architectural Record

The National Magazine for Architects, Owners and Builders

A Powerful Business Producer for those firms whose products are used in Building Construction, Equipment or Furnishing GUARANTEED CIRCULATION EXCEEDS 11,000 MONTHLY.

In these six numbers are also illustrated and described the numerous building-specialties that add very much to the comfort, convenience and value of the modern home, without materially increasing the initial cost; and this information may mean the saving of many dollars to you.

NEW YORK, MARCH 1, 1913

CHANGES IN LOWER BROADWAY, BROOKLYN

Once the Premier Part of Williamsburg, This Part of Broadway Was Impaired by the Opening of Williamsburg Bridge

BROADWAY, in Brooklyn, from the ferry east to Driggs avenue, a distance of four long blocks, has lost caste to a great extent as a result of the opening of the Williamsburg bridge, whose easterly end opens on a plaza two blocks wide and ends at Havemeyer street. From the most important part of the Eastern District, lower Broadway has become inconsequential and the Williamsburg Bridge has had the same effect on the street as the New York and Brooklyn Bridge has had on Fulton street between the river and Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. East of Havemeyer street Broadway is one of the most important business thoroughfares of the city and leased to operating companies; but, it took much persistent agitation by the manufacturing interests of Williamsburg and Greenpoint to get the city to do anything in the premises.

The corporation that had acquired much of the ferry property from the old ferry company offered to sell it to the city at a figure which the city deemed excessive; and, the municipality accordingly asked the Supreme Court to appoint commissioners of estimate and assessment to determine the fair value of the property in discussion. The commissioners appointed were Bernard Gallagher, who is a former fire commissioner of the old city of Brooklyn and a prominent builder of Williamsburg; Thomas E. Pearsall, a prominent lawyer of Brooklyn, and William D. Walsh, of Williamsburg. The latter made a minority report criticising the report of his fellow commissioners. Comptroller Prendergast also was opposed to the majority report. The result has been that the court has disapproved the findings of the majority of the commissioners and has appointed new commissioners to make their findings in the premises. This committee has not yet finished its work.

Car and pedestrian traffic has fallen off to so great an extent in lower Broadway that there are now 27 vacant stores and a few empty buildings from Driggs avenue west to the river. Vacant stores predominate in the north side of the street. Before the conditions changed for the worse in this part of Broadway nearly all of the important banks and other financial institutions in Williamsburg were situated within two blocks of the ferry. The only landmark remaining near the ferry is the building of the Brooklyn Daily Times, at 24 and 26 Broadway, which is still occupied by that paper; but, it is understood that within a year this paper will remove to the vicinity of Flatbush avenue and Fulton street, in the central part of Brooklyn; and, if this happens, then all of the old institutions in lower Broadway will have vanished except Thomas Wallace's haberdashery, a block away, which has been on one corner for 40 years or more. Since the decline of traffic in the blocks adjacent to the ferry the following institutions have removed from them to the vicinity of the Williamsburg Bridge Plaza: the First National Bank, the Dime Savings Bank of Williamsburg, the Williamsburg City Fire Insurance Company, the Meserole City Surveying Company (Gen. J. V. Meserole), and several well-known restaurants, cafes, law firms, cigar stores and what not. Minden's famous cafe, which was right at the ferry, has vanished to other parts, while the cars that go to the ferry are few in number.

BROADWAY, AT BEDFORD AVENUE, BROOKLYN

FOOT OF BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, NEAR THE FERRY

The greater city; but, this part of the street will be dealt with in another article in the near future. In lower Broadway the street lost business strength and rental productiveness on account not only of the opening of the bridge, but by the closing of all the Williamsburg ferries to Manhattan that had their Brooklyn terminals at the foot of Broadway. These ferries connected with 23d street, 42d street, Grand street and Roosevelt street, in Manhattan, and until bridges became the vogue these water routes yielded large profits to their operator, the New York & Brooklyn Ferry Company. More than five years ago practically all of these ferries were abandoned because it was no longer profitable for the company to run them. Shipping interests in Williamsburg felt the closing of them severely because they led to both up and down town in Manhattan and it meant a great deal of additional hauling by teams. After a long period of idleness some of these ferries were reopened by

The rental power of property in either side of Broadway west of Bedford avenue is inconsequential compared to the incomes it produced when the ferries were the great traffic feeders of the street. True, the Manufacturers' National Bank, the Nassau Trust Company and the Kings County Savings Institution still hold forth in their old quarters, which are between Bedford aveune and Berry street, but in the opinion of those who are qualified to know it is believed that even these banks will eventually find it worth while to do business either farther east on Broadway or elsewhere in Brooklyn. At the northeast corner of Broadway and Driggs avenue is a large 4-story iron front building that was built and occupied for many years by B. G. Latimer & Sons. When the constructon of the Williamsburg Bridge was begun this firm foresaw that lower Broadway was doomed to be injured in its traffic activity and it packed up and moved over to the part of Brooklyn that it is rumored that the Brooklyn Times will remove to. The iron front building of the firm on Broadway has since had a varied existence. Part of its ground floor was for a long time occupied as a Station House for a city precinct, while the rest of the building has been given over to light manufacturers; but, it never has been occupied again by one concern for any retail business.

On the northwest corner of Broadway and Driggs avenue is the fine granite structure of the Williamsburg Savings Bank, which is one of the strongest financial institutions of its kind in the country. The building is one of the early designs of George B. Post. While it is comparatively remote from the field of activity it is nevertheless right at an elevated station, near the cross-town line of cars and only a block from the lower part of the bridge plaza. This bank could be more centrally situated nowadays, but it has a beautiful building to which it added a costly wing not more than ten years ago; and, it is very probable that the circumstance inclines the institution to remain where it is. Besides, the bank is so well known to every Brooklynite that people go out of their way to go to it, doing business as it does with persons in all parts of the borough and on Long Island.

The average business concern would have had to remove to a more central location long ago. This part of Broadway, adjacent to the west end of the plaza, has not been quite so hard hit by loss of traffic as the blocks west of Bedford avenue. At the southwest corner of Broadway and Driggs avenue Liptrott's Meat Market comprises a landmark that has been there for 40 years or more. Mr. Liptrott owns the property, and he can probably get more benefit from it as a butcher shop than he could by renting it for some other purpose. For his business this building is a valuable location, because he caters to trade throughout the Eastern District and besides his store is passed by several lines of cars and is within a block of the bridge plaza. There are no modern improvements hereabouts, and there are not likely to be. Many of these old buildings have apartments in the upper floors and these, of course, still produce an income.

In Broadway, west of Bedford avenue, there are numerous 3 and 4-story buildings, whole floors in which were in the past leased to lawyers, architects and brokers. Nowadays, these floors are either empty or are leased for light manufacturing purposes. A crosstown subway, from Coney Island to Queens, may help to restore lower Broadway to the primacy it once enjoyed, but even that is problematical.

THE ISSUE ON AUTOMATIC SPRINKLERS

The First Square Line-Up—A Misdemeanor Not to Obey Fire-Prevention Orders, Unless Arbitrary and Unreasonable.

SEVERAL points of vital importance to builders and owners of loft property have been recently decided by the Court of Special Sessions, in connection with the criminal prosecution of Charles Kaye for refusing to comply with an order of the Fire Commissioner, requiring the installation of automatic sprinklers in the 12-story loft building, 30-36 West 26th street.

Carlisle Norwood, Esq., counsel for Mr. Kaye, moved to dismiss the charge against him upon several grounds, among them these:

1. That the violation of a fireprevention order is not a crime;

2. That the Fire Commissioner has no authority to require that a building shall be equipped with automatic sprinklers;

3. That the ordinance of December 19, 1911, under which the Fire Commissioner claims authority to require the installation of sprinklers, was superseded by the enactment of Chapter 322 of the Laws of 1912, an amendment to the Labor Laws effected at the instance of the Factory Investigation Commission.

Violation a Misdemeanor.

Assistant Corporation Counsel MacNulty, the city's fire-law expert, contended for the prosecution that a negligent or wilful violation of a written order of the Fire Commissioner is a misdemeanor under the provisions of section 773 of the Greater New York Charter, which is punishable under section 1937 of the Penal Law by a fine of not exceeding $500, or imprisonment in the penitentiary for not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. He argued that automatic sprinklers were "means for preventing and extinguishing fire," within the meaning of the ordinance of December 19, 1911, which empowers the Fire Commissioner to require factory buildings, shops and other business establishments to be equipped with "such means for preventing and extinguishing fire" as he shall deem necessary.

Finally, the Assistant Corporation Counsel urged that the amendment of the Labor Law is a general statute, mandatory in its terms and arbitrary in its effects, which could not be properly construed to divest the Fire Commissioner of his discretionary powers under the ordinance, in the absence of a specific repealing provision.

Mr. MacNulty pointed out that the Labor Law amendment, if held to be applicable to this city, would require the installation of automatic sprinklers in all loft buildings over seven stories in height and having wooden floors and trim, in the event that more than 200 people were regularly employed on the floors therein above the seventh, irrespective of the comparative combustibility of the materials manufactured or stored therein. He further called attention to the fact that there was no possible appeal to the courts for relief against the unreasonableness of such a law. On the other hand, he argued that the courts had ample authority to prevent any unreasonable exercise of the discretionery powers of the Fire Commissioner, as to automatic sprinklers or other matters within his jurisdiction, and that the judiciary had not hesitated to assert such authority, whenever necessary.

Court Sustains City's Contention.

The Court sustained the contention of counsel for the city on all points and denied the motion to dismiss the information against Mr. Kaye; conceding, however, that he would be entitled to acquittal on proof that the order of the Fire Commissioner was arbitrary and unreasonable.

THE PLANNING OF SUBURBAN HOUSES

The Purpose of Good Planning Is the Getting of the Maximum of Convenience For the Least Expenditure.

Economize in the Size of the Hall, If Necessary—Kitchens Should Be Small and Carefully Planned.

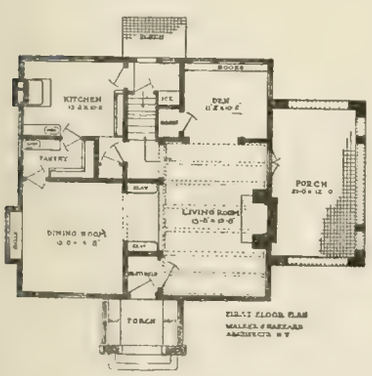
No. 20 North 10th Street, Roseville, N. J. Erected for Roseville Realty Co. J. F. Capen, Architect.

THE planning of the rooms of a suburban house it a matter that is closely connected with the subject of our previous article, viz.: the layout of the grounds and the proper situation for the house itself. Indeed, the two things cannot be considered apart. A man who buys a lot in a suburb and proposes to build upon it a house according to some plan which has seemed to him very convenient in some other house is probably making a mistake. The plan of every house worked out in relation to a particular site and to the needs of a family of a certain size is substantially a new problem.

Its success depends upon its adaptation to the size and exposure of the site and to the possible irregularities and the trees which characterize the lot. It also depends upon the size of the family, the kind of house which it can afford to build, and the needs of its various members. The practice which used to prevail of buying a set of designs and plans for a house of a certain cost, and putting that house down upon a lot irrespective of the dimensions and exposure of the site or of the needs of the family—such a practice is bound to result in uncomfortable as well as ugly houses.

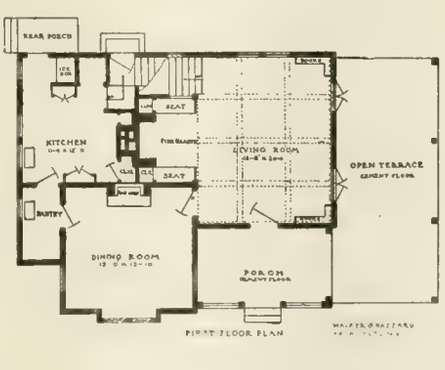
While, however, it is impossible to devise typical sets of plans which can be applied to an individual case without careful modification to meet the needs of that case, the art of planning houses has in recent years advanced quite as much as the art of designing them. Trained and experienced architects have worked out certain general conditions to which a good plan must conform; and while these conditions are not of universal application, they supply a good rough test of the practicability of any particular plan.

Rectangular Shaped Houses Are Economical.



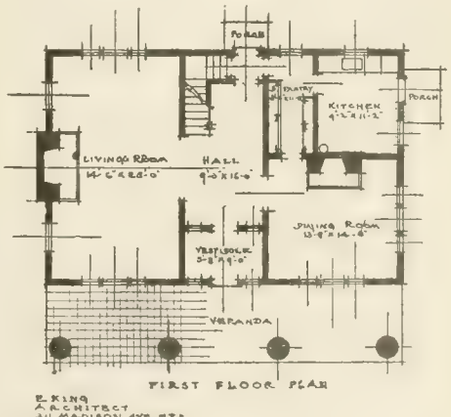
Here again the suburban development companies have made a real contribution to the art of planning houses under severe and inexorable commercial restrictions. They have been obliged to study carefully how certain sound general ideas about planning could best be applied to a house of particular size situated on a particular lot. The success and failure of their operation might well depend upon their ability to impose upon possible purchasers the idea that they were getting a peculiarly convenient and unexpectedly spacious house for the money.

The purpose of good planning is to secure for the family the maximum of convenience for the smallest possible expenditure of money. The maximum of convenience requires that each room shall be precisely adapted in size and location to its particular purpose, and that the different rooms shall be connected in such a manner as to necessitate no unnecessary traveling and no unnecessary interference. In spite of the fact that for many years the ordinary American suburban house was square, it is now pretty well agreed among architects that a rectangular house usually permits a more economical distribution of the space. A little consideration will convince the reader that a rectangle allows of much more flexibility in arrangement than would a square.



Halls Are Smaller.

In modern planning the tendency is to make the halls much smaller than formerly. In no one of the rooms has a larger amount of saving been effected. Unquestionably nothing contributes more to the attractiveness of a house than a spacious and inviting hall, but whenever it is necessary to save, as in the case of most suburban houses, it is better to save in the dimensions of a non-essential room like a hall than in the case of one of the really essential rooms.



I do not mean by the foregoing statement that the hall should be omitted. On the contrary, the absence of a common means of access to the different rooms necessarily means a comparatively inconvenient house, but no attempt need be made to convert it from a convenience into a living-room. In care the house has only one staircase, the distance from the kitchen to the staircase should be short, so that the movement of the servants will not attract much notice; but whenever possible there should be two staircases. Nothing is more important in the arrangement of a house than the concealment of the servants from view when they are attending to their ordinary work.

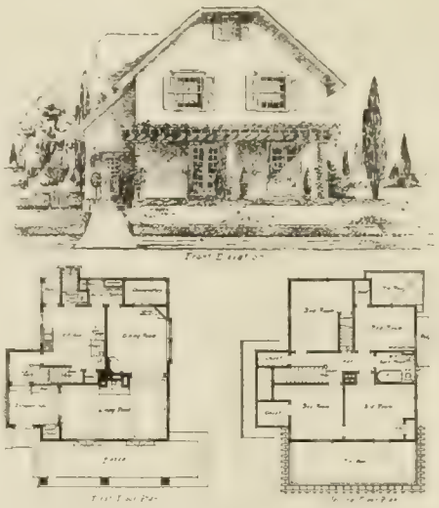
So the hall has of late years tended to become a smaller and more exclusively practical apartment; the living-room has, on the contrary, tended to become larger. People are beginning to understand that a spacious living-room affords perhaps the best possible means of making an economical house both attractive and comfortable.

Comfortable Living-Rooms.



Even in cheap buildings, consequently, this essential apartment is surely less than 14x18 ft., while in inexpensive dwellings of the bungalow type it is frequently larger. It is almost essential for a comfortable living-room in our climate that it has plenty of window-space and that it obtain the full advantage of a southern exposure. The whole effect is to make it as bright and sunny and airy as possible. The old habit of placing the porch so that its roof deprived the living-room of direct light has been completely abandoned. The porch is now almost always situated on the end of the building. It must be accessible from the living-room, but must not interfere with its light. In order to satisfy these requirements, the living-room usually occupies one end of a rectangular building with windows on three sides.

The Size of the Dining-Room.

The tendency of present planning is to keep the dining-room small as compared to the living-room. It has been described as a room built around a dining table. A family of a certain size needs a table of a certain size; and if you add to the size of the table space for chairs, for necessary additional furniture and for convenient serving, you get pretty near the size of the modern dining-room. Of course, I am referring to those houses in which it is necessary above all to economize space.

Rooms no bigger than 12x15 ft. can be made convenient and attractive, although it is desirable if possible to have a little more space. An eastern exposure is ideal for a dining-room, because breakfast is the meal at which it should look and feel its best, but usually the exposure of the dining-room cannot be considered in the arrangement of the rooms. It has to be sacrificed to the more important requirements of the living-room. A serious attempt should, however, be made to avoid the inconveniences of a western exposure for this room.

The tendency is also to keep the kitchen comparatively small, so that the cook will not have to move around too much in preparing the meals. A small kitchen need not be a hot kitchen, provided proper cross drafts are provided or, still better, a system of forced ventilation to remove both the heat and the odors.

No. 23 North 10th Street, Roseville, N. J. Erected for Roseville Realty Co. J. F. Capen, Architect.

A Glance into the Kitchen.

A great deal of ingenuity has been exercised of late years in improving the arrangement and equipment of kitchens. A small kitchen is practical even for a large house, but its very smallness makes it necessary that every detail should be carefully planned. The range, for instance, should be near the sink, and both should be very well lighted. Windows near the ceiling should be provided if possible. Dripboards are now usually built-in and are liberally provided, because the housewife needs a great many of them. Ice-boxes are also frequently furnished as fixtures. The space under the sink is left open for sanitary reasons. Pantries also are made smaller so as to diminish the amount of necessary housework, and much can be done towards this end by the use of good permanent materials. Tiled walls and floors for pantry and kitchen are rare in suburban houses, but they are worth what they cost in their durability and in their labor-saving value.

The Luxury of Porches.

With the improvement of house-plans the porch has become an object of increasing study. It is almost always situated on the side of a house, or in the rear, so as to obtain privacy. The porch is now as frequently used both as an out-door living-room and as a dining-room and should, consequently, be accessible only from the house. It is becoming more and more common to protect the porches from the north, to screen them in summer and sometimes entirely to enclose them in winter. It is becoming more and more common, also, to locate a sleeping porch over the chief veranda—an addition, which is frequently as desirable architecturally as it is practically. A sleeping porch must not be less than seven feet in width, although eight feet is better. If windows are used, those of the casement type allow a freer passage of air.

Wherever possible, bedrooms should have windows on two sides, and the master and mistress of a house can do nothing which in our climate will contribute more to their comfort than a bedroom with windows on three sides—assuming, that is, that they do not want to sleep out-of-doors.

Bathrooms, like the other purely practical apartments, should be kept as small as possible, and should be liberally provided. One bathroom for every three adults in the house is little enough. Like the kitchen and pantry, they should be finished if possible in tile. Expenses of this kind are an economy in the long run.

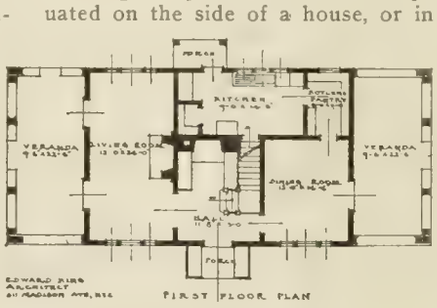
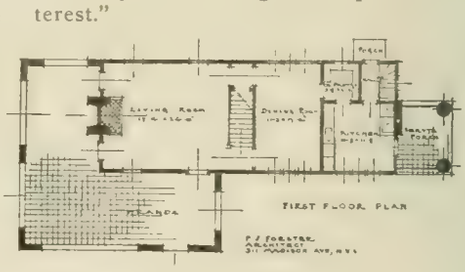
Speculation Necessary for Progress.



"Endeavors to limit and stifle speculation bring a long list of evils in their train," said a financier. "Speculation is the natural development in great and small business. It is the yeast which keeps the loaf light and sweet. Ill-advised efforts to blot it out will result in failure, or, if successful, will mean distinct disadvantage to the whole country.

"This experiment has been tried in an older country than the United States, and after laws of the kind had been tested in actual operation for a number of years, they were completed rescinded. Reference is made to the experiment in Germany, where for twelve years restrictive measures against speculation were in force.



"The government, in rescinding the law, stated very positively that it had been injurious to general public interest."

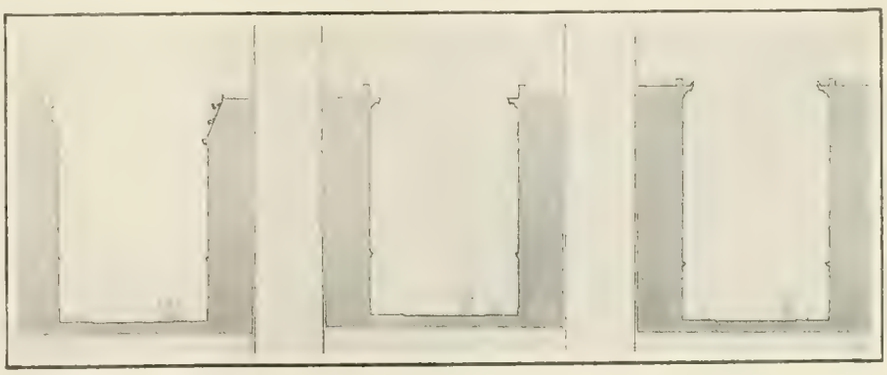
NEW BUILDING REGULATIONS FOR CITY

A Committee of the Board of Estimate to Consider Legal and Economic Possibility of Limiting Building Height and Protecting Property Rights

THE resolution which Borough President McAneny introduced in the Board of Estimate on Thursday brings the whole subject of building restrictions to a point where it can be made a definite issue, and where it can be officially investigated as to its legal, architectural and economic soundness. The resolution recognizes the growing sentiment in the community that the time has come when some attempt of an official nature should be made to regulate the height, size and arrangement of buildings, in order to arrest the seriously increasing evil of shutting off light and air from other buildings, to prevent unwholesome congestion, both in living conditions and in the streets, and to reduce the hazards of fire. The resolution will pass.

Fifth avenue with buildings the height of the University Club (128 feet). Rue de la Paix, Paris. Fifth avenue as it was.



Mayor Gaynor is authorized by the resolution to name three members of the Board of Estimate to take this general subject under consideration, to inquire into and to investigate the conditions actually existing, and to ascertain and report whether in the opinion of the members of the committee it is desirable so to regulate the plans of buildings hereafter to be erected or altered within the city limits. Also, to examine into the practice and comparative experience of other cities either here or abroad, and finally, to consider and report upon the matter of the legal right of the city to regulate building construction in the manner proposed.

Whether it would be lawful and desirable to divide the city into zones, in order to regulate the height, size and arrangement of buildings on a basis suitable for each district, the committee is also directed by the resolution to inquire into. The committee may appoint an advisory committee to aid in its work but to serve without pay; a secretary may be employed and expert and technical help obtained, for which a fund of not to exceed $15,000 is provided.

The committee is instructed to submit in advance of any general report suggestions and recommendations relative to the proposed limitation in the height of buildings hereafter erected on Fifth avenue between Washington Square and 110th street. There was already a resolution before the Board of Estimate, since May 9, 1912, looking toward building restrictions on Fifth avenue, which prior resolution will be superseded by the new one. The committee is to submit a report not later than six months from the date of its appointment and shall thereupon cease to exist.

The Invasion of East Side Workers.

The continued invasion of the highest class shopping and retail district of Manhattan by sweatshops and factories located in the upper floors of huge loft buildings, sending forth daily their hordes of workers to flood the sidewalks and bring business practically to a standstill during the middle of the day, has apparently made it imperative for all who take a real pride in Fifth avenue and want to see it preserved, to get into line behind this movement which, up to the present time, seems to be the only one to hold forth any relief from those intolerable conditions. Nor is this the only reason why inordinately high buildings should be prevented from rearing themselves in the world's foremost shopping and residential thoroughfare. The harmony of Fifth avenue's architecture, its beauty and its rare charm are seriously threatened by the existing marked tendency to make it a cheerless canyon like so many downtown streets.

Fifth avenue with buildings 125 feet to cornice line and two stories in roof. Total height, 150 feet. Fifth avenue with buildings 150 feet high. Fifth avenue with buildings the height of Sherry's (162 feet high).

These and many other considerations have combined to win a very large public support for the proposed legal height limitation of future structures along the Avenue. How earnest this feeling of the part of the public is in behalf of keeping out the "skyscraper" and the loft building in future is shown by a large number of replies received by the Fifth Avenue Association recently in response to invitations sent out by it to several hundreds of Fifth avenue property owners and business men asking their views. With almost no exceptions, every owner of property and business man who answered—and the number that did answer was surprisingly large—gave vent to the most earnest and enthusiastic approval of the proposed limitation measure and promised his utmost support of the movement to put the restrictive law into effect.

Coming Out in the Open.

One of the most significant facts of all in connection with the making of this canvass to determine where the leading property and business interests of the Fifth avenue section stand with reference to the anti-high building programme is that a large number of persons—among them many of the best-known and most influential residents of the city—who rarely come out in the open and make their positions known in a matter of this kind, have been among the most spirited in their expressions of approval.

One of the strongest replies to a circular letter of inquiry, which went to about 50 persons in all, came from an eminent physician, whose views, he said, represented those not alone of himself but of several other owners of Fifth avenue property. He was opposed to any further erection of high buildings in Fifth avenue, he declared, not only because he is personally interested as a holder of real estate but because as a physician he is interested as much in the prevention as in the cure of diseases, particularly of tuberculosis.

A prominent real estate firm, writing as the representatives of large Fifth avenue interest, say: "We most decidedly agree that the restriction of the height of buildings to 125 feet to the cornice line with no more than two mansard-roof stories should be enforced in order to save Fifth avenue from the blight that exists below 23d street. It is unsightly and unattractive in the extreme, and we hope that your valuable association will use every effort to bring about this result, in order that symmetry and grace may abide where now there is so much that is not uniform or beautiful."

One of the most vigorous expressions of opinion came from a woman owner of property in the thirties. "I consider the question of limiting the height of buildings on Fifth avenue absolutely vital for more reasons than one," says she. "Fifth avenue should be kept from becoming an Avenue A ghetto, as it has already become in some portions in the morning, at the lunch hour and at the closing hour. I do not believe that any city or any people but ours would tolerate or permit the various nuisances and abominations that are being perpetrated in New York in various ways, among others the abominable skyscraper which is fast turning the city into a vast sunless canyon."

Of the same tenor is the letter from a prominent business man and property owner in West 53d street. He writes: "I am very strongly in favor of limiting the height of buildings on Fifth avenue to 125 feet to the cornice line; in fact, I feel that that height is too much, and would like to see buildings established on the line of Fifth avenue, agreeing in height with the two beautiful buildings just erected by Black, Starr & Frost, at 48th street, and Duveen Brothers, at 56th street."

The rector of one of the largest and best known Fifth avenue churches states: "We are most heartily in favor of such a movement (for limiting building heights) being made, and guaranteed by most effective legislation."

REAL ESTATE MORTGAGES AS INVESTMENTS

A Sure Income with Absolute Security—Free From the Risks of Stock Ownership—Unaffected By Business Panics

By HENRY BLOCH

HAVE you ever stopped to consider who really owns New York? Did you ever realize that while the title to the real estate is vested in the owners of the property a greater interest by far is held by those who hold the mortgages covering the property? That of the seven and one-half billion dollars of assessed real estate probably two-thirds thereof is represented by mortgages on it? That the landlord is the popular owner and owner in name, while the first and more substantial interest is held by the mortgagee?

A conservative mortgage on well-located, improved real estate is perhaps the choicest of the many forms of investment. For security, it is classed with government bonds and is one of the few forms of investments permissible to trustees, executors, etc., by the laws of the State. The risk of investment in a business, and the uncertainty of the rise and fall of a stock investment are almost entirely eliminated. The rate of interest is higher than is payable on government bonds or on deposits in savings banks.

Small Chance for Loss.

The likelihood of a loss is placed at a minimum. The owner takes care of his property to prevent the loss of his money invested therein; he must lose everything before the mortgagee loses anything. For the holder of a mortgage which does not exceed sixty per cent. of the value of the property, a tremendous depreciation is necessary to endanger the security of the investment. Unless it covers property of a class peculiar to itself, such as clubs, theatres, factories, etc., which are always undesirable for mortgage loans on account of the limited market which such properties have, such a loss is improbable.

The value of New York City real estate may fluctuate with the times; it may rise and fall; but in the last analysis it will be found that the amount of the increase has exceeded the depreciation. Land values in New York have come to stay. Our city family consists of a teeming population of almost 5,000,000 persons. As many as 48,000 immigrants were poured into New York, the gateway to the nation, in a single day. And all the people must have a home and a place to work. The city's increase in population every year equals the entire population of Albany, and in three years the population of Buffalo. It is estimated that in 1950 the population of New York will be 10,000,000.

An investment in bond and mortgage is no alluring attraction to the speculator. There is not even a vague possibility of a doubling in value, as may be the case in stocks which are sometimes artificially driven up to a high mark by the manipulations of a chosen few, entirely regardless of the true and intrinsic value of the security. On the other hand, there can be no such terrible slump in the value of mortgages as to wipe out the entire investment and make those paupers who, the day before, had beguiled themselves into a blissful belief that they were rich, when all they had was a bundle of stock certificates which proved to be worthless. The panic in Wall street, a few years ago, which even now leaves an aftermath of wrecked fortunes, furnishes so glaring an example to the would-be speculator as to be a lasting lesson to those looking where and how to invest their money.

No Set Rules for Investors.

No fixed set of rules can be laid down for the guidance of investors in mortgages. No piece of property is exactly like any other piece—each case must stand or fall on its own merits. As a general rule, however, it may be said that mortgages on vacant land, land especially utilized for particular purposes, as for schools, churches, storage warehouses, factories, etc., and land improperly improved, are undesirable.

A mortgage loan should be made only on property which has a ready market, or on property which the mortgagee would be willing and financially able to own if he had to buy it in to protect his mortgage in the event of a foreclosure. The cost at foreclosure should be always accurately estimated before the investment is made. The main consideration should in all cases be the net income which the property will produce, for this is the safest basis for determining value.

Exempt from taxation (if brought within the provisions of the recording tax law), free from the trials and tribulations of the owner of property and the risks and hazards of the owner of stocks or of a business, the holder of a first mortgage on real estate in the city of New York, selected with foresight and care, with absolute security,

LAST WORD IN STORE PLANNING

Many New Ideas Will Be Found in the Lord & Taylor Building.

In a number of particulars the new Lord & Taylor Building on Fifth avenue, at the northwest corner of 38th street, will represent an advance in big store architecture over anything heretofore designed in New York. The building will be owned by Burton Brothers, now in the wholesale drygoods trade, and will be leased to Lord & Taylor, in which the Burtons are also large owners. Their architects are Goldwin Starrett & Van Vleck. The senior member of the architectural firm is a brother of Paul Starrett, head of the George A. Fuller Company, and also of Theodore Starrett.

One of the first new conveniences that the patrons of the store will notice will be an entrance for automobiles, from which passengers will alight directly into the building. There will be an entrance for delivery wagons directly into the basement, where seventy-two wagons may be loaded at a time instead of blocking traffic in the street.

Show windows will be built on the second floor as well as the first, but the window dressing will be done in the basement, so that the windows never will be covered. When the new window is dressed it will be raised by elevators in place of the old. Twenty passenger and four freight elevators have been provided, while the pneumatic tube system exchange will be operated on one of the upper floors instead of in the basement, the usual practice.

A waiting-room with theatre, railroad and steamship ticket booths, telephone and telegraph facilities, a suite of men's dressing-rooms, with collars, gloves, handkerchiefs and other accessories available, with a barber shop near by; a specially designed children's barber shop; a conservatory, dining rooms and a roof garden, and many women's dressing rooms with maids in attendance, are among the features of the new Lord & Taylor Building.

Fire-escape stairways opening directly into the street on three sides of the building, and another providing exits from the centre of the store, have been specified, and in addition, there will be practically no wooden flooring used throughout the building. Even the tables in the workroom will be of steel. The building will have its own power plant, with auxiliary engines, dynamos and boilers in case of a breakdown.

On the seventh floor will be a large cold storage plant for furs, and on the tenth three dining rooms.

The building will cost, it is estimated, about $2,000,000. The general contract has not yet been awarded. A frontage of 148.1 feet is shown for the Fifth avenue side, 260 feet in Thirty-eight street and 150 feet in Thirty-ninth street.

NEW TAX LEGISLATION.

Taxes Made a First Lien—A Concession to Unfinished Buildings.

Mr. Griffin's and Mr. Kerrigan's bill to amend the Greater New York Charter in relation to duties and powers of the Department of Taxes and Assessments, was evidently prepared by the Department of Taxes and Assessments. It has two principal points:

1. It reverses the rule laid down by the Appellate Division in Jackson vs. Smith and provides that with regard to taxes laid in the future, such taxes shall be a lien prior to any encumbrance, restriction, covenant, lease, easement or other division of estate. As to this provision, it has been agreed by the representatives of the city that after the word "easement" there shall be inserted an exception of party walls and beam rights, so that foreclosure of a tax lien will not cut off those necessary easements where they exist.

The second important provision is the insertion of a new Section "889 A," providing that buildings in course of construction commenced since the preceding first day of October and not ready for occupancy, shall not be assessed. This will lighten carrying charges on structures during the unproductive period of construction and save the Department of Taxes and Assessments from the attempt to value uncompleted structures. The Law Committee of the Allied Real Estate Interests has reported that if the exception above mentioned is inserted in the bill, it is recommended that the bill be approved.

Waterfront Plans.

Mr. McClelland's and Mr. Caughlin's bill, to amend the charter in relation to plans for waterfront, amends Section 819 by permitting the Commissioner of Docks, with the approval of the Commissioner of the Sinking Fund, to alter all plans for the improvement of the waterfront, notwithstanding that such plans may have been wholly or partially physically perfected and improvements made in conformity therewith, including the elimination and closing of marginal wharves and streets, even though they have been physically constructed. This would seem to be a radical measure, and the Law Committee of the Allied Interests states that it may do considerable injury to property owners without an opportunity for compensation.

The same committee has reported to the Allied Interests as follows on other bills:

Mr. Benninger's and Mr. Patten's bill seeks to amend the Real Property Law (Section 450) so that in the City of New York, cemeteries shall not be exempt from assessments for street openings and street improvements. The operation of this bill would be to make cemeteries bear a proportion of the cost of street improvements of which they get the benefit. The bill should be favored.

Mr. Kelly's bill adding to the institutions entitled to exemption from the payment of water rates, churches and religious bodies owning or maintaining a church house or building devoted exclusively to social and settlement work. This association is of record as being against all exemptions and this bill extending exemptions should be opposed.

Mr. Schaap's bill reproducing the Sullivan-Brooks bill of former years, increasing the rate of taxation on improvements and decreasing the rate on land. This bill is subject to all the objections that have heretofore been urged against this legislation and to the additional objection that it contains a referendum clause which probably would make the bill unconstitutional.

Mr. Kennedy's bill to amend the charter so that inspection of tenement houses shall be compulsory upon the department instead of being discretionary as it is now. Unless the element of cost makes this prohibitive, it would seem to be a wise provision.

Mr. Carswell's bill to amend Section 311 of the Real Property Law in relation to certification of deeds executed without the State of New York. This bill is improperly drawn. It seeks to amend the law in relation to matters which have already been taken care of by amendment and omits amendments which have heretofore been made. It should be opposed in its present form.

Mr. Heffernan's and Mr. McKeon's bill to amend the charter so that during the first year that taxes are a lien, if interest be charged thereon, it be at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum and thereafter at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. The bill will weigh most heavily against the taxpayer who has not the money with which to pay his taxes promptly. It raises the rate from 7 to 10 per cent. against the needy taxpayer, but the one who can pay within the first year gets a reduction of interest. This bill should be opposed.

Mr. Hammer's bill authorizing the Board of Assessors to hear claims for damage by reason of change of grade of streets running underneath or intersecting the Grand Boulevard and Concourse in the Bronx. This is a type of special legislation which has heretofore been consistently opposed. This bill should be opposed, says the committee.

A GROUP OF BIG HOUSES.

To Be Erected on Washington Square South, Covering a Block Front.

The long felt need of apartments in the location of Washington Square for business people of that vicinity, is now to be realized by the erection of a group of twelve-story and seven-story apartment houses on Washington Square South, and extending the entire block front on the East Side of Thompson street. The larger building will have entrance from Washington Square South, with its apartments looking on the Park, so situated that one can have a vista across the park through or over the Washington Arch, up Fifth avenue.

The twelve-story building will have apartments ranging from seven rooms down to three rooms, and is so planned that larger apartments can be obtained if so desired. Each apartment will have a foyer hall entrance. Three elevators placed centrally in the building, give ample service to various floors.

The arrangement of elevators necessitates a loggia as an entrance and a large foyer hall on the first or entrance floor. The laundry, janitor apartments and additional servants' rooms are placed on the roof, separate from the large roof garden overlooking the Square. The basement will have a large restaurant convenient to the tenants of the building, also with a separate outside entrance on the Square.

The seven-story building will have an entrance from Thompson street. This building will be arranged to have three, four and five-room apartments, and shops on the ground floor. This building will be connected with the twelve-

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Company.

The help in a building has a great deal to do with the renting quality of the building—more so, perhaps, than is generally supposed. The attitude of employees toward their work creates an atmosphere that, however intangible it may be, is felt, pleasantly or unpleasanty, by visitors as well as tenants. If you meet in the elevator entrance an employee who seems to like his job and to be proud of it, and who answers your inquiry courteously, you get an impression which predisposes you to think well of the entire service of the building. A building which is visited daily by many people is not altogether an impersonal thing. It has individuality and character. The sentiments it elicits are seldom neutral. You think of the building as distinctive or commonplace, efficient or inefficient, friendly or unfriendly, penurious or generous. The building is unconsciously personified and the attributes of this abstract person are for the most part a reflection of the qualities of the employees. The building thus acquires a reputation which invariably reacts on its ability to attract tenants.

Now, the fundamental requisite for establishing the right sort of a reputation for a building is that the tenants and their visitors shall be contented. They will not be contented unless the service in the building is good, and good service cannot be expected of discontented employees. It is not enough for the building manager to exercise care in hiring help; he must see that the help does its work in a cheerful and willing spirit. Tenants quickly perceive the feeling which employees entertain toward the manager and, consequently, toward the tasks they are set to perform; and this feeling is bound to influence the tenant in his own relation to the management. Contentment on the part of employees is a matter of general treatment rather than of high wages. It cannot be secured without a fairly good knowledge of human nature. But if a manager has enough of this knowledge to get along with tenants, he certainly ought to be able to command the good will of his subordinates, provided he realizes the importance of having it. The trouble frequently is that the manager acts on the settled conviction that employees will not do their best except under the stimulus of fear. As a matter of fact, an employee who responds only to rough treatment is not worth having around. Such treatment destroys initiative, and the manager who is obliged to direct every trivial operation in a buildings will have no time for more productive work. The manager who enjoys the confidence and friendship of his subordinates will find his tenants disposed to believe that he means to do the right thing by them, too.

Of course, it is not necessary to relax one's vigilance in supervision to obtain the good will of subordinates. Indeed, employees must be made to feel that the manager understands their work and that he is accurately informed by personal inspection how the work is performed. He does not need to pose as an expert in the engine room, for example; but he should be a frequent visitor there. If he asks questions of the engineer with a view to learning the various operations of the heating, lighting and power plant, the engineer will soon be on his mettle to suggest economies and improvements. The manager should know enough about the technique of the work of employees to impress them with the idea that he understands whether or not they are performing the duties in a competent manner.

STOPPING GUESS-WORK IN COAL BUYING

How a Building Manager Can Cut Down His Coal Bills—The Importance of Systematic Tests Explained By an Expert.

By G. B. GOULD
Secretary Fuel Engineering Company of New York.

THE increasing interest in scientific coal buying during the past few years has been accompanied by a remarkable confusion of B. T. U. contracts, boiler tests, and suitability of coal to a given plant, until the plant manager who previously thought he knew something about coal (blissful in his ignorance), now finds himself in about the mental condition of a real estate owner who has just listened to a single tax lecture. This confusion of allied, not conflicting ideas, is partly due to the assumption of authority by numerous amateurs and partly to the deliberate attempt of some coal dealers to "side-step" the inevitable arrival of coal buying on a quality basis.

A boiler test is intended to determine the efficiency of the mechanical apparatus, and the results must be based on the heating quality of the coal used. When a boiler test is run without knowledge of the heat produced by the coal, and poor results are obtained, what is there to indicate whether these results are due to poor coal or low boiler and furnace efficiency? There are two quite separate factors, and both are unknown.

The heat producing quality of the coal used can only be determined by analysis, and when known permits the engineer to arrive at a reliable figure for the efficiency of the equipment. The boiler test is also of value in determining the kind of coal best suited to a given plant, where bituminous or semi-bituminous coals can be used. When the plant is practically limited to anthracite coal, as in office buildings in the heart of a great city, this use of the boiler test is absent.

To buy his coal intelligently and economically the building manager first should find the most economical size of anthracite to burn; that is, the smallest size which he can use with his equipment, and keep up his steam. Some of the factors which determine this are draft, size of grate area, amount of heating surface, and kind of grates. There is a very considerable difference in the price per ton for the smaller sizes of anthracite, although these smaller sizes average about the same in actual heat value. A very large number of office buildings, apartment houses and hotels in New York are burning larger sizes than are necessary.

Checking Up the Power Produced.

With the kind of coal settled upon, the buyer then must consider the quality of the coal actually delivered. Isn't the quality of coal many times more important than the quality of soap? And yet, I dare say, there are many building managers who have given more time to the consideration of the quality of soap they buy, although their power cost is from 40 to 60 per cent. of the total operating expense. Why is this so? Because the losses in coal buying and burning are elusive and intangible without accurate data.

The majority of power plants in office buildings have no means of checking up the amount of power produced from month to month, or year to year. With such a state of affairs, when the coal bill increases, how can you tell whether the cause is greater power requirements, poorer quality of coal, lower efficiency of the plant or wasteful firing methods?

The writer knows of one case where a large building adopted systematic tests of the coal delivered and by acting on the definite data obtained, succeeded in getting coal fully 10 per cent. better than the year before. At the end of the year the coal bill was higher. The manager at once said: "What is the use of testing my coal? The tests show that the coal has been 10 per cent. better, and yet the bill continues to increase."

Investigation showed that this building had installed a large number of electric lights during the year in a space previously unlighted, besides increasing the power requirements along other lines. It had not occurred to this man that these things meant more tons of real coal shoveled down into his bunkers, and that if he had not obtained better coal, his coal bill would have been still higher. The variations in coal quality are directly related to the amount of coal used under given conditions to produce a given amount of power. This fact has been proved an infinite number of times in plants where accurate power records are kept. The size of the coal bill is no index of fuel economy unless the amount of power used is known. If the quality of your coal is improved, and the coal bill keeps on rising, don't say that the coal tests are no use, but look for the reason in the plant.

Variations in Coal Quality.

Few plant managers realize the great variations in coal quality, even in coal shipped from the same mine. Anthracite coal is really a manufactured product.

The raw material is the mixture of rock, slate and coal brought from the mine, and from this is picked the rock and slate with varying degrees of care. A certain amount of incombustible material cannot be removed by any process, but down to this point the quality of the delivered coal is dependent on the care used in preparing it for market. Anthracite coal delivered every month in New York City varies from about 10 per cent. ash to 25 per cent., and sometimes reaches 30 per cent. and higher. This means a great variation in value which the buyer, without any systematic check on the quality of the coal delivered, has to stand for. Hasn't the buyer of coal the same right to demand careful preparation of the coal sold to him that he has in the case of leather or steel? Hasn't he the right to protect his own interests against careless preparation at the mines?

Furthermore, the dealer who consistently prepares his coal with care should be able to get a higher price for his coal than the man who occasionally or regularly ships poorly prepared coal to market. A properly drawn B. T. U. contract provides for payments adjusted in direct proportion to the variations in heat value of the coal delivered (determined by analysis), above or below an agreed upon standard. The B. T. U. contract was not devised as a means of "beating the coal man," but simply to safeguard the buyer who has no control over the preparation of the coal, and to furnish an incentive to the dealer to deliver as good coal as possible. A buyer who pays premiums for coal above standard on such a contract is better off than if he had to exact penalties, because as the quality becomes poorer there is a loss in boiler and furnace efficiency. In other words, as the percentage of ash increases, a smaller proportion of the heat producing elements can be utilized.

Coal Analysis.

Coal, of all products, requires such a method of adjusting the price paid in accordance with a definite standard. Coal cannot be tried in small quantites with any assurance that future deliveries will be the same. A lot of coal 20 per cent. poorer than the sample lot would not be detected by the eye. It would only be discovered after the coal is burned up, if at all. What definite claim has the buyer against the seller? He has nothing that he can put his finger on, and if he changes dealers, what is to prevent the same thing happening again?

This matter of testing merits some consideration here. There are hundreds of chemists who will claim, and most of them sincerely, that they know all about coal analyses. It does look simple, on the face of it, if one reads the directions in a chemical text-book for making coal analyses, but nine hundred and ninety-nine chemists out of every thousand have not made enough coal tests to even know whether their results are right or not, for coal analysis is a tricky proposition at best, unless handled by specialists of wide experience, and then only when every safeguard is thrown about their work. To quote a prominent engineer with very wide experience with combustion problems:

"We still have a lot to learn about coal analysis, and there are probably not to exceed a dozen laboratories in the United States at the present time that can be relied upon to report the B. T. U. of a coal with reasonable accuracy. Coal analysis is entirely outside the province of the amateur. The B. T. U. contract received a bad send-off in the start because, among other things, there were too many amateurs making coal analyses."

NEW THINGS

A Binder for Reinforcement.

Clifford L. Miller & Co., of 110 East 23d street, are introducing into the market what is called the Curry Tyer for binding reinforcement, rods and mesh in concrete building construction. The device is a simple one, consisting of a cylindrical tool with a spiral worm-gear piston, at the end of which are two lugs engaging loops in special designed tying wires. The lugs engaging the loops revolve when the cylinder is pulled, thus incidentally binding it over to make it fast whether it is to be reinforcing bar, a bag, lumber packages, or anything requiring firm binding. The accompanying illustrations give a clear idea of the device in operation. It is claimed for this implement that it saves a great deal of time and labor and makes an absolutely secure and uniform tie.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Frost on Fresh Paint.

Does freezing weather or heavy frosts have a harmful effect on freshly coated steel girders on which red lead and oil paint have been used?

Answer.—We should say that any linseed oil paint, when the temperature is at freezing point or below that, is apt to dry very slowly unless more drier than usual is added besides some volatile thinner, such as turpentine or benzine, in order to make it flow evenly and freely. Even then it is liable to creep or crawl, due to the partial congealing of the oil from the cold atmosphere. It is evident that when the paint creeps or crawls the surface is not covered uniformly and therefore that paint does not give the protection it otherwise would.

On the other hand, if sufficient drier and volatile thinners are added to an oil plant to prevent crawling in cold weather the life of the paint will suffer to some extent. This applies to paint in general, especially on metal surfaces, where there is no pentration as is the case with wood. As to your special case of coating steel girders with red lead, it depends a great deal upon the condition of the metal at the time of applying the coating, and also whether the red lead is pure and mixed with raw linseed oil shortly before application, so that there was no oxidizing action. If the metal is dry when the red lead is applied and the material mixed as stated above, the heavy frosts at night will not seriously affect the lasting and protective quality of the coating, but as a matter of course will considerably delay its drying. Red lead, because of its heavy specific gravity, will, when pure, lie close to the metal, thus keeping out moisture and air.

Can you advise me how to calculate the weight of a fly wheel?

Answer.—First find the cubical contents of the metal of which the wheel is composed. If this is cast iron, multiply the total by 356 pounds, which represents the weight of one cubic foot of cast iron, and divide the result by 2,240 to arrive at the number of long tons contained in the wheel.

Testing Electric Meters.

I am desirous of ascertaining how to test electric service meters supplying different tenants from an isloated plant in an office building.

Answer.—A simple method, and one frequently employed, is to connect another meter which is correct in the same circuit with the one to be tested.

Kalsomine.

Will you please answer the following questions? Are kalsomines supposed to be used on exterior works such as cellars, air lofts, and outside concrete work? Are cold water kalsomines identical with cold water paints? What alkaline or other injurious substance affecting ceiling varnish are found in cold water kalsomines?

Answer.—The term kalsomine or calcimine is used for a glue, whiting and water paint that is applied cold, similar to, but less expensive, than distemper. Whiting, being carbonate of lime, and calcium being the chemical term for lime, has furnished the name for the material. Kalsomine, as prepared by the painter, is for interior work only and will not stand exterior exposure. The cold water paints are made up on a different formula, the binder being casein in place of glue, and usually a certain percentage of oil is added to insure additional wear. They also contain more or less white pigment, such as zinc oxide or lithopone in addition to calcium carbonate or calcium sulphate. If kalsomine is made up as it should be, from the whiting known as English Cliffstone Paris white (which is pure chalk) and good sheet glue, there can be nothing in its composition that would injure or affect ceiling varnish, although enough alkali might be present to affect Chinese or Prussian blue. In such case a select grade of bolted English china clay is substituted for the whiting.

The bill to reduce the tax on buildings is up in Albany again this year under a new alias. It is promising just as many benefits as ever, but real estate men are mighty wary and incredulous on all subjects relative to taxes.

The Long Island Taxpayers' Association is making up a list of owners of lots in suburban tracts on Long Island. The association invites development companies to communicate with its Secretary at 877 Brook avenue, New York City.

The report of the Citizens' Committee, presented to the Legislative Committee this week by Allan Robinson and Eugene H. Outerbridge, offers a carefully studied plan of reorganization for the Police Department and suggests a radical change of public policy with respect to the vices that are the chief sources of graft in the department. Whether or not one agrees with the report in its entirety, there can be no question but that it is a valuable piece of constructive work; and it is a pleasure to note that the president of a real estate organization has had a share in it.

Some ten or twelve bills have been introduced at Albany to restrict or control the activities of the New York Stock Exchange. Several of these measures would, if enacted, seriously curtail the business of the exchange and of "Wall Street" generally, and would thus react on the demand for office space downtown. This is practically true of the bill which proposes to double the stock transfer tax. We are not informed as to what evil the double tax is expected to remedy, and we can't figure it out by ourselves; but any stock exchange broker in Chicago, Philadelphia or Boston will no doubt see without much trouble how the measure might send business his way.

Real Estate in the Financial District.

Property owners in the Financial District are threatened with legislation on the part of the State which will adversely affect their interests. It is proposed to double the transfer tax on stock certificates, and if such action is taken it will undoubtedly have a serious effect on the amount of business transacted in and about Wall Street. The Record and Guide does not mean that the Stock Exchange will move, or that the bulk of its business will be transferred to other cities, but a certain proportion of the present business of New York is certain to be lost. The securities of many local companies are bought and sold in Wall Street, because it has afforded the best market, but a very small increase in the expense and difficulty of conducting these transactions in New York would be sufficient to shift the market for such securities to other cities. The various bills which are now being offered at Albany to increase the taxation on the transfer of securities and to regulate the operations of the Stock Exchange will inevitably have the result of diminishing the amount of business hitherto transacted and of diverting some of the remainder to other cities, and the effect of these changes upon real estate interests in the financial district is bound to be very injurious.

The Record and Guide has no opinion to offer on the bills, introduced by Governor Sulzer, for the purpose of getting rid of the abuses which have been permitted in the methods of transacting business in Wall Street. That serious abuses have existed every one is aware. Wall Street was warned during the administration of Mr. Hughes that some reforms would eventually have to be made, but the members of the Stock Exchange neglected to put their house in order. They can not complain consequently with any good grace in case the State steps in and compels them to do away with evils the existence of which has been notorious. Unfortunately, however, this legislation has been introduced at a time when its effect will be to injure many innocent people, and if it is accompanied by an increase of taxation the injury will be all the more serious. Of late years a number of causes have co-operated to diminish the demand for space in the office buildings of the financial district. Speculation on the Stock Exchange has been at a low ebb. The process of business consolidation, which tended to make the larger corporations transact an increased proportion of their business in New York, has been checked. The smaller demand for office space has not, for accidental reasons, prevented the erection of new office buildings.

A number of large corporations had prepared plans for new edifices which their directors had reason for carrying out independently of any expectation of a profitable investment. A fire compelled the Equitable Assurance Society to put some improvement on the Broadway property commensurate with its enormous value. The increase in taxation made the holding of underimproved parcels downtown unexpectedly expensive. For all these reasons it looked as if the owner of real estate in the financial district was in any event bound to have a number of bad years. But now the State comes along and threatens to make the matter very much worse by an increase in the existing tax on Stock Exchange transactions. Quite apart from the general expediency or inexpediency of the tax, it is utterly unwise to increase it at the present time. The effects of the increase will be extremely injurious to many people who have nothing to do with the Stock Exchange and will diminish the prosperity of New York. It will mean a decrease of taxable values in the financial district and a consequently increased burden of taxation elsewhere throughout the city. Property owners in all sections should join with those of the financial district in vigorously protesting against the increased tax.

The proposed change in the rate of taxation on the transfer of securities is part of a plan, fathered by Governor Sulzer, for doing away with the taxation of real estate by the State. The property owners of New York would reap some small benefit from the abandonment of the general real estate tax, but the benefit would be small compared to the loss from which they will indirectly suffer because of any further discouragement of business in Wall Street. Finance is the most important single industry carried on in New York City. Upon it depend not merely the value of property in the lower part of Manhattan, but also the value of much real estate in the retail and amusement districts and the value of still more residential property in all the outlying boroughs. By imposing these heavy burdens upon a local industry the State is doing to New York a grave injury. It is converting a purely local business into a source of income for the whole State irrespective of the harm done to local interests. The tax on stock transfers might be defensible in case the fruits of the tax went into the city treasury, but in this instance the State is injuring a local industry and appropriating for itself any benefit which may result from the injury.

It is very much to be hoped that this wholly unjustified proposal will meet with vigorous and tenacious opposition. It is an attack on the prosperity of New York City which will affect not merely the owners of securities, not merely bankers and brokers, not merely the proprietors of real estate in the financial district, not merely even the owners of real estate in other parts of the city, but retailers and wage-earners of all classes and in all sections. The great body of office employees and clerks will be particularly hard hit by any further diminution of the business which will be permanently transacted in Wall Street, and they should realize fully how much they have at stake.

The Fate of Fifth Avenue.

Whatever cause for grumbling property owners may have in the rest of the city, those who are fortunate or far-seeing enough to own real estate on Fifth avenue have no ground for complaint. That part of the avenue, on which business development is still possible continues to be the one locality in Manhattan where expensive real estate can easily be sold for cash. The inroads which business is making on the blocks between 50th and 59th streets is remarkable. These blocks differed from those farther south because the property was, as a rule, owned in larger parcels by very rich men, who had spent unusually large sums of money in erecting and decorating their dwellings. It looked as if property owners of this kind would put up a much more stubborn fight against the inroads of business than was possible farther south, and, of course, in a great many cases no offer to buy would now be entertained.

The extraordinary thing is, however, that so many of them have been willing to sell or to lease. During the past year five or six of the most important corners have been definitely diverted to business uses and the blocks in question have already obtained as much of a business as a residential aspect. There can be no doubt that within a comparatively short time almost all the smaller and less expensive dwellings in the neighborhood will yield to business buildings. There will remain a considerable number of very expensive residences, which will continue to be occupied by their owners; but every additional firm which rents space in these blocks for the transaction of any kind of business makes them more valuable for other business enterprises and less desirable as a site for an exclusive private residence.

The prophecy can be made with some degree of confidence that the several block fronts on Fifth avenue now occupied by various members of the Vanderbilt family will eventually be improved with commercial buildings. The frontage opposite the Cathedral may well serve some day as a site for a competitor of Lord & Taylor. In the long run individual preferences cannot make headway against the fact that valuable as these blocks are for residential purposes they are still more valuable for business purposes. They have enough additional value for business purposes to enable the owner of the property to consign his expensive private house to the scrap heap and still to get out with a substantial profit to his credit over the original cost of his land and building, and he is the more likely to adopt this alternative because the increased taxes on his house makes the expense of maintaining it as a residence much heavier than it formerly was. Thus, once the land becomes much more valuable for business than for any other employment the stars in the courses fight against the man who attempts to stem the tide. Of course a rich man who can afford to pay the bills may refuse to recognize the facts —as in the case of the old Schermerhorn mansion, which stood so long in 23d street—but such men are rare.

THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE.

The real estate market this week comprised many transactions of more than ordinary interest. It began with the sale of a large plot in Thompson street, from Washington Square to 3d street, which will be improved with an immense tenement house; while the dealings in the Fifth avenue neighborhood, in the upper and lower West Side and in Harlem were substantial. There appears to be much activity of a new kind in the section of Park avenue north of 59th street, namely, the purchase and assembling of plots for reimprovement with apartment houses. The Mordecai purchase is the most recent instance. Five years ago, when fine new private dwellings were being built in Park avenue, it looked as if even cheap tenement houses would be torn down to make way for the ingress of the wealthy into the avenue; but, the movement seems to have subsided and to have been superseded by a movement to build fine apartment houses there. It seems as if enough private dwellings had been built in upper Park avenue to insure its further advance as a private dwelling street, while on the other hand it looks as if fine apartment houses will share in shaping the character of the thoroughfare. This circumstance can be accounted for probably by the fact that private dwelling construction on Manhattan Island is comparatively infrequent now and the tendency is for it to become less frequent. It will be recalled that when Oakleigh Thorne built his fine home in Park avenue, a few years ago, he restricted his adjoining lots to private dwellings. There are few if any restrictions being made nowadays.

A notable foreclosure of the week was that of the 19-story loft building at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 12th street, the proceeding having been brought by Thomas F. Ryan, who held the second mortgage of $500,000 on the property. It was bid in for Mr. Ryan at $450,000. The Equitable Life Assurance Society holds the first mortgage amounting to $1,250,000. The total cost of the building, with accrued interest, was $1,714,583. Henry Corn, who had owned the building, held it at $2,000,000. The site was bought from Mr. Ryan in March, 1911. It is 131.3x 150 feet in size.

There were some good sales in Brooklyn during the week, especially of private dwellings in the suburbs. Brooklyn brokers are awaiting the final decision in the subway matter when they expect the demand for property in that borough to improve materially. On Long Island, beyond Brooklyn, there appears to be a good demand for real estate which is taken as an indication of early spring activity.

Of great interest to real estate developers everywhere is the lease made of the large floor space above the waiting room of the Grand Central Station, where the real estate men of Westchester county purpose to maintain a permanent exhibit of the residential advantages of that part of the state. The New York Central and the New Haven roads will co-operate with the real estate men in making known the advantages of the territory that they serve.

Home Improvements and Taxation.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Please inform me whether I will incur any penalty in the way of increased assessment or method of assessment of taxation on my private residence in Brooklyn, if I remove the terrace. I am under the impression that I once saw a statement that a two-story and basement house with cellar was treated differently from a three-story house with cellar. The floor of my basement is practically level with the sidewalk, there being a foot rise to the front yard at both the end house and the street end of same.

I have thought that I would like to eliminate this slight terrace, but hesitate to do so if by so doing my taxes will be increased.

Answer.—It is impossible to answer this question "yes" or "no." If you spend $1,000 in making your house more attractive and thereby more salable for a higher figure, it is highly probable that the Department will certainly increase your assessment. The amount of the increase, of course, should not exceed the money expended on the improvement.

Allied Real Estate Banquet.

The banquet of the Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York, which was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel last evening, was well attended by the representative real estate men of the greater city and state, many of whom were eager to hear Governor Sulzer discuss efficiency of state administration, particularly as regards taxation throughout the state. The Governor met the expectations of his hearers. The new Public Service Commissioner for this district, Edward A. McCall, was equally as interesting to the real estate men in his discussion of subways as was the Governor. Don P. Seitz, business manager of The New York World, also addressed the gathering. More than 600 persons attended the function. Allan Robinson, president of the Allied Real Estate Interests, presided. The organization was highly honored in the fact that the invitation it extended to the Governor to be a guest was the first dinner invitation he has accepted since he took office. The Governor said that he could not resist the temptation to meet the real estate men of New York and discuss state expenses with them.

AGENTS TO ALBANY.

To Protest Against the Stock Transfer Bill As Inimical to Real Estate.

A committee of real estate agents, appointed at a conference held at the office of Bryan L. Kennelly on Monday, went to Albany on Wednesday to attend a hearing given by a joint committee of the two houses, on the Stock Transfer Tax bill. The committee comprised Messrs. C. A. DeBost, E. A. Cruikshank, Robert E. Dowling, W. B. Gaillard, Robert E. Grannis, C. Cone, John N. Golding and George T. Mortimer.

After listening to a representative of the Stock Exchange, the hearing was adjourned until March 12, without the real estate men being heard. But while at the State capital they did effective work in other ways. Mr. Kennelly, the president of the agent's committee, is confident that their cause has been won, and that the bill will not be enacted. He thinks it unnecessary now to call a meeting of the Realty Forum at the Real Estate Exchange, as some are in favor of. No action has been taken by the Real Estate Board of Brokers.

The position the agents take on the question is cogently set forth in resolutions adopted at Monday's conference.

"The firms, individuals and corporations engaged in this city in the buying and selling of stocks pay in the aggregate a very substantial percentage of the income derived from office buildings, apartments and private houses, and comprise, moreover, a considerable part of the clientage of hotels, shops, restaurants and theatres.

"It is clear to us that if this additional taxation on the purchase and sale of stocks be enacted into law it will force many such firms and individuals either to withdraw from business or largely to reduce space occupied and rentals paid by them, with the result of greatly reducing the income, value and assessed valuation of real property."

Riverside Park Extensions.

The filling-in of the river-shore of Riverside Park between 96th and 129th streets, is progressing rapidly. The Bloomingdale Boat Club house is now entirely surrounded by land instead of water, as formerly. The material comes principally from the subway diggings. On the outer edge of the fill a bulkhead wall will be built, from which line the ground will be sloped back over the railroad tracks to the present park grounds. The city and railroad company will unite to bridge over completely the railroad tracks so that the six tracks which the railroad company will then have along the parkside will be in a tunnel, which will be sodded and planted over like the rest of the park. The president of the Board of Aldermen, who is a member of the Committee of the Board of Estimate in charge of the negotiations, says that it has been agreed between the parties to do this.

Awhile ago it was feared that the railroad company would get all the newmade land, together with wharves on the waterside, but Mr. Mitchel now states that the railroad tracks will be limited to six in number. As the railroad will be electrified, there will be no smoke and little noise for the residents on the hill.

The next few years will see great improvements along the park side. For one thing, the public is to come into its own—into the use and enjoyment of the park lands along the water's edge from which everyone is now debarred, except at Fort Washington Point. A change of route and the tunnelling of Fort Washington Park by the railroad company, together with the tunnelling of Inwood hill, will restore thousands of feet of water frontage to public use, or for improvement as park lands. No doubt there will be fine landing-places for motor boats, plenty of room for fishing and reservations for bathing pavilions, and a great stadium for athletic sports, besides the Fulton Watergate and other attractions and beauty spots. Then will Riverside Park be "true to name."

President Mitchel predicts that there will be no elevated marginal railroad structure for the New York Central tracks south of 59th street, but just what method of getting the railroad tracks down to Cortlandt street will be adopted he will not reveal.

WASHINGTON SQUARE APARTMENT HOUSES.

story building through the basements only.

The exterior of this group is designed in the Italian Renaissance style of architecture, with the first three stories in rusticated and ornamental stone. Above this the shaft or middle portion is of tapestry brick with a capping of ornamental terra cotta, composed of the three upper floors. This in turn is capped by a large overhanging cornice. Balconies have been arranged on the facade for additional enrichment as well as being useful for a building in this locality.

The site, as reported a week ago, was purchased from the Italian Benevolent Institution by the Elena Realty Corporation, Dominick Abbatte, President, and associated with him are Pancrazio Grassi, Celestino Piva, John LaSpana, Michael A. Refrano and Vincent DeLuca. The Italian Institution acquired this parcel in 1907, for the erection of a new Home, but this project was abandoned. The proceeds of the sale of this plot the Institution will apply to the erection and operation of an Italian Hospital in the block front facing the East River between 83d street and 84th street.

The architects are Ogden, Pryor & Day, 1170 Broadway. Both buildings are planned to be as fireproof as it is possible to make them.

AUTOMATIC SPRINKLERS.

gating Commission, then testified in behalf of Mr. Kaye, and former Fire Chief Croker and other experts on fire prevention will give evidence against the efficiency of automatic sprinklers as a protection to life against fire perils, when the trial is resumed on March 7. They will be followed on the witness-stand by Chief Kenlon, Deputy Chief Guerin of the Bureau of Fire Prevention, and other recognized authorities who have full faith in the advantages of sprinklers, as "means for preventing and extinguishing fires," and as the best safeguards against a repetition of the Triangle disaster.

This is the first square line-up in the local courts of experts on the subject of automatic sprinklers, and the outcome of the contest will be awaited with much interest by thousands of persons who are directly concerned with all that pertains to fire perils in factories, including, of course, the owners and tenants of loft property throughout the city.

—Property owners in Amity street, Flushing, have asked the Public Service Commission for the First District to give a hearing on the proposed extension of the Corona rapid transit line from Corona through Flushing to Bay Side. The route for this extension was adopted by the commission a short time ago and sent to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for its approval. The Amity street property owners object to the building of an elevated railroad through that thoroughfare, desiring an underground road.

—Senator Stillwell, who introduced the Bronx County bill in the Legislature, will make his first public address since the bill was declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals, on that question, Sunday evening, March 2, at 8 p. m., at the Bronx House, 1637 Washington avenue.

—Real estate interests are assured of speedy relief from the uncertainty of the Subway situation, by the announcement of Borough President McAneny, before the Board of Estimate, on Thursday, that the Public Service Commission will dispose of the entire matter within the next few days.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

Spring Quotations on Basic Commodities Show Generally Higher Levels With Mill Stocks Extremely Low.

Sand and Gravel Sharply Advance—Crude Oil Stiffens—Structural Steel Without Change—Common Brick Slightly Higher—Hardwoods and Michigan Maple Stiffer

SPRING quotations for sand and gravel are being made at an advance of five cents for the former and ten cents for the latter. Michigan maple and hardwoods in general are being quoted from five to seven dollars a thousand above the range prevailing a year ago, because lack of snow has checked logging operations; Southern pine, in heavier demand than at any time in recent years, is exceedingly scarce, so much so that current inquiry is far in excess of mill capacity; structural steel is holding firm at the new high levels; nails are up and Hudson River common brick in this market is touching $7.50 a thousand, wholesale, with average run of barge going out at $7.37½ with Raritans up a shilling and selling at $7.12½.

Most of these changes represent developments of the last ten days and they are significant in their lack of relation to the nervousness of the securities markets, and the higher rates being asked for money. As far as actual orders are concerned, every department of the building material market is showing exceptional strength on inquiry and heavy specifications rule.

The most pronounced stiffness is shown in crude oils and Portland cement. The new high prices ruling on crude oil are being well sustained and it now begins to look to persons well versed in the trade that it will go considerably above the $2.50 level before the middle of March. Portland cement, still quoted here at $1.58, with a rebate of ten cents for each bag, making the mill price approximately ninety cents, is strengthening on inquiry, although distributors will not fully realize on the recent advance until sometime in April. In the meanwhile weather conditions have been such as not seriously to interfere with interior or exterior construction work, and dealers' supplies are running low. When the building season gets fairly under way quotations are almost sure to move up.

The common brick market is peculiar. Here and there a fine covered cargo of North Rivers will go out at $7.50, but in spite of the absolute lack of demand for open market brick, the price has moved up a shilling, or from $7.25 to $7.37½, while the minimum range instead of moving up in proportion to the maximum, is weak with some shading among manufacturers who want their boats emptied. This has created a nervousness among buyers that is not wholesome, especially since navigation is closed, stacks are getting low and the available supply both here and up the river is not any too heavy to meet spring building requirements.

Distributors are advising prospective users of building materials to make their inquiries early. The low mill stocks and an exceptionally heavy Western demand at present for such commodities as structural steel, tin plate, nails, lumber, including shingle and lath, metal lath and reinforcing material, terra cotta, front brick and paints, not to mention the heavy demand that is expected to develop in the eastern market as soon as the new building season strikes its pace, make it imperative that those who would take advantage of existing conditions get into the market on present levels wherever this can be done.

Some departments, notably cement, are not taking business on schedules above thirty days, and it is entirely probable that within another fortnight other interests will be assuming the same firm attitude.

The only weak element in the market at present is stone. Blue stone is quiet and without spine. Granite is in very meagre demand when activity in other building commodities is considered, limestone is weak and interior stone, although firm, is not in heavy inquiry. Prices are low and competition is such as to encourage shading for desirable business.

CRUDE OIL FIRMING.

Some Interests Look for Higher Levels in Near Future.

THE crude petroleum situation is being watched with considerable interest by building managers at present. Although there was no change in prices this week, it is freely prophesied in the trade that crude oil will see a higher level in the very near future, despite the fact that more conservative interests consider that $2.50 is in itself abnominally high. There is a consensus of opinion that if conditions continue as they are at present higher prices are sure to be reached and maintained for a short time anyway.

Within the last year there has been an advance in gasoline of about 75 per cent., the old price having been 11 cents, while the price today is 19 to 20 cents. That this is a final price even for the present no one believes. It does not take account of the reflected effect of the recent advances in the price of crude and the belief is current here that a large further increase in gasoline will be a thing of the near future. Some of the advances in crude oil may not be transferred to the gasoline owing to the peculiar relationship between it and kerosene. Not long ago gasoline was practically a bi-product with kerosene the chief output. Today the relationship and the percentage of production of the two products has been reversed. But much more gasoline is being refined from a given unit of crude than formerly. It pays to resort to processes that will extract, say, 10 per cent. more of the gasoline than it did when the prices were lower and the demand for gasoline was less than now. This makes the advances in the crude product rather difficult to distribute evenly between the two items and the other products turned out by the petroleum refining industry.

NO GOVERNMENT LUMBER PRICES.

Secretary of Agriculture Decides to Discontinue Forest Quarterly Reports.

BECAUSE of the extent to which private agencies are now collecting lumber price data, the Secretary of Agriculture has decided to discontinue publication by the Forest Service of its quarterly issue of mill and wholesale lumber prices.

When the Government began to publish these compilations detailed statistics upon production, consumption, and prices were available for all of the great industries which produce and handle raw materials, lumbering only excepted. Many of these statistics were being gathered by the Federal Government, particularly the monthly crop reports and cotton reports. Prior to 1905 the lumber industry, then fourth and now third largest of the country, lacked even annual statistics of production. In that year a compilation of the lumber started by the Forest Service, with the co-operation of the Bureau of the Census. Authentic records of prices of standard grades in the centers of distribution did not become available until 1908, when the Forest Service began its record of wholesale prices. This record, by leading markets, was published monthly until November, 1910. Since then it has been compiled and published on a quarterly basis.

After a year's publication of market prices there was a general demand for the compilation of prices at the mills, since the market quotations included freight and other costs subsequent to manufacture, and did not show the prices received by manufacturers. In July, 1909, the Forest Service began a quarterly publication of mill prices of lumber, which except for minor changes in species and grades has been continued without change until the present time.

Within the past two years lumber associations and other agencies have taken up actively the work of compiling and publishing lumber prices in most of the lumber-producing regions. Under these circumstances it is considered unnecessary for the Government to continue this work, except to the extent necessary for its own information. Hence the decision to discontinue the quarterly publications of the Forest Service The usual January issue containing the prices for October, November and December is not to be brought out.

The Eastern mill men have passed the inventory season and they report a fair development of new business. Many orders were carried over the holidays and these are heavy enough to keep the factories well occupied. In Astoria and in The Bronx the sash and door interests were particularly active. General lumber in this market is reported to be in good inquiry with prices holding firm.

PORTLAND CEMENT FIRMING.

Manufacturers Not Yet Fully Realizing on the Recent Advances.

IT probably will be May or June before Portland cement manufacturers in this market begin to realize on the recent price advance reported in these columns. The conditions in the Lehigh Valley mill district are such as to indicate beyond much doubt that prices will a full dollar before the building season gets fairly under way. Here in New York the price of $1.58 a barrel is firming as dealers' stcoks become low. This means an allowance of 10 cents on the bag return. This makes the price at the mill between 90 and 95 cents at the moment. Prices quoted on natural cement are now 95 cents. This represents a higher price than has been attained for this community in several years.

LIME LOOKING FOR BIG SEASON.

Market Continues Steady and Firm As New Building Projects Increase.

THERE is a decided improvement in the tenor of the lime market. Most of the prospective business is shaping well and quotations are decidedly firm, although no actual change in price levels has been reported. It is significant, however, that shading has been almost entirely eliminated. The volume of new building operations that is going ahead seems to indicate that lime will soon be in a rising market. State common now brings 75 cents a barrel for 500 barrel lots delivered in New York. Special $1.37. Finishing, 300 pound barrel, $1.40, same, 200 pound barrel, $1.02, same, 350 pound barrel, $1.62. Plaster blocks are 6 cents for 2-in., 6½ cents for 3-in. and 7¼ cents for 4-in. Only the 2-in. block is hollow. Plaster boards ⅝-in. thick are quoted at 16 cents per square yard.

COVERED BRICK ACTIVE.

No Arrivals or No Barges Covered—Present Demand Slightly Improved.

THE market for Hudson River common brick last week developed some strength by reason of the fact that navigation still remained closed, thus keeping new cargoes out of the market and because riding from stack has been rather heavy.

Official transactions for North River common brick during the last week with records covering the coresponding week last year follow.

SAND PRICES ADVANCE.

Gravel Also to Move Up on Cargo Lots in the Spring.

SPRING prices for sand and gravel will be higher. Quotations made for April and May deliveries at the present time are on a 50 cent level, whereas 45 cents has been ruling all winter. Gravel quotations are being made at 85 cents and 90 cents per cubic yard on full cargo lots delivered New York. These are based on 500 cubic yard scow capacity. Subway construction and a very heavy prospective building volume account for the change.

REAL ESTATE NEWS OF THE WEEK

Large Transactions Formed the Feature of the Market this Week.

The real estate market proved its capacity to take care of itself this week. There were numerous good sized transactions in Manhattan real estate, both improved and unimproved; and the Fifth avenue neighborhood is still adding activity to the dealing. Harlem property appears to be in steady demand. The Dyckman tract is not out of the reckoning. The lower West Side also came into prominent notice consequent on the sale of a block front in Thompson street and a parcel in West Washington place. The city generally participated in the weeks dealing.

The Manhattan sales totaled 46, against 47 last week and 37 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 17, against 14 last week and 27 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 29, compared with 33 last week and 10 a year ago.

From the Bronx 17 sales at private contract were reported, against 19 last week and 11 a year ago.

The amount involved in the Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $2,053,250, compared with $584,783 last week, making a total since January 1 of $9,027,553. The figure for the corresponding week last year was $749,598, making the total from Jan. 1, 1912, $7,-848,942.

When a merchant decides to move into larger or better quarters, he begins to figure the "extras" in addition to the rental cost.

A Summary of the Proceedings of the Local Boards, the Board of Estimate, the Supreme Court and Various Commissions and Bureaus Relating to Street and Other City and Borough Improvements.

The news collected here under the general head of Municipal Improvements is intended to be of service to property owners as well as contractors and brokers. It covers every measure looking toward a change in the City Map, toward the acquisition of title to real estate by the city or toward construction work, including the grading of streets, the laying of sewers, the building of schools, etc. Each such measure is acted upon by one or more—generally by several—official bodies before it becomes a valid ordinance. In these columns the successive official acts pertaining to it are noted from the time it is introduced in a Local Board or in the Board of Estimate. Wherever public hearings on it are granted, the fact is also announced.

Municipal improvements may be divided into two classes—those that are paid for out of the general tax levy and those that are paid for wholly or in part by special assessments on the property owners benefited. The latter, which are the more important to real estate owners, originate in the Local Boards. However, every local improvement, except certain street improvements calling for an expenditure of not more than $2,000, must be submitted to the Board of Estimate for authorization.

The news is classified and is printed in this order: Local Board Calendars, Local Board Resolutions, Proceedings of the Board of Estimate, Public Hearings, Assessments Due and Payable.

LOCAL BOARD CALENDARS.

As regards the majority of city improvements, including all that call for special assessments, the Local Boards are in a sense neighborhood legislatures. They have absolute authority over certain street improvements, costing not more than $2,000. With respect to all other local improvements, they exercise full legislative functions, subject to approval by the Board of Estimate. The Board of Estimate seldom vetoes a measure coming from a Local Board. It is before the latter that the property owner should be most watchful to make himself heard concerning proposed improvements. When a Local Board resolution comes before the Board of Estimate, the presumption of expediency is on the side of the measure, as this has been adopted after open consideration by a body supposed to be familiar with local sentiment.

There are twenty-five Local Improvement Districts in the city, each with its Local Board. This is composed of the Borough President and of the Aldermen who represent the Aldermanic districts within the Local Improvement District. The Borough President's secretary acts as secretary of the several boards. Each board has jurisdiction over matters relating to its district. In the case of matters relating to two or more districts, the boards of the districts affected sit in common. The meetings are subject to call by the Borough President.

Such hearings are noted in this news department of the Record and Guide under the general head of Local Board Calendars. Hearings by all other bodies are noted in the present column.

In acquiring title to land for streets, sewers, parks, approaches to bridges, etc., condemnation proceedings are commonly resorted to. A proceeding having been authorized by the Board of Estimate, the Corporation Counsel makes application to the Supreme Court for the appointment of three commissioners. If the cost of the land is to be paid wholly or in part by property owners benefited, the commissioners are known as commissioners of estimate and assessment. They hold their meetings at the Bureau of Street Openings, a clerical and legal organization under the supervision of the Corporation Counsel charged with the management of all legal proceedings which involve awards for damages or assessments for benefit to land.

If the cost of the land is to be paid by the city as a whole, as in the case of school sites, dock property, etc., the commissioners are known as commissioners of estimate and appraisal, whose place of meeting is at 258 Broadway.

In the case of assessments for local improvements of a physical nature which do not have to be confirmed by a court of record, the assessments come before three permanent commissioners appointed by the Mayor. They constitute the Board of Assessors, which has to do with assessments for such improvements as the regulating and grading of streets, the laying of sewers, etc.

By the Board of Estimate.

At a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, to be held in the City Hall, Manhattan, on March 6, at 10.30 a. m., the following matters, among other matters, will be considered:

Telephones Unprofitable in Apartment Houses.

The Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association opened a campaign this week for cheaper telephone service. At a meeting of the committee appointed to investigate switchboard charges it was asserted that the apartment house owner is a heavy loser under the present system. The committee will embody its findings in a report and present it to the officers of the telephone company within a few days.

It was said at the meeting that under the present system the actual cost to the landlord is from 7 to 11 cents a call. This is due, the landlords say, to the charge of $274 a year for a switchboard, $6 for each extension, calls charged by the company where "Busy" or "Don't answer" is reported by the central operator and the cost of from $25 to $30 a month for a switchboard operator. The owners charge the tenants five cents a call. An aggregate loss of $25,000 a year to landlords through these causes was a conservative figure, it was asserted.
